INTRODUCTION

In 1919 the writer, then fifteen, received information from relatives in response to inquiries concerning ancestral connections. The incompleteness of this knowledge stimulated further investigation, particularly as hitherto no research of an extended nature had been made. In the eighteen months following many notes were made, chiefly from traditions and family records and from printed sources available during that time. This material was arranged and compiled as The Ancestry and Kindred of Herbert Francis Smith in a typewritten manuscript, and copies were filed in the New York Public Library at New York city, and in the Long Island Historical Society at Brooklyn, New York.

It has been our intention to rewrite and publish a corrected collection of genealogies, delayed until the present for two reasons: 1) the desire to revise as thoroughly as possible and 2) the expense involved in preparing a more competent compilation. It is a genealogical truism that no family history is ever completed, and while we wish that more time had been at our disposal to make the present edition more correct, it is urgently necessary to make the information available. In its present form an opportunity will be provided for those who have additional information, to develop the genealogies further.

The families from which the writer descends have been arranged alphabetically with the exception that the family whose name he bears has been placed first. A departure has been made from the usual methods of compiling a family history wherein the genealogy begins with the first known ancestor and traces down all of his known descendants to the approximate present; instead, beginning with the writer, preceding ancestors are taken in succession back to the last known forefather.

It is admitted that this unorthodox method of presentation is susceptible to criticism, from the standpoint that it is egocentric if for no other reason. For this it is not necessary to apologize; the present compilation is the result of the author's intent to write the history of his own forebears, and the present arrangement has been found by experience to be more useful for this purpose than any other. The limitations imposed by the conventional pattern will be apparent: 1) it requires that one begin with the first ancestor known at the time of writing; if information is found subsequently relating to the latter's antecedents, incorporating the new facts into the original pattern requires extensive editing: 2) the inflexibility of numerical systems devised to enumerate the descendants of succeeding generations makes difficult the addition of any considerable number of previously unrecorded descendants: 3) other interpolations of new information can be made clumsily at best.

It is well known that when conducting research in an ancestry the necessary procedure is to trace the pedigree back generation by generation. On a pedigree chart, therefore, with reference to the person who is the subject of the pedigree, his parents are the second generation from him, his grandparents the third, and so on. Further, when each ancestor is allotted an index number serially on this chart, again beginning with the subject, it is possible to provide an absolute reference number for every possible ancestor ever discovered. This results in the following pattern, given to the fourth generation:

			4. FATHER 8
		3. FATHER 4	4. MOTHER 9
	2. FATHER 2		4. FATHER 10
		3. MOTHER 5	4. MOTHER 11
1. SUBJECT 1			4. FATHER 12
		3. FATHER 6	4. MOTHER 13
	2. MOTHER 3		4. FATHER 14
		3. MOTHER 7	4. MOTHER 15

The number placed before the name of the ancestor indicates the number of generations from the subject, including the latter; that placed after is the serial reference number assigned to that ancestor. In the present system the subject is numbered 1, his father 2, his mother 3, his paternal grandfather 4 and so on. It will be observed that since the number of ancestors is multiplied by two progressively in each generation, the reference number of an ancestor's father will be twice his or her own, and the mother's will be the next number following. In the event that double relationships exist, an ancestor may have more than one reference number; for example the writer is five times descended from Joseph Bayley of Huntington, New York (see page 293) in three different generations (10, 11 & 12) and as Joseph Bayley will appear on a pedigree chart five times, he will have five reference numbers: 778, 858, 1,930, 3,962 and 4,090. This is the meaning of the numbers associated with the name of each ancestor.

It is thus possible to extend any pedigree indefinitely as information is received or discovered, and to connect it directly to that previously written; this is one of the chief reasons why this system has been adopted. We are therefore of the opinion that in a work intended to be the forerunner of a more complete and correct edition, such a method of presentation will be more serviceable than any other.

We have given the descendants in collateral lines of our ancentors in many instances where they have not been readily available in other publications. Except in the line of the writer's descent, which follows the pattern described above, all descendants of any ancestor are immediately listed under that individual; and if there are a considerable number of descendants, they will be found under a separate sub-heading describing the genealogy of that branch of the family. In such sections the conventional methods of presentation are used: consecutive numbers are given to the children of the founder of the branch. These numbers have a plus mark in front of them if the descendants of the children are taken up next in order; and on the page where the connections of these children are recited, these same numbers are again associated with them as a cross-reference. The numeration of the grandchildren continues serially from the last number used, and the same procedure is followed for cross-connecting all further descendants. It must be borne in mind that while there have been listed as many descendants as seemed practicable, the descendants of related branches has not been considered the responsibility of the present compilation. We have been glad to incorporate such information when available, and will also correct and add thereto; but this is only the study of an ancestry, and not an encyclopaedia of genealogies.

Following the biography of each ancestor and after the listing of his descendants, there will be found references, anecdotes, critical discussion and other detail under the heading NOTES. The chief purpose of these NOTES is to give the reader an opportunity to assay the sources of the information.

The quotation of an authority in the absence of critical discussion does not mean that it is necessarily endorsed as correct; it indicates that in our experience we have found no occasion to doubt it, or that we prefer to believe it at the present time. Let it be said emphatically that our judgment in attempting to assess such proofs has been uninfluenced by considerations of "desirable" ancestry or a predilection for membership in the various societies where descent from some ancestor is a criterion, as far as it has been humanly possible. In fact, the general social and intellectual level of most of these ancestors has certainly been quite average. It is useful here to quote the words of Donald L. Jacobus in his chapter on Family Pride in Genealogy as Pastime and Profession:

> There is no need to worry if we find that an ancestor here or there was a shady character. Biologists tell us that if our parents and grandparents were reasonably decent people, so far as heredity is concerned we need not worry about the deviations from rectitude of more remote ancestors. Nature prefers the straight line of normality or mediocrity, and with new blood brought in by successive marriages in each generation, the tendency is always to lower the upcurve of genius or raise the downcurve of degenerative traits, and thus to bring both back closer to the norm.
> .....Stand on the busiest corner of New York City and detain the first 500 people who pass either on foot or in any variety of vehicle. Line them up and look them over. Say that they roughly correspond, person for person, with each of our first American ancestors, and we shall not be far wrong. There will be, most likely, a very few of exceptional ability, and a very few scoundrels; the great majority will be passably good citizens, mediocre and commonplace. If it be objected that many of those hypothetically drawn into our net on the metropolitan corner may be foreigners, the obvious reply is, that every single one of our first colonial ancestors was a foreigner.

In spite of a great deal of heroic rhetoric which has appeared in print about pioneers and tribulations, we have not been able to share the zeal of many of our contemporaries in pouncing upon favorable records which extract the last mete of reflected glory from our antecedents.

As in other fields of endeavor, proof in genealogical research depends upon an evaluation of negative and positive probabilities; an act of judgment is performed which meets with acceptance, and a conclusion is expressed. It is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to do more. It may be that that there is rationally no negative possibility;but it will be remembered that in logic, premises are valid when the negative of the same premises are potentially equally valid. No doubt most genealogists will recall cases where connections seemed unqualifiedly proved, to discover later some small but significant fact which overthrew the relationship. An example will give point to this. George Baldwin (pages 210 and those following) undoubtedly would have been considered the son of George and Abigail (?Sweet) Baldwin, interpreting the evidence offered in the settlement of the estate of the senior George Baldwin and also from various entries in Town Records. This is still true in spite of the fact that George Baldwin senior obtained a divorce from Abigail on the ground of adultery with Enim Benham. It required two obscure references in the Huntington, New York Court Records(unpublished) to show that the ancestry of the junior George Baldwin must forever remain in doubt, so far as the determination of his paternity is concerned. Had these records been destroyed, no doubt this ancestry would have been considered as established. This may be considered an exception, but we have no means of knowing how many other peccadillos existed to invalidate pedigrees long accepted as impregnable. The technical journals in the field are filled with criticisms and re-interpretations of information which had previously passed examination. The number of errors found during our own research have been appallingly great; and we have had ourselves to revise drastically and to challenge many connections which often have had endorsement as reliable.

What then, can one believe? It is patently impossible to require affidavits from nurses and doctors present at the delivery of a child in order to prove that the latter was truly issue of the mother claimed; and for the mother to have to testify on oath that she had been faithful to her husband would cause a social explosion. Likewise one cannot recall the witnesses of events in ages gone, the relatives who knew the facts, the lost family records written at first hand.The most conservative genealogists must content themselves with references to the original archives available, trusting that these are correct and that they can interpret them properly. It is for this reason that genealogical information relating to the last three generations is to be had in reasonably accurate condition; but beyond these, the probable correctness decreases as the time interval increases between ourselves & the older generations.

This then, is an essay in probabilities. Those probabilities whose chances of being wrong are exceedingly small, as we see them, are our basic facts. From these we come to considerations which are without much question true, and which only the most captious would care to challenge. There is frequently an illy-defined border line between facts and these considerations; the weight of the evidence and the general consensus of opinion determine such distinctions. We have represented such considerations as true in our opinion, and assume the responsibility for whatever constructions may be placed as a consequence. Beyond these lie the probabilities as ordinarily described, and the possibilities. A great many genealogists avoid discussing such probable or possible connections; in fact one researcher informed the writer irascibly that the word "probable" was to him the most hated and abused word in the whole genealogical repertory; hypotheses and theories had no place in a factual discussion and were anathema.

To us there seem to be certain serious limitations in such a viewpoint. We are of the opinion that if these probabilities and possibilities are excluded, the honest reader is deprived of a certain amount of perspective, a "grasp" of the situation, so to say; valuable clues may be overlooked, not to mention that the disproof of these contingent observations may be evoked. To omit these unproved but possibly applicable connections would be thoroughly unintelligent and unfair; to charge that unjustified use or misquotation will be made by the dishonest does not justify suppressing properly qualified statements.

The reader, no doubt, has had considerable experience with the bibliography of record sources mentioned throughout. For those not so experienced, we again refer to Mr. Jacobus' book Genealogy as Pastime and Profession, pp. 67 to 85. His discussion of source material will be read to advantage by all, and the masterly analysis of the kinds of information available should be carefully noted. We know well enough after bitter experience, that even authorized and allegedly verified published original records can be very wrong. It is regrettably necessary and useful to refer to several specific instances, as it may not be readily appreciated why some of these errors arise.

Mr. William S. Pelletreau, withal as honest a genealogist as Long Island has ever had, and certainly one of the most industrious, was the victim of his own haste and a peculiar penmanship. As a consequence the printer rather often misunderstood his handwriting, and the proof-reading was not thorough. The result can be imagined; there were sufficient errors in the printed abstracts of New York wills to require two volumes of corrections.

In The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, volume 44, at page 387 is given the marriage of Joshua Wicks with Experience Hubbs as recorded on the registers of the First Presbyterian church at Smithtown, New York, 18 July, 1802. In 1921 the writer had been told by the late Mrs. Josiah P. Smith of Islip, confirmed by her brother Perry S. Wicks of Bayshore, New York, that Joshua Wicks married Experience Haff; after rechecking with members of the family, the latter still insisted that her name was Haff. Nevertheless the writer, supposing that the statement in The Record had been compared and checked, and therefore authoritative, searched for six years to establish the connection of Joshua Wicks' wife with the Hubbs family. This supposed connection was apparently all the more plausible as coincidentally an aunt of Experience Haff had married a James Hubbs. Finally, after sufficient details of the Hubbs family had been found which rendered any such Hubbs connection almost a physical impossibility, the writer wrote to the First Presbyterian church at Smithtown. A letter from Edmund W. Abbey of Smithtown Branch dated 17 September, 1931 stated that Joshua Wicks had married Experience Huff, and that the "writing is very plain" (on the church registers). As Huff is known to have been a variant of Haff the problem was settled, but not until after an unconscionable waste of time.

Nor is the situation always a happy one when town records are edited and printed. The temptation to add supplemental information is quite understandable, and the motives of the editor thoroughly laudable; but few persons are sufficiently experienced in all the connections of the hundreds of families to venture such addenda. Frequently the results are severely criticized. The town records of Jamaica, New York, for example, as printed and issued under the auspices of the Long Island Historical Society, will perpetuate the fiction that John Okey (Auke) and John "Oakley" were the same for a long time to come. We challenge peremptorily the production of any proof that such a John Oakley ever existed.

Likewise, detailed genealogical identification of individuals in the indexes of such publications is hazardous; and the genealogical identification of the connections of pioneers must be carefully rechecked (see ARMITAGE, p. 121). In the Huntington Town Records Charles R. Street was hopelessly confused by the two Jonas Woods recurring in these old evidences.

Benjamin F. Thompson, usually considered the senior Historian of Long Island, suffered from the limitations of his then available source materials, an academic interest in family history and the probable impositions of a pedigree maker. For example, his list of the "earliest" settlers of the patentship of Islip, New York in the second decade of the eighteenth century includes names which first have appeared on tax lists over sixty years after the settlement. His recital of the now discredited paternal connections of Nathaniel Brewster are detailed elsewhere (see BREWSTER and MUNCY).

There are extenuating circumstances, however. Mrs. Mary Powell Bunker's publication of her Long Island Genealogies took many of her later years, and was proof-read at a time when the aged author was becoming blind. In order to save expenses she endeavored to do her own proof-reading, with a result that was no credit to Joel Munsell, her publisher. For all of its errors, Mrs. Bunker's compilation is an honest piece of work.

There remains a great and admittedly formidable task to gather, compile and correct Long Island records. Despite current impressions that Long Island is relatively defective in original source material, the fact is that no other section of the United States in our opinion (and we are aware of the claims made for Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut) has organized its vital statistics, wills, deeds and town records in so available a manner to the general public. The researcher who is willing to apply a reasonable amount of effort to locate the depositaries of information, will often have his or her questions answered, if answer there be.

There is a real and somewhat peculiar difficulty which arises in the compilation of Long Island family records. Long Island was insulated from the mainland by the Sound very effectively for two hundred years, and as a consequence produced relatively few families of prominence. Timothy Dwight, President of Yale College, on a trip to Long Island in 1804, could write:

> The insular situation of these three counties (that is, Kings, Queens and Suffolk) has a very perceptible influence upon the inhabitants as a body. Their own intellectual concerns must always exist on a small scale. Their views, affections and pursuits, must of course, be always limited. Few objects can be presented to them, and few events can occur of sufficient magnitude to expand thought, or of sufficient importance to awaken energy. Almost all their concerns are confined to the house or to the neighborhood; and the neighborhood rarely extends beyond the confines of a small hamlet.....The tenor of life, therefore, will be uniform, undisturbed on the one hand, and tame on the other. What the mind might have been cannot be known, because it has never been stimulated to any attempts for the expansion of its views, or the exertion of its powers.
> The inhabitants of this Island are destitute of other advantages, which contribute not a little to diffuse information and awaken energy. There is very little travelling here, besides their own. The attention excited, the curiosity awakened, and the animation produced by the frequent arrival of strangers, are here in great measure unknown. At the same time, comparatively few persons of > talents and information reside here. There is nothing sufficiently inviting in the circumstances of the Island itself, to allure persons of this character hither from the continent.... The advantages derived from the conversation and example of persons distinguished for superiority of character, are therefore enjoyed in a very imperfect degree; and that luminous spirit, and those improvements in the state of society, which they everywhere shed upon the circle around them, are very imperfectly realized. Such it would seem, must through an indefinite period, be the situation of Long Island.

> (Quoted by Ettie C. Hedges in Two Travellers on Long Island).

We shall leave the more sophisticated of Dr. Dwight's remarks for others to answer; but his main point applied until the advent of rapid transportation, radio, telephone & telegraph and the modern newspaper. There were relatively few families whose attainments were such that they were of frequent or of detailed record. The result is that many unknown connections, gaps and fragmentary details persist to puzzle and confound the investigator. The small truck farmer whose civic interests were incidental is never found in in the town records; at the time of the Revolution he would not file his deeds, for fear of confiscation; he endeavored to avoid probate taxes on his small estate by deeds of gift before his death. As he was frequently illiterate, he was suspicious of all instruments which required his X mark;and he was as distrustful of his own relatives as he was of strangers.

This provincialism is dying out on Long Island; but in its place has come the patent-leather hardness derived from close proximity to the expanding city at its west end. The writer comes much too late to know the older generations of his family who were living when Dr. Dwight made his observations; he knew well a great-grandmother who was born in 1838. The most lasting impression that he has of these relatives is that they were kindly, hospitable and quiet.This thoughtfulness and patient attitude may have been the results of their age and experience, but these attributes are no longer so evident in the modern Long Island. We have instead the necessity of "keeping up with the Jones", evidenced by the reproduction of ostentatious pedigree books, the display of unauthorized coats-of-arms and somewhat desperate claims of relationships to fourth cousins who were second-rate governors and the like. Lest we be accused of painting an unduly caustic picture, we admit at once that there are are hundreds of friendly, sincere people on Long Island. Even so, this does not invalidate any of our assertions.

Lastly, it is not pretended that the following is an authoritative last word, or indeed, an exceptionally accurate work. The writer has transcribed, collated, stencilled and mimeographed all of his own work, and doubtless there will be detected many errors of transcription and judgment. It should be stated, however, that in the last twenty years and more an attempt has been made to examine the original sources and the printed bibliography as thoroughly as our limitations would allow. We have examined all genealogies available, local histories and original manuscripts. It should go almost without saying that we thank those many friends who out of the goodness of their hearts have given us so much encouragement and help. We have endeavored to refer to them throughout this work in the appropriate places where their information has been used. Our warmest appreciation is expressed to them, and the reader will requite them and this writer as well, by carrying on where we perforce must leave off.

1. HERBERT FURMAN SEVERSMITH 1

He was born at the residence of his father, on Healy Avenue near Cornaga Avenue, Far Rockaway, New York city, New York, 31 May, 1904; and named Herbert Francis Smith. He was baptised in St. John's Episcopal church at that place by the Reverend Henry Mesier, 8 December, 1905, godparents being Francis A. Lowe and Edra Louise Weeks.

He received the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts from the George Washington University of Washington, D. C., respectively on 18 October, 1935 & 22 February, 1938. By proceedings in equity he changed his name, 26 May, 1936, to Herbert Furman Seversmith; this restored the original surname of the family. He is not married.

He is a member of historical societies and of Sigma Xi, and is the compiler of the present work.

NOTES

The birth certificate under the name of Herbert F. Smith, is filed as No. 1592 from Queens Borough, New York city Health Department, Births, 1904. The record of baptism was communicated to the writer by the Reverend F. Urbano, rector of St. John's in 1930. The name was changed by order of Justice Luhring of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and recorded under petitions in equity.

Herbert Furman Seversmith is the son of

2. HERBERT KEMP SMITH 2
m. MARION FRANCES WEEKS daughter of Francis Smith Weeks and Lavinia Rebecca Wicks

He was born at the residence of his father, on Broadway, Helena, Montana territory, 13 January, 1871, and baptised by Bishop Tuttle of the Episcopal diocese shortly thereafter.

In or about 1873 the family removed to San Francisco, California, where he later attended the Spring Valley Grammar school. In 1885 he had removed to Patchogue, New York, where he was apprenticed to William Sanford Weeks, a jeweler of Babylon, New York. After his marriage in 1900 he established a jewelry business in Far Rockaway, New York; in 1914 he was associated with the White Brothers Company of New Orleans, Louisiana, manufacturing jewelers. At the present time(1939) he is a jeweler of Inglewood, California.

Mr. Smith has several patents in his name, including one of the earliest for a coin-counting machine, as well as for jewelry. He is a 32° Mason and Shriner, Elk and member of Kiwani; and has been bandmaster for several fraternal bands. He is a member of the Church of the Holy Faith of Inglewood (Episcopalian).

Herbert Kemp Smith married 1, at the residence of the bride, Grove Place, Babylon, New York, and by the Reverend Dr. Frederick Stiehler of the Methodist Episcopal church of Babylon, 19 June, 1900 to Marion Frances Weeks. They were divorced at Gretna, Louisiana, 31 March, 1921. He married 2, at New Orleans, Louisiana, 24 April, 1921 to Merle Mae, widow of Paul Waterman Sturm and daughter of William Butler & Mollie Emma (Morse) Powe, of New Orleans, Louisiana and San Antonio, Texas.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Herbert Francis, otherwise Herbert Furman Severs mith. See page 11.

NOTES

Information supplied by Herbert K. Smith. An announcement of the first marriage appeared in the Brooklyn (New York) Daily Eagle of 20 June, 1900; other published material includes commercial advertisements in New Orleans newspapers, notably in the New Orleans Item for 22 December, 1918 and in December of 1921; an announcement of his election as bandmaster of the Jerusalem Temple Shrine Band of that place in March, 1919; and a "life story" appeared in the Inglewood Daily Californian for 1 December, 1928.

Herbert Kemp Smith is the son of

3. JACOB WARD SMITH 4
m. JEANNETTE NORTON FURMAN daughter of John Furman and Freelove Hulse

He was born at the residence of his father, stated to have been at that time on the corner of Fulton & William streets, New York city, New York, and in the fall of 1830. This may have been a temporary address, as that in the Directory is different from the foregoing. No record of baptism is found.

He was apprenticed to his step-father, Andrew Lang jr., who was a butcher and had a stall in the Catharine street market in New York city. Because of disagreements with the latter, as well as a dislike for the trade and its surroundings, he gave it up and endeavored to promote several ventures of his own. Before 1861 he had removed to the western frontier of the United States, and appears as a trapper, fur-trader and gambler in Montana and Utah. He was a resident of Helena, Montana from its earliest and wildest days; and maintained a tannery on the corner of Breckenridge and Ewing streets. His residence was on Broadway.

It is stated that during this time he served in the War Between the States, and was a paymaster in the Federal Lines from the Territory of Utah. In 1864 he was an assemblyman from Storey county in the first legislature convened in the state of Nevada.

As Jake Smith he was listed in the Washburn Expedition to the Headquarters of the Yellowstone and Firehole rivers in 1870; this was the first unofficial exploratory expedition into the present Yellowstone Park. His motive for joining this expedition, however, was neither exploratory nor geographic; he wished to prospect the region for minerals. His lack of interest in the objectives of the party, utter disregard for danger, ability to sleep soundly in the light of the camp fire and unusual ability at poker did not endear him to the leaders of the expedition.

Shortly thereafter he developed his interests in copper mining, and after several successful ventures in the market he established a brokerage office in San Francisco, California. The city directories of the latter place show that in 1874-5 he resided at the Cosmopolitan hotel and maintained an office at 6 Leidesdorff street. In 1876-7 he had removed to 315 Hyde street, and in the next two years had expanded his business, which occupied 419-421 California street. His investments were mostly in silver, and when the speculative market collapsed in 1881 he lost heavily.

In the acute depression which followed he was unable to recoup his losses. He maintained himself as a broker, however, at various addresses in San Francisco until his death by apoplexy on 23 January, 1897 at 1654 Market street. His will was proved 23 March, 1897.

Jacob Ward Smith married 1, at San Francisco, California, 26 October, 1861 to Jeannette Norton Furman. They were divorced in 1891 at Alameda, California, and in the same year he married 2, ~~Mary~~ Ora B. Caldwell, who survived him. ~~In 1898 she is listed in the San Francisco city directories as a dressmaker at 404 Turk street.~~ Her further connections are unknown.

NOTES

Information concerning Jacob Ward Smith's early life, before he removed to San Francisco, was obtained from Eugene M. Sutton, a nephew. Other facts, except those derived from printed records were obtained from Herbert K. Smith. His record as an assemblyman was confirmed from the records of the Nevada legislature, as given by a communication from the secretary to the Governor of Nevada. In The Discovery of Yellowstone Park, 1870, by Nathaniel Pitt Langford, numerous references are made to Jacob Ward Smith, whom he calls Jake Smith.

According to Langford, Smith was constitutionally unfitted to be a member of such a party of exploration; he was too inconsequent and easy-going to command Langford's confidence. The latter was annoyed particularly because Smith insisted on sleeping in the full light of the camp fire when appointed to sentry duty, a responsibility he avoided as much as possible. Smith's idea seems to have been that the forces mustered by the party were so small that an Indian raid would have been a successful scalping party in any case, sentry or no sentry; and as he was becoming bald at the time, his scalp could not be worth much. Walter Trumbull drew a picture of Jake ~~while~~ dozing with his head in the crotch of a saddle, and a reproduction of the half-tone in Langford's publication faces page 16. Smith

Smith furthered this conviction by asserting that no member of the party except one was sufficiently skilled in the use of a revolver to hit an Indian at even close range; and offered to put the matter to a test by setting up his hat at a distance of twenty yards for members of the party to shoot at, without rest, at twenty-five cents a shot. The result was that Smith added to his exchequer without damage to the hat, and finally Langford had to riddle it from hiding.

We quote an anecdote as related by Langford:

> .....there has been a lively game of cards played near my left side, which Hedges, who has just closed his diary, says is a game of poker. I doubt if Deacon Hedges is sufficiently posted in the game to know to a certainty that poker is the game which is being played; but putting what Hedges tells me with what I see and hear, I find that these infatuated players have put a valuation of five (5) cents per bean, on beans that did not cost more than $1 a quart in Helena, and Jake Smith exhibits a marvelous lack of veneration for his kinswoman, by referring to each bean, as he places it before him upon the table, as his "aunt," or more flippantly, his "Auntie." Walter Trumbull has been styled the "Banker," and he says that at the commencement of the game he sold forty of these beans to each of the players, himself included (200 in all), at five (5) cents each, and that he has already redeemed the entire 200 at that rate; and now Jake Smith has a half-pint cup nearly full of beans, and is demanding of Trumbull that he redeem them also; that is, pay five (5) cents per bean for the contents of the cup. Reflecting upon their disagreement I recall that about an hour ago Jake, with an apologetic "Excuse me!" disturbed me while I was writing and untied the bean sack on which I am now sitting, and took from it a double handful of beans....

This trip ended 27 September, 1870 and upon the return of the party Smith was the only one who still possessed a decent suit of clothes.

The Directories of San Francisco give his residence as the Cosmopolitan Hotel from 1874 to 1876; he was then successively at 315 Hyde street in 1876-7; not of record in 1877-8; at the Abbotsford House, 1879-80; at 1532 Polk street, 1881-2; not of record from 1881 to 1883; at 404 Post street, 1884, 407 Post street, 1885 to 1889; not of record, 1890-2. In one of these years he went to England in an endeavor to finance certain of his projects, and took his son Herbert with him. Upon his return the directory lists him at 126 Ellis street in 1893, 16 Ellis street in 1894 and not recorded in 1895. He resided at 16 Oak street in 1896, and in 1897 was living at 1654 Market street, where he died.

The obituary notice appears in the San Francisco Call for 24 January, 1897, and states that he died on the day before. In this his age is erroneously given as 56, whereas he was 66. A news item in the same paper, 24 March, 1897 states:

> The will of Jacob Ward Smith was admitted to probate yesterday in Department 9 of the Superior Court.
>
> The deceased was at one time a well-known and wealthy resident of the Territory and State of Nevada, prior even to its territorial organization. He was a noted member of the first State Legislature of Nevada. He was an active and enterprising man, but in late years suffered from reverses of fortune, and became, as he described himself, "A subdued millionaire," although he had bright hopes of certain ventures which he bequeathed to his widow and second wife, Mary B. Caldwell Smith.
>
> Smith was first married to Miss Nettie Kemp (sic) of New York by whom he had three children (sic) now full grown and resident in the east. By his second wife he had one child, Percival Ward Smith, now about five years old.....

Jacob Ward Smith was the son of

4. JACOB SMITH .8
m. HENRIETTA WARD daughter of Samuel Ward and Lydia Smith

He was born about 1806, and probably at New York city, New York; perhaps at 29 Cherry street. No baptismal record has been found.

In 1827 he established a bakery in a residence at 115 Lombardy street in New York city, and may have also conducted an inn, as family record calls him an inn-keeper. He was at this address until 1830, when he removed to 142 Reade st. & in 1832/3 was of 144½ Rivington street.

He contracted cholera in July or August of 1832 from an epidemic then prevalent, and died shortly afterward. He left no will and apparently administration papers were not filed.

Jacob Smith married in 1826 to Henrietta Ward. After his decease she married 2, Andrew Lang junior of New York city, son of Andrew and Mary (Rees) Lang, in whose family the issue of Jacob Smith were reared.

NOTES

Eugene M. Sutton stated to the writer in 1921 that Jacob Smith who married Henrietta Ward was an inn-keeper on the Boston Post road in New York city, and that he died of cholera in 1832. This was confirmed by his sister, Mrs. Harriet Elizabeth (Sutton) Furman of Patchogue, New York, whose bible records supplied the information concerning the family of Andrew Pell Sutton and his wife Lydia Maria Smith.

The descendants of Ezra Valentine Smith were outlined by Mrs. Lillian Elizabeth (Smith) van Alst, George Washington Smith and Robert Ezra Smith. Family records state further that the mother of Jacob Smith was surnamed Valentine, and that his parents died when he was a young child; thus the connections were imperfectly remembered by the present generation. Jacob Smith was brought up by two aunts, and there was an Ezra Valentine who was presumably related, although in what degree was no longer known. Ezra Valentine Smith was given this man's name.

In our search for the ancestry of Jacob Smith we have examined every will, administration, deed, guardianship paper or other legal instrument filed in Halls of Record in New York city and in the offices of the County Clerks of adjacent counties through 1865, indexed under Smith. We have also searched every church register available to us.

The will of Joseph Smith junior of New York city, innkeeper, was dated 13 December, 1796, and proved at New York city, 7 December, 1797. Therein he mentions his wife Nancy and his only child Jacob; and through the kind assistance of Franklyn E. Edwards of New York city it was found that the widow Nancy appears of record in the New York Journal for 4 March, 1797 when she was published as having just married Peter Voorhees. This family removed to Hoboken in New Jersey. On 17 March, 1809 Peter Voorhees signed an indenture filed in Liber 82 of Deeds in the Hall of Records in New York city wherein he conveyed land facing Harrison street in that city to Jacob Smith for $500. This shows that Jacob Smith of this connection was born about 1788, and in 1809 was resident in New York city. We have not been able to trace this Jacob Smith further with any conclusiveness.

It will be observed that the circumstances recited are suggestive and, excepting the ubiquity of the surname, such evidence would be regarded as definite proof of a connection in many instances. However the maiden name of Mrs. Nancy (Smith) Voorhees has not been found, and no Ezra Valentine was found among these associations. The discrepancy in occupations (Jacob Smith of the present line was a baker) apparent when directory record was compared to family record, was explained by the assumption that he was both baker and innkeeper. However the other Jacob Smith, son of Joseph Smith the innkeeper, was a ferry-master on the Hudson river; therefore serious objection arises when the occupations of the Jacob Smiths in question are considered, and it seems very definite that these are two individuals.*

*We credited this as an identity for several years, and thus as part of the present ancestry; in consequence the ancestry of Joseph Smith junior was compiled. While we are now certain that these connections are unrelated to us, we summarize the information for the interested genealogist as it has been of scant reference.

Joseph Smith junior was born at Harlem, New York about 1755, son of Joseph Smith by Maria Williams, daughter of Frederick Willians and Maria Waldron. This Joseph Smith senior was baptised in the Reformed Dutch ch. in New York city 24 June, 1716, son of Johannes Smith and Barentje Helling; the sponsors were Hendrick Bres (see BRASS) and Margareta Smith. He married Maria Williams in the same church 3 October, 1747. Their daughter Maria was baptised also in this church 10 July, 1748, the sponsors having been Pieter Geraux, Sarah de Forest, wife of Hendrick van der Water. There may have been other children.

Johannes Smith, father of Joseph Smith, was baptised in the said Dutch church 29 March, 1696 as son of Joseph Smith by his wife Margrietje Jans widow of Jacobùs van der Schueren. The sponsors were Benjamin Norwood, undoubtedly a relative, and Metje Theunis Cray, the child's maternal grandmother. He married in the Reformed Dutch church in New York city 8 January, 1716 to Barentje Helling, daughter of Samuel Helling of Hackensack New Jersey, by Maria Cornelis, daughter of Cornelis Matthÿszen and Barentje Dircks. Johannes Smith died in New York city shortly before 1 November, 1737, the date of his burial; and it was probably his wife who was buried 17 December, 1754. The children were Joseph, previously referred to; Marytje, baptised 3 August, 1720, died young; Marytje, baptised 14 May, 1722; Samuel, baptised 17 July, 1724; Johannes, baptised 7 August, 1726, married at Hackensack, 18 May, 1750 Antje Woertendyck and removed to Tappan, New York; and Thomas, baptised 23 August, 1728, died 7 November, 1758.

Joseph Smith, father of Johannes Smith, was born about 1668 in Paget tribe, Bermuda, evidently son of John Smith of that tribe, who died about February, 1670. On 14 February, 1670 the widow Elizabeth was granted administration. Joseph Smith removed to New York city before 1695, as he was recorded in the Reformed Dutch church there 12 July, 1695, as marrying Margrietje Jans, widow of Jacobùs van der Schueren or Schùùr; she had married her first husband 25 July, 1693. Margrietje was the daughter of Jan Korszen by his wife Metje Theunis, daughter of Theunis Gerritszen Cray by Trÿntje van Campen. This Joseph Smith was still living in 1718. Their children were Johannes, previously referred to; Joseph, baptised 1

May, 1698; Benjamin, baptised 28 April, 1700; Mattheus, baptised 15 February, 1702; Margaret, baptised 18 June, 1704; Jacobus, baptised 1 September, 1706; Elizabeth, baptised 3 February, 1712, stated to have married William Fisjer or Fisher; Johanna, baptised 2 May, 1714, twin with Marytje, baptised the same day.

John Smith, father of Joseph Smith, was born in Bermuda about 1641, son of William Smith of Paget tribe by an unknown wife. He with William Watkins were tenants on the farm of George Bascombe and were tobacco growers. Elizabeth, wife of John Smith, was a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Stowe of Bermuda and granddaughter of Captain John Stowe, who with his brother Nathaniel Stowe were prominent in the earliest affairs of the colony. The sister of Elizabeth (Stowe) Smith was Susanna, the wife of Richard Norwood; their son Benjamin Norwood appears as a contemporary of Joseph Smith in New York city, married there to Cornelia van Cleef and was sponsor to the baptism of Joseph Smith's eldest child. Other than Joseph, John and Elizabeth (Stowe) Smith had at least Benjamin, who had a wife Frances and a son Joseph, who settled early in Carolina.

William Smith, father of John Smith, is of little record in Bermuda. He and his wife were Quakers and suffered on that account. His ancestry is not proved, but there is reason to believe that he was son of William Smith who with wife Ann were settlers in Paget tribe, Bermuda, shortly before 1622. This William left his wife and three children bereft when in 1626 he sailed away under interdict, never to be heard from again. The consequence of his leaving was an indictment for leaving the islands without legal permission, punishment for which was death. He fled undoubtedly because of the stringent tobacco laws, and endeavors of the Company which had sent them there to mulct the settlers of everything it could. In the Assizes for July, 1626 the children Robert and Samuel are mentioned, and a third child was to be provided for. This may well have been William Smith, the Quaker mentioned above.

Margrietje Jans, widow of Jacobus van der Schueren and wife of Joseph Smith of Bermuda and New York, son of John and Elizabeth (Stowe) Smith, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New York 16 July, 1674. Her father, Jan Korszen, was born about 1645 in Recife (Pernambuco), Brazil, as the son of Kors Janszen and his first wife Margrietje Lambrechts. Kors Janszen was a soldier from the northern part of the Netherlands, and appears in Recife as early as 1641; he died there between 1655 and 1669. His first wife died shortly after marriage, and he married 2, Geertje Theunis, widow of Theunis van den Bergh; she removed about 1670 to New York city with her step-son Jan Korszen. In the Reformed Dutch church in the latter place she married 1 April, 1671 to Hans Carelszen, who died before 20 May, 1685; on this date she married Francisco d'Anthony as her fourth husband, widower of Leonora Haldrinck. This Jan Korszen is the founder of the Coursen family of New Jersey, which was the subject of a monograph entitled The Coursens of Sussex County, New Jersey, by Francis Eben Woodruff, reprinted from an earlier work by the same author entitled The Woodruffs of New Jersey, noted under WOODRUFF. Unfortunately Mr. Woodruff was in error in his determination of the first ancestor of of the family (for specific references to the church records of Recife, see HAFF).

Metje Theunis Cray, wife of Jan Korszen, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New Amsterdam (New York), 12 June, 1650. Her father, Theunis, son of Gerrit Cray, had come from Venlo in the Netherlands, and was a holder of small political jobs in New Amsterdam, an inn-keeper and tapster; he died about 1688. Cray is discussed in New Amsterdam and its People by John H. Innes, and at great length in the court records published as Records of New Amsterdam, edited by Berthold Fernow. His wife Trÿntje van Campen was appointed by the Dutch to serve meals for their prisoners.

Barentje Helling, wife of Johannes Smith (son of Joseph Smith and Margrietje Jans), was baptised in the Dutch church at Hackensack, New Jersey, 15 July, 1694. Her father, Samuel Hendrickszen Helling, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New Amsterdam or New York, 8 February, 1665, son of Hendrick Theuniszen Helling(h) and his first wife Margrietje Samuels. Hendrick Theuniszen Helling had come to New Amsterdam in De Bever, which arrived 25 April, 1659; he resided there until about 1668, when he removed to Hackensack. His wife Margrietje died there in October, 1698, and he married 2, 15 June, 1700, Stÿntje, widow of Peter Praa van Zandt. He died about 1706.

Maria Cornelis, wife of Samuel Hendrickszen Helling, was born say 1671 at Harlem, New York, daughter of Cornelis Matthÿszen by Barentje Dircks from Meppel in the Netherlands. Cornelis Matthÿszen (Nels Mattysen) was born about 1630 at Stockholm, Sweden and came to New Amsterdam before 1658. He was overseer of Harlem 12 June, 1666; removed about 1682 to Hackensack, where he died shortly afterwards. He married Barentje 26 February, 1661. For further record of him refer to Scandinavian Immigrants in New York, by John O. Evjen.

Maria Williams, wife of Joseph Smith (son of Johannes Smith and Barentje Helling) was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New York, 25 May, 1718, and died probably before 1797 at Harlem, New York. Her father, Frederick Williams, was baptised in the same church, 7 March, 1688, son of Jan Willemszen (Williams) and Lÿsbetje Frederiks, daughter of Frederik Arentszen Blom, otherwise "de Drayer", by his wife Margrietje Pieters from Breda. Frederick Williams lived on Queen street in New York city; made his will 18 September, 1740, probated 14 July, 1768. It was filed in Liber 26 of Wills at New York city, page 323. He married in the Reformed Dutch church in New York city, 16 October, 1706 to Maria Waldron, daughter of Daniel Waldron by his wife Sarah Rutgers, daughter of Rutger Willemszen van Langendyck by his wife Gysbertje Maurits. Jan Willemszen was born in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, about 1670; was a soldier; married as the widower of Sara Pollert to Lÿsbetje Frederiks in the Dutch church in New York city, 13 December, 1685. They resided on Pearl street in New York in 1686. The New York Public Library has a very incorrect manuscript on this Williams family, one of the earlier compilations of the late James Riker.

Jacob Smith of the present connection probably rented part of the house at 115 Lombardy street in New York city. In 1826 James Coffee, a mariner, was at this address and in the two years prior to that a Joanna Smith, widow, resided at the location. Diligent attempts to associate this Joanna Smith with the present Jacob Smith were to no avail. As a number of other persons had this address, it is probable that it was an inn, and that Jacob Smith maintained a bakery in the building.

In 1850 an Ezra Smith is listed in the New York city census, with a wife Mary A. Smith and a Smith Valentine in his family. This seemed strongly suggestive, but when descendants of Ezra Valentine Smith were confronted with these names, negative responses were elicited. Other suggestive references were found in a bible record owned by the Long Island Historical Society, which stated that a John Smith senior died 29 January, 1823, aged 42. He married 17

Lysbetje Frederiks, wife of Jan Willemszen, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New Amsterdam, 17 August, 1659; she married 2, Jan de la Montagne of Harlem, New York. Her father, Frederik, son of Arent Blom, had come from Swartensluis in the Netherlands; he married Margrietje Pieters in the said church 20 June, 1656.

Maria Waldron, wife of Frederick Williams, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New York, 25 July, 1686. Her father, Daniel Waldron, was born about 1650 at Haarlem in the Netherlands; he removed to New Amsterdam or New York, where he was a gunstock maker. He was the son of Joseph Waldron, born at Haarlem, the Netherlands, about 1610; the latter was a son of Johannes Waldron of Haarlem by Maria Goverts. This last is very evident from a footnote on these connections in the Revised History of Harlem, New York, by James Riker, in spite of allegations which made Joseph the son of a Resolved Waldron senior. Joseph Waldron married Aeltje Hendricks, daughter of Hendrick Koch, and who died before 1649; he married 2, Annetje Daniels in the Dutch church at Amsterdam, the Netherlands, 13 May, 1649. The latter was the mother of Daniel Waldron, and upon the death of her husband in New Netherlands in 1663, she married in the Reformed Dutch church in New York, 1 December, 1668, Harman Smeeman from Ditmarsen. After his death the widow married 3, in the same church, 15 April, 1682, Coenradt ten Eyck.

Sarah Rutgers, wife of Daniel Waldron, was of Esopus (Kingston), New York. She was born about 1654 and died at New York city, 7 January, 1738, the daughter of Rutger Willemszen van Langendyck of New York city and Kingston; his wife Gysbertje Maurits is incorrectly called Martyns in The Van Deursen Genealogy, which incidentally contains an incorrect Netherlands ancestry of the van Deursens. (See the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 65, p. 62).

Information from Mrs. Reid Mercer of the Flatts, Bermuda, and Le Froy's Memorials of the Bermudas, particularly vol. I, has been most useful. The records of the Reformed Dutch church of the city of New York have been published as the first three volumes of the Collections of the New York Genealogical and Biographical [illegible]

October, 1812 to Jane Woertendyck by whom he had John, born 4 September, 1813; Sophronia Woertendyke, born the same day; Frederick Woertendyck, born 4 November, 1817, died 16 May, 1856; Thomas Return, born 17 May, 1820, and Jacob Valentine, born 29 March, 1822. In a previous generation a Thomas Return Smith, very likely a brother of this John, had a wife Hannah who was a witness to the will of Jacob Waterbury, 5 January, 1798. The latter had a brother named Ezra Waterbury.

In 1822-3, Nancy, widow of John Smith was of 137 Lombardy street in New York, and was again recorded the following year. In a will dated 21 November, 1800, probated 9 December, 1800, John Durham of New York mentions among his children his daughter Nancy, wife of John Smith. It has not been established that this is the widow mentioned above. The ubiquity of the names in these Smith families makes research exceedingly difficult, and gives rise to apparent associations of names which cannot be taken as significant. The foregoing have been given as examples of such instances.

Nevertheless we have found very strong presumptive evidence of the parentage of Jacob Smith who married Henrietta Ward, provided family records are correct.

Ichabod Smith of Huntington, New York, made his will 10 March, 1800; it was proved 9 April, 1801 at Riverhead, New York. Therein he mentions his wife Phoebe and the children: Epenetus, Lemuel, Elizabeth (wife of Richard Oakley), Phoebe (wife of John Sammis), Peleg (then deceased), and Ebenezer. The executors of the will were Samuel Wood, Josiah Smith and Ezra Valentine. The discovery of the last mentioned individual stimulated an intensive investigation into the descendants of Ichabod Smith, and it was found that two of his sons had removed to New York city. These were Epenetus Smith and Lemuel Smith. Lemuel Smith had married at Huntington, New York, 9 March, 1799 to Sarah Valentine, daughter of Richard and Mary (Oakley) Valentine of Dicks Hills, Huntington, and sister of the Ezra Valentine who was an executor of the will of Ichabod Smith. Moreover Ezra Valentine had married Elizabeth Vail, daughter of Platt and Susannah (Thurston) Vail, and a niece of Phoebe Vail, wife of Ichabod Smith. It will be observed that a double relationship existed between the connections of Ezra Valentine and those of Lemuel Smith.

Of the descendants of Ichabod Smith, the connections of most have been accounted for, except in the family of Lemuel. Lemuel Smith disappears from directory record in 1815, and he probably died in an epidemic of yellow fever which visited New York city in that year. The baptisms of two of his daughters are recorded in the registers of the First Presbyterian church at New York city; and from the census of 1810 it is clearly evident that he had a male child in his family who was probably a son, as it is listed in the same manner as were his known daughters. We are convinced, after long consideration, that this child was Jacob Smith of the present connection.

Epenetus Smith, brother of Lemuel Smith, resided for many years at 157 Chatham square in New York city. This was on the Boston Post Road, and there was an inn or porter-house at the same address, run in the early years of the nineteenth century by a John I. Ward, who was there as late as 1812. This porter-house keeper may have been related to Henrietta Ward, wife of Jacob Smith, and if so, the circumstance may have given rise to the story that Jacob Smith was an inn-keeper on the Boston Post Road.

Ezra Valentine died at Huntington, New York 7 April, 1810; his wife Elizabeth had died 9 March before. Elizabeth Smith, wife of Richard Oakley and daughter of Ichabod and Phoebe (Vail) Smith, evidently provided for the only surviving child. We are of the opinion that she took care also of the orphaned children of Lemuel Smith, and perhaps the widow Sarah also lived with her sister-in-law if she survived. This would satisfy in part the family tradition that two aunts reared Jacob Smith; for if Phoebe (Smith)Sammis were the aunt, every requirement of family record would be satisfied.

To review: it is found that if the foregoing connections are correctly stated, we have 1) the mother of Jacob Smith was surnamed Valentine; 2) an Ezra Valentine was related; 3) there were just two daughters of Ichabod Smith who could have been aunts of Jacob Smith; 4) Lemuel Smith, at least, evidently died young, leaving very small children, including a son; 5) members of this family lived on the Boston Post Road. It is true, however, that we have not found legal evidence that Jacob Smith was the son of Lemuel Smith and Sarah Valentine. On the other hand, no other Ezra Valentine has been found after exhaustive search; the family records were given to the writer without any foreknowledge of these circumstances; and no negative evidence of any character has been discovered. To deny the validity of this connection is to assert that we have a number of astonishing coincidences, even when it is considered that the connection concerns a Smith family. The following chart will make these connections clear:

MOSES VAIL m. PHOEBE PLATT

PHOEBE VAIL m. ICHABOD SMITH — PLATT VAIL m. SUSANNA THURSTON

ELIZABETH SMITH m. RICHARD OAKLEY — PHOEBE SMITH m. JOHN SAMMIS — LEMUEL SMITH m. SARAH VALENTINE — ELIZABETH VAIL m. EZRA VALENTINE brother of SARAH VALENTINE, wife of LEMUEL SMITH

PHOEBE SMITH — MARY VALENTINE SMITH — JACOB SMITH m. HENRIETTA WARD

In view of the foregoing circumstances, therefore, we state this to be our considered opinion and present conviction that

Jacob Smith was the son of

5. LEMUEL SMITH 16
m. SARAH VALENTINE daughter of Richard Valentine and Mary Oakley

He was born about 1769 at South Huntington, New York, & baptised by the Reverend John Close in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 9 July, 1769.

He had removed to New York city, New York before 1799, and in 1801 was a shoemaker at 29 Cherry street. In 1812 he removed to Elizabeth street corner of Pump street, and where he was until 1815, the last time recorded. Probably he died of yellow fever during an epidemic which visited New York in 1815. No will has been found, and administration papers were not filed.

Lemuel Smith married in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, New York, and by the Reverend Abraham Schenck, 9 March, 1799 to Sarah Valentine.

Issue:

1. Phoebe, born at New York city, New York, 22 January, 1801, baptised in the First Presbyterian church at that place, 19 April, 1801. No further record.
2. Mary Valentine, born at New York city, New York, 22 January, 1804, baptised in the First Presbyterian church there, 3 June 1804. No further record.
3. Jacob (as we believe); married Henrietta Ward. See page 16.

NOTES

The baptismal and marriage record of Lemuel Smith appear on the registers of the First Presbyterian church of Huntington, New York, copies of which are on file in the Huntington Historical Society. There are two manuscript copies of the registers of baptisms and marriages of the First Presbyterian church of New York city, to which we have referred. One has been printed in The New York Historical Society Quarterly for July, 1918, vol. II, page 55; the other, which is a different register, is in possession of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society. Contemporary Directories of New York city were consulted for addresses of record.

Additional information is greatly desired, in order to establish or correct the connections already given.

Lemuel Smith was the son of

6. ICHABOD SMITH 32
m. PHOEBE VAIL daughter of Moses Vail and Phoebe Platt

He was born at South Huntington, New York, probably in 1730; and baptised in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, by the Reverend Ebenezer Prime, 31 May, 1730.

He owned property at South Huntington, now called Banfield's, and where he was a farmer. He, with his son Ichabod signed the Association lists in Huntington during the war of the American Revolution, 8 May, 1775; in this however he seems to have been motivated by expediency, for when the British encamped in Huntington he swore allegiance to George III, in 1778. After the war he presented claims amounting to seven pounds, twelve shillings to the new government for oats and salt hay confiscated by English troops for forage. In 1782 he was assessed at a valuation of one hundred & five pounds, or in the upper third of the assessment; and was then living at West Hills.

He died at South Huntington of pneumonia, 26 March, 1801, and was buried in the Smith cemetery there the next day. The gravestone inscription states his age to have been 71 years. The will of Ichabod Smith was dated 10 March, 1800, & proved at Riverhead, New York 9 April, 1801; it is recorded in Liber B, page 127 of Wills.

He married in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 2 April, 1754 to Phoebe Vail, also called Veal, who survived him eight months.

Issue:

1. Ichabod, born at Huntington about 1755. He was a resident of that place in 1775; further record uncertain. An Amelia Smith, daughter of Ichabod of Huntington, baptised there 7 January, 1798, was perhaps descended. He is probably not to be identified with a contemporary who was baptised in St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead, New York, 2 December, 1754, and who married in the same church, 29 January, 1779, Susanna Marvin.
2. Peleg, baptised in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 25 December, 1757, died before his father. He married Rachel, who died 18 September, 1829, aged 61, and who was buried in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. Issue:

i. Israel, born 1782, died 15 June, 1813; buried in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. Administration on his estate was granted to Richard Oakley, 28 July 1813, the widow Sarah renouncing. Issue:

A. Almira.

B. Cornelius.

ii. Amelia, died unmarried 9 June, 1790.

iii. Elizabeth, born in 1793, died 5 March, 1814. She is identified as the one who married 6 June, 1811 to Elkanah Rogers, born 29 April, 1790, son of William and Esther (Hawley) Rogers. Elkanah Rogers married 2, Julia Hawkins. Five children are credited to the first marriage, which is probably incorrect. Elizabeth may have been the mother of (ROGERS):

A. Elizabeth, who married three times, 1, Brush; 2, Bishop and 3, unknown.

3. Epenetus, born at Huntington, New York in 1759, died probably at that place, 9 September, 1839 and was buried in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. He was a tailor in New York city from 1801 to 1821, residing chiefly at 157 Chatham square. He married in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington and by the Rev. Abraham Schenck, 1 April, 1792 to Temperance Ketcham of Babylon, New York, daughter of Jesse and Temperance (Brush) Ketcham. Temperance (Ketcham) Smith died at South Huntington, 15 April, 1839. Issue:

i. Charles W., born probably at New York city in 1796, died 20 December, 1849, and buried in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. His wife Harriet died 21 August, 1833, aged 35 years, 6 months and 6 days; she is buried beside him. Issue not traced.

ii. Clarissa, born at New York city, 13 February, 1799; recorded as baptised in the First Presbyterian church in New York shortly afterward, date not given. Not traced further.

iii. Elias Locke, born at New York city, 18 February, 1801, baptised in the First Presbyterian church there 19 April, 1801. He was a hardware merchant and alderman of New York city, and retired to Oyster Bay, New York; he died at the latter place 7 August, 1874 and was buried in the village cemetery. His wife was Sarah Townsend Parrish, born at Oyster Bay, 22 November, 1799, died 9 December, 1882, buried beside her husband; she was daughter of Isaac and Anne (Latting) Parrish of Oyster Bay. Issue (at least):

A. Anne Townsend, born 5 March, 1829, died 5 June 1829.

B. Henry Parrish Locke, born 2 October, 1832, died 15 April, 1867.

C. Phoebe Clara, born 13 December, 1837, died 13 February, 1840.
D. Juliet H., died 25 August, 1887; married George N. Smith.

iv. Jesse Ketcham, born at New York city, 9 February, 1803, baptised in the First Presbyterian church at New York, 24 April, 1803; died 1 June, 1803.
v. Walter James, born at New York city, 28 July, 1804, baptised in the First Presbyterian church there, 30 September, 1804. Not traced further.
vi. George E., a tailor on Chatham square in New York city. Perhaps other children.

4. Elizabeth, probably the one baptised in the First Presbyterian church in Huntington, New York, 8 April, 1764; married there 22 December, 1798 to Richard Oakley, son of Samuel and Abigail (Wood) Oakley. See OAKLEY.
5. Ebenezer, probably the one baptised in the First Presbyterian Church in Huntington, 6 July, 1766. His will, dated 29 May 1820, was proved at Riverhead, New York 12 May, 1831, and is filed in Liber F, p. 177 of Wills. He married 15 December 1790 to Margaret Jarvis. Issue:
   i. Letitia, baptised at Huntington, 24 March, 1795, married 11 July, 1813, John Crum.
   ii. Abiram, baptised at Huntington, 24 March, 1795, married and had issue:
      A. George.
   iii. Rosetta, born 14 December, 1795 at Huntington, baptised there 8 April, 1796.
6. Phoebe, born in 1767, died 29 November, 1773; buried at Huntington, New York.
7. Lemuel, married Sarah Valentine. See page 27.
8. Phoebe, married John Sammis of Huntington, New York.
9. A child, buried at Huntington, 22 November, 1772.

NOTES

Reference has been had to the Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723 - 1779, as printed for Moses L. Scudder, and indexed. Unprinted registers of the same church according to copies in the Huntington Historical Society have been examined, and wills transcribed from the records in the office of the County Clerk at Riverhead, New York. There is an outline of some of these connections in the so-called Scudder Manuscripts in the Huntington Historical Society, some of which was compiled by the late Horace Rusco. This outline is not very correct. Cemetery inscriptions have been verified personally wherever possible, particularly those in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. When examined some years ago this cemetery was found in a deplorable condition; gravestones had fallen and were flaking badly. South Huntington should be distinguished here from Huntington South, which is the present Babylon; South Huntington is near the present Melville, although the term is occasionally extended (and wrongly so) to include Amityville.

In the Huntington Town Records, vol. III, p. 40, the name of Ichabod Smith appears as signing the oath of allegiance to George III of England; his claims for damages are in the Appendix to the same volume, p. 37. As a signer of Associations he is referred to in Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick G. Mather (indexed). The family of Elkanah Rogers who married Elizabeth Smith is also given by Mr. Mather; it needs correction. Ichabod Smith was probably sympathetic to the Colonial cause, for he appears in no conscription lists, and seems to have successfully escaped the notice of the British soldiery.

Ichabod Smith was the son of

7. JEHIEL SMITH 64
m. KEZIAH WOOD daughter of Joseph Wood and Rebecca, probably Titus

He was born at Huntington, New York, not far from the Manor of Queens Village, in 1700.

Jehiel Smith settled in West Hills in Huntington township, & the farmstead which he built was also that later of his son Ichabod. His holdings of land were extensive; he had properties in the East Neck, at the South, in Copiague and elsewhere in Huntington. Not only a farmer, there is reason to believe that he was a horse-trader and fancier. His only civil service was an appointment to the constableship of Huntington, 2 May, 1727. He held office one year.

He died probably in the early part of February, 1759. His will, dated 31 January, 1759, was proved 15 February, 1759,& is filed in the Hall of Records at New York city, Liber 21, page 212 of Wills. His was probably the first burial in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington, and the site of his interment probably is marked by a field stone in the southeasternmost corner of the cemetery. His wife survived him.

Jehiel Smith married in the First Church at Huntington, New York, and by the Reverend Ebenezer Prime, 16 April, 1729 to Keziah Wood.

Issue:

1. Ichabod, married Phoebe Vail. See page 28.

2. Epenetus, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, 29 July, 1733, died about 1760 in the French and Indian wars. Apparently no issue.
3. Hepzibah, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, 1 February, 1735/6, married William Smith of New York city. Issue (at least) (SMITH):
    i. Phoebe, died 13 December, 1760, aged 17 months, 13 ds. and buried at Huntington, New York.
    ii. Hepzibah, baptised in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 8 April, 1764.
    iii. Ann, born 4 September, 1774, baptised in the First Presbyterian church in New York city, 2 October, 1774.
4. Ruth, baptised in the First church at Huntington, 31 May, 1741, married John Avery.
5. Elizabeth, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, 28 March, 1743/4, married Thomas Brush, son of Thomas and Temperance (Denton) Brush. See BRUSH.
6. Keziah, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, 12 July, 1747, married Joseph Titus.

NOTES

The church records of Huntington have been referred to under Ichabod Smith. Jehiel Smith's election as constable appears in Huntington Town Records, vol. II, p. 358; other information was obtained from the Scudder Manuscripts owned by the Huntington Historical Society. Acknowledgment is made here of the friendly and coöperative attitude of the Society, and the assistance contributed by the members, notably Mrs. Irving S. Sammis, has been of very great value to the present writer. In Huntington-Babylon Town History by Mrs. Sammis and published in 1937 by the Society, the following appears at page 68:

> Home burial was the early custom. This accounts for the many tiny enclosures still to be seen as one drives about the country, and for many more which have been obliterated, each set apart in some convenient corner of a farm for a family burial plot. Field stones marked the graves when cut tombstones could not be obtained and, as property changed ownership and families moved, these little plots were often neglected, stones fell and broke, bushes and trees overgrew all, and finally stranger hands cleared the growth and plowed the land.
> Although a record of 1669 mentions "the highe waye or buring hill" as a boundary of a home lot in Huntington, there is nothing to indicate that it refers to the old cemetery on the Ridge, now corner of Main Street and Nassau Avenue. There was no definite setting apart of this hill for the purpose, but it was probably used for burial by or before 1700. A deed of May, 1721, by which Samuel Smith conveyed lands to his son Jehial (sic), names a tract of nineteen acres as being "at a place commonly known as Stony Hollow," while he was to have nine acres "at the field that lyeth on the west side of the path from the burying place to the Hollow Pond to be taken at the north part of the field." This definitely indicates graveyard and path beside it more than a century before the Universalist Church was built on its east in 1837. To say that a certain burial was the first there, because the oldest dated stone known is of this person, is useless. Of necessity, unmarked graves were very common through the early years, and markers have failed and disappeared. Burials there were discontinued long ago, except for the occasional interment of someone whose forefathers rest there.

Jehiel Smith ran an account with Henry Lloyd of Queens Village (fo. 43, 1731, Account Books of the Lloyd Family, in the Long Island Historical Society library): "to a pair of wool cards 4/;a funnel paid by wheat and cash - 9d." Evidently someone in the family was a weaver.

Jehiel Smith was the son of

8. SAMUEL SMITH 128
m. MARY COREY daughter of John Corey and Mary Cornish

He was born at Milford, Connecticut, in February, 1664/5, & baptised in the First Church at that place, 21 July, 1672.

He had removed to Huntington, New York before 1688, and probably about 1682 when his father settled in the town. He is on the assessment list of 1688 with a valuation of twenty-one pounds, fifteen shillings. Subsequently in town meeting, 2 April, 1689 it was voted and granted that Samuel Smith is to have a hundred pound right of land from the first settlement lands of the town and eight acres of division land, "in and about the place whare hee made coale last micalmus he paying for it in specia and time as the others doe." On 1 April, 1690 he held lands adjacent to John Corey.

He was chosen constable of the town, 3 July, 1691; contributed seven shillings nine pence toward the patent of 1694. His hundred right derived from this patent was paid for by Thomas Smith, and was adjacent likewise to that of John Corey. John Corey deeded land to Samuel Smith, 13 February, 1695, and Samuel Smith and his wife Mary in turn, at the time calling John Corey their brother, deeded the latter certain lands. A deed filed at Huntington, dated 18 February 1695, from Thomas Smith and his wife Sarah to Samuel Smith, conveyed land which had been the property of their father Nicholas Smith. Samuel Smith was pound-keeper, 7 May, 1695; he is mentioned in several other references in the town records.

Samuel Smith was a blacksmith, ironsmith and charcoal maker. While he held lands in Huntington and lived in the west central part of the village, he seems also for a time to have been a tenant on the Manor of Queens Village, and he did iron-work and forging for Henry Lloyd, lord of the Manor.

By means of several deeds Samuel Smith disposed of most of his property in later years. The last record of him is dated 2 April, 1733, when he paid Henry Lloyd for an account of a son Eliphalet Smith. No will was recorded, and administration papers were not filed.

He married 1, 14 February, 1688/9 to Mary Corey, who had deceased before 1 January, 1731/2, when Henry Lloyd entered in his Account Books that Samuel Smith senior had paid the account of "May" van Schayk "he having married her." In the records of the First Church at Huntington, Samuel Smith is reported as having married the widow Mary van Scoy (van Scoyack, van Schaick) 15 February, 1732/3. One of these entries is either wrong by something more than a year, or Smith entered into a common-law marriage contract and had it sanctified later. His second wife was the widow of Edward van Scoy of Oyster Bay, New York, whose will, dated 29 May, 1728, was proved (without date) shortly thereafter.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Samuel, born at Huntington, New York, 30 January, 1689/90; living 5 February, 1732, when his father and step-mother deeded land to him, calling him their son (Deeds, office of the town clerk, Huntington, Liber II, page 717). His connections remain unproved, and he may have removed to Stamford, Connecticut, as the account Books of Henry Lloyd cross-reference him to their "Stamford account." He was not, as has been alleged, the Samuel Smith who married Esther Wickes. The latter, a contemporary of the present Samuel, was born at Jamaica, New York, son of Amos and Mary Smith of that place. He married, as from Jamaica, 6 June, 1732 to Esther Wickes, daughter of Nathaniel and Phoebe (Jarvis) Wickes. For further connections of this family see WICKES-WICKS and VALENTINE.
2. Josiah, born at Huntington, New York, 12 June, 1692, a resident of South Huntington, where he died 22 October, 1769. He was buried in the Smith cemetery at South Huntington. The name of his first wife, mother of his children, is unknown, m married 2, at Southold, New York but recorded in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 25 March, 1739/40 to Christian Bailey, who died at Huntington 7 or 11 February, 1759, aged 61 years, 6 months and 5 days; widow of James Petty and daughter of Stephen and Abigail (Cooper) Bailey of Southold. In the printed First Church Records of Huntington her name is misprinted as Potts. It is supposed that he married 3, (altho not given in the bible record), 23 March, 1768 to Jane van Velsor Issue, by first wife:

i. Jonathan, born at Huntington, New York, 22 November, 1722, died 20 February, 1784. His will was proved at Riverhead, New York 8 March, 1784, and is filed at Liber 36, page 367 of Wills. His wife was Elizabeth Conklin of Southold, sister of Thomas Conklin of that place; she was born there 11 August, 1724 and died at Huntington, 10 May, 1792. As the widow of Jonathan Smith she married 2, Nathan Woodhull, widower, son of Richard and Mary (Fordham) Woodhull. Jonathan and Elizabeth (Conklin) Smith had issue:

A. Josiah, born at Huntington, New York, 6 June, 1755, died there 9 April, 1813. His will of 6 April, 1813, was proved 5 June, 1813, and filed in Liber C, page 331 of Wills at Riverhead, New York. His wife was Abigail Chichester, born 17 April, 1761, baptised in the 1st church at Huntington 7 June, 1761, died 18 June, 1818, daughter of Eliphalet and Mary (Pine) Chichester. Issue:

a. Mary, born 31 December, 1783, died 16 August, 1811; married 10 May, 1800 to Timothy Ketcham, son of Zophar and Jemima (Ruscoe) Ketcham. See KETCHAM.

b. Abigail died at Huntington, New York, 23 October, 1781, aged 7 days.

c. Ezra, born at Huntington, New York, in February 1788; baptised in the 1st Presbyterian church there 4 May 1788. He died at Huntington 4 April, 1754. of which place he was a resident. He married Susan Ireland, born in 1792, died 6 April, 1874, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Kelsey) Ireland. Susan was baptised at Huntington 5 December of 1810, "being dangerously sick." Among their children were Charles E., died 16 June, 1845, aged 15 years, 2 mos. and 22 days; George Denmon, died 19 September, 1817, aged 2 years; Sarah E., died 5 February, 1821, aged 3 years, 5 months; Elias, baptised 27

December, 1811, died 1 September, 1878. He married Martha Harned, who died 22 April, 1900 aged 75 years, 3 months and 29 days. Their son Elias married Anne Covert and had Gaylord and a daughter, wife of Jesse E. Oakley. Other children of Elias and Martha (Harned) Smith were Julia who died 22 April, 1891, aged 46 years, 5 months and 7 days; and Charles E., died 13 April, 1848, aged 15 months and 14 days.

d. Elizabeth, born at Huntington in 1790, died 3 February, 1809, married as his first wife to Silas Wood, son of Joshua and Ruth (Brush) Wood. See WOOD (HALIFAX).

e. Benjamin, died at Huntington 13 February, 1792, aged 1 month, 27 days.

f. James, born at Huntington 21 April 1792 died 8 August, 1879; married Phoebe Woolsey and had issue.

g. Josiah, born 17 September, baptised 4 December, 1795, died at Huntington 30 January, 1882; married Rhoda who died 17 April, 1827 aged 31 years, 18 days. He was town clerk of Huntington. Issue.

NOTES

The birth date of Samuel Smith is given in the Milford Vital Records as "neare the midle of Feb. 1664", published in the American Genealogist, vol. IX, page 112; we are indebted to Donald L. Jacobus of New Haven for a transcript of the baptismal record. Samuel Smith is of considerable reference in The Town Records of Huntington and Babylon, as printed: II, p. 21 (the 1688 assessment); II, p. 57 (entry of birth of son Samuel); II, p. 83 (marriage); II, 153 (contribution towards the Fletcher patent of 1694) II, 156 (hundred pound right); II, 163 (John Corey conveys to Samuel Smith, 13 February, 1695, and then following is a conveyance, from Samuel Smith and his wife Mary to John Corey, whom they call their brother. This was acknowledged 10 February, 1695, and is filed in Deeds, I, p. 444); II, 165, a deed from Thomas Smith and his wife Sarah to Samuel Smith. In this Thomas Smith and his wife sell to Samuel Smith the home lot that he had in the middle of Huntington village near the meeting house. It is recited that it had at the beginning been in the tenure of John Lum, then to John Matthews who sold it to John Goulding; the latter sold it to Nicholas Smith. By the time Thomas Smith conveyed it to his brother it had fruit trees and fences, a dwelling house, barn, orchard and garden; and he had had it of their parents Nicholas and Mary Smith.

Other references to Samuel Smith in the printed Town Records will be found in vol. II, p. 175 (appointed poundkeeper); II, pp. 198-199 (conveyance of a hundred pound right of land 12 January, 1697 from Thomas Whitson and Martha his wife to Samuel Smith); II, pp. 242-243 (when Wigwam Swamp was sold to Samuel Smith for 7s 6d per acre, he engaging to fence it).

Unprinted records show that he called himself a blacksmith in January, 1709/10 when he sold land to Jeremiah Wood (Deeds, I,p.608); and in the next several years he conveyed property to his sons, evidently to settle his estate in advance of his decease. He gave land to his son Josiah 31 January, 1714 (Deeds, II, 153); to his son Jehiel, 18 May, 1721 (Deeds, II, 402); to his son Amos, 25 May, 1732 (Deeds, II, 709) and to his son Samuel 5 February, 1732-1733 (Deeds, II, 717). Samuel Smith is also of reference in the Account Books of Henry Lloyd, the originals of which are in the Long Island Historical Society at Brooklyn, New York.

His children have been listed in the Scudder Manuscripts on file in the library of the Huntington Historical Society. The statement is made in these MSS. that Samuel and Mary (Corey) Smith had also the following children: Zophar, Eliakim and Micah. It is improbable that Zophar was of this connection, and Micah is known not to have been. Zophar Smith married in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 5 October, 1742 to Susanna Sammis; and his will, dated 26 November, 1759, was proved 18 December, 1759. It mentions the children, but not by name; his brother John Bailey and David Rusco were executors. For certain connections of Micah Smith see SAMMIS. Eliakim was reasonably a grandson of Nicholas Smith, and he may have been son of Samuel. This, however, is not indicated by the records, in view of the fact that Samuel Smith apparently conveyed property to all of his surviving sons by deed. We have therefore assigned Eliakim as probably a son of Thomas Smith. We understand that a large part of an original compilation of this family was done by Horace Rusco of Huntington, and also by George R. Smith, at one time of 292 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, New York.

Samuel Smith was the son of

9. NICHOLAS SEVERSMITH or SMITH 256
m. MARY TIBBALS daughter of Thomas Tibbals and

He was born in the Netherlands, and probably about 1635.

The first record of him in North America thus far found seems to have been 28 October, 1662 when Richard Baldwin, Secretary for Milford states that at a town meeting held on that date, Nicholas Seversmith, a Dutchman, was to be granted half of an acre of land in the Mill Neck adjacent to Joseph Baldwin, if the land was there to be had. The looseness of this description indicates only that the surveying of the day had certain limitations.

Two years afterward he had married and definitely had a home in Milford. He is thenceforth chiefly of record in the registers of the First Church, usually called Nicholas Smith, but in 1675 again referred to as Nicholas Seversmith. Three repetitions of this unusual surname indicates that Seversmith is an adaptation of the Dutch nomenclature to English terms, & that properly Nicholas Seversmith was Claes Severtszen Smit. For a discussion of this see the NOTES following.

On 10 November, 1682 he intended removal to Huntington, New York and in a deed from Joseph Bayley of that place to him he is called a carpenter and resident of Milford in Connecticut. This deed gave him land which he deeded back to Bayley on 7 November, 1685.

Another deed between Smith and Bayley dated 13 November, 1682 shows that the former was bonded to give Bayley produce, and among other things "Nicholas Smith doth ingage to make a wheele to grind apples and ye post to stay ye wheele at ye dweling hous of ye afore sd Joseph Bayly free bee a contract in bargan..." By 1684 Nicholas Smith had definitely removed to Huntington as he is called a resident of that place in a deed from John Goulding to him, 28 January,1684. He is listed at a valuation of twenty-one pounds in the assessment of 1688. Various deeds are filed at Huntington during these years, some of which are printed in The Town Records of Huntington and Babylon, vol. I. He with his wife Mary made over to their son Cornelius 9 March, 1697. A deed between his two sons Thomas and Samuel as signed 18 February, 1695, establishes several connections. Unprinted indentures include one dated 1 March, 1699 from John Adams of Huntington, weaver, and this is the last time we have found Nicholas Smith recorded.

No will has been found, and no administration papers were filed.

Nicholas Smith married in the First Church at Milford, Ct., and by Mr. Benjamin Fonn, 12 July, 1664 to Mary Tibbals of that place. She was living in 1699.

Issue:

1. Samuel, married Mary Corey. See page 33.
2. Thomas, born at Milford, Connecticut about 1666; baptised in the First Church at that place, 18 June, 1671. He was a resident of Huntington, New York, and had evidently deceased before 1731/2. He was given an assessment valuation in 1688 of £21, and is next of record 9 January, 1691 when he had finished laying the floor of the meeting house. Four days later Thomas Smith and Benjamin Scudder engaged to build a grist mill at Stony Brook, provided they could obtain enough help to encourage them to do it. This evidently was a failure. On 9 April, 1694 he was appointed constable and in the same year contributed to the Fletcher patent. He was chosent o take account of intestate estates, 6 May, 1718; 5 May, 1719 and 2 May, 1721; and again chosen constable 3 May, 1720. He married Sarah, possibly a daughter of Captain Thomas Fleet. Issue:
    i. Thomas, born about 1686, called senior upon his becoming a member of the First Church at Huntington, 31 July, 1735. The name of his wife is unknown. Issue (at least):

A. Thomas, born about 1710, probably at Huntington, New York; his will, dated 19 March, 1763 was proved 21 April, 1763. He married in the First Church at Huntington to Martha Burtis, 17 February, 1731/2. Issue:

a. Mary.

b. Martha, probably married 27 April, 1763 in the First Presbyterian Chh. at Huntington to Nathaniel Whitman, son of John and Martha (Sammis)Whitman. See WHITMAN.

c. Thomas, married 15 September, 1759, Jemima Smith, probably daughter of Alexander and Bathsheba(Carll)Smith.

d. Timothy.

e. Alexander.

B. Alexander, married 4 February, 1728/9 to Bathsheba Carll. Issue, probably:

a. Jemima, married Thomas Smith, son of Thomas and Martha (Burtis) Smith.

Thomas and Sarah Smith perhaps had:

ii. Eliakim, said to have been born in 1696. He was of age on 27 October, 1718, when he bought lands of Thomas Gildersleeve of Huntington. In the Cemetery at Oldfields appears a stone for Eliakim Smith who died 31 December, 1839, aged 79. It would seem, then, that there were descendants; we have found little record.

Perhaps others.

3. Mary, birth not recorded, baptised in the First Church at Milford, Connecticut, 18 June, 1671; married at Huntington, New York, 28 March, 1689 to Dennis Heartt of that place. From the evident duplication of family names we assign the following as children of this union, but without proof (HEARTT):

i. Nicholas.

ii. Cornelius, born in Huntington about 1700, will dated 25 April, 1774, proved 9 May, 1774; it is filed in Liber 29, p. 97 of Wills at New York city. He married in the First Church at Huntington, 7 June, 1726, Elizabeth Wickes, sister of Elnathan Wickes of Winnecommack, and probably daughter of John Wickes and Jemima his wife. Issue:

A. Cornelius, married 22 May, 1758, Mary Smith, daughter of Amos and Mary (Lewis) Smith.

B. Micah, married by license issued 9 October, 1767 to Anna Bryan, daughter of Alexander and Phoebe (Wood) Bryan.

C. Nicholas; mentioned in his father's will.

D. John, mentioned in his father's will.

E. Joshua, born 17 September, 1738, Minister of the First Presbyterian church at Smithtown, New York; died 3 October, 1828. He married Abigail Howell, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Havens) Howell of Centre Moriches, N. Y. Issue:

a. Elizabeth Catharine, married Alexander Bryan, son of Lemuel and Elizabeth (Smith) Bryan. See BRYAN.
b. Frances, born 21 May, 1775, died in 1798/9, married 12 December, 1794, William Rudyard.
c. John Locke, born 14 March, 1779, married Tryphena Smith. Issue.
d. Abigail, married Benjamin Ketcham.
e. Sarah, married 15 February, 1800, Isaac Scudder.
f. Julia Ann, married William Griffiths.
g. Mary, married 10 January, 1804, Samuel Johnson.
h. David Howell, born 13 January, 1791, married Phoebe Brown.
i. Glorianna, born 27 October, 1793, married 1, Isaac Arthur; 2, David Rice. Ancestor of James B. Cooper, of Babylon, New York.
j. James Fordyce, born 24 May, 1797, married Adeline Sammis, daughter of Gilbert and Elizabeth (Gildersleeve) Sammis.
k. Charles Johnson, born 29 May, 1798.

F. Elizabeth, married 10 August, 1756, Selah Carll.
G. Mary, married 11 Jan. (or Jun.), 1763, Daniel Smith.
H. Bathsheba, married 2 January, 1757, Phillip Smith, son of Josiah Smith.
I. Samuel, married 16 April, 1754, Hannah Wickes, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Lewis) Wickes. Issue.

4. Martha, born at Milford, Connecticut 7 April, 1669, baptised in the First Church there 18 June, 1671. No further record.
5. Andrew, born at Milford, Connecticut, 3 December, 1670, baptised in the First Church there 18 June, 1671. He married 21 May, 1696 to Sarah Tomlinson, daughter of Jonas Tomlinson. For further record of their descendants see Seymour Past and Present, by Campbell, Sharpe and Bassett, p. 553; also Family Records, (Heretofore Unpublished), issued by The Connecticut Chapter of the National Society, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, Inc., pp. 231+
6. Sarah, born at Milford, Connecticut, 19 July, 1672, baptised in the First Church at that place, 21 July, 1672; married at Huntington, New York, 11 December, 1690, John Matthews.

7. John, born at Milford, Connecticut, 20 July, 1675, died at Derby, Connecticut, 31 May, 1749. He married at Milford 1 June, 1699 to Mary Bracy, born at Hatfield, Massachusetts, 20 October, 1677, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Osburn) Bracy; she died at Derby 11 or 12 June, 1745. Issue.
8. Cornelius, born at Milford. Connecticut 12 December, 1675, baptised in the First Church there, apparently the same day. He married at Huntington, New York about 1700 to a daughter of James Chichester. Cornelius agreed to build a barn for Henry Lloyd of Lloyd's Neck, 21 January, 1711, for which he was to receive £10. Issue (at least):

10. Hannah, born at Milford, Connecticut, 29 July, 1681, baptised in the First Church there, 31 July, 1681. No further record.

NOTES

The grant of land to Nicholas Seversmith from the town of Milford dated 28 October, 1662, is recorded on page 74 of volume 1 of the Milford Land Records in the town clerk's office. It is evident to us that this name is a result of Mr. Richard Baldwin's attempt to render Claes Severtszen Smit into English, as examples of this sort of translation can be found elsewhere. For example, at p.121 of vol. 1 of the original town records of Newtown, Long Island, a conveyance was made by Henerick Barnsmith to Joseph Sackett. Henry Barnsmith appears as well again in two other instruments; and there can be no doubt that this man was obviously Hendrick Barentszen Smit. That Seversmith does not represent the Dutch equivalent of Silversmith is undoubtedly true, for Zilversmit would have been directly translated. Moreover, Severt or Syvert is a Dutch prenomen, rarely used but nevertheless in good standing. Experts in Dutch nomenclature to whom we have shown this name agree that Nicholas Smith was originally Claes Severtszen Smit; he was therefore, son of an otherwise unknown Severt Smit.

To the present time our endeavors to locate this man in the New Netherlands prior to his advent to Milford have met with no success. In this connection, however, we have noted a number of similar names which must not be confused with those of the present line.

In The History of Brooklyn, New York, by Henry R. Stiles, vol. I, p. 56, there is mentioned the land of the first holders in Brooklyn. Referring to Thomas Boscher who conveyed land to Cornelis Lambertszen Cool, he states that the conveyance describes land adjacent to that of one Claes Cornelise Smit. Stiles then states that he could not find Smit, which is not to be wondered at, for the original record reads Swits (i. e. Claes Corneliszen Switzard).

In the Book of Members of the Reformed Dutch Church of New Amsterdam, published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 9, pp. 38+, Claes Pieterszen Smit is recorded as having removed to Brooklyn before 1660. A Claes Smit or Nicholas Smith was briefly of record in Flushing in 1664. If this was the foregoing, he could not have been the Milford settler; and that he was not to be so identified in any case is indicated by the fact that this Nicholas Smith was son of a Peter Smith. Peter as a given name does not appear in the earlier generations of the Severesmith family.

In the Genealogy and History of the John Keysar Smith Family, in the list of the children of John and Grace (Hawley) Smith of Milford is given a Nicholas Smith. We do not find this Nicholas, and believe this to be a misidentification of Nicholas Severesmith. If so, this genealogy needs correction. See also The Whitney Family of Connecticut, by Stephen Whitney Phoenix, vol. I, p. 27.

We are indebted to Donald Lines Jacobus of New Haven, Connecticut, for a list of the baptisms of the children of Nicholas Smith; for printed reference to their dates of birth, see the American Genealogist, vol. IX, pp. 100 and those following. Further record of Nicholas Smith will be found in the printed Town Records of Huntington and Babylon, vol. I, p. 345 (deed of Joseph Bayley of Huntington to Nicholas Smith); I, p. 378 (deed of John Goulding of Freshpond to Nicholas Smith); I, p. 414 (reverse deed, Smith to Goulding); I, p. 477 (Nicholas to his son Thomas Smith); II, p. 61 (John Ingersoll to Nicholas Smith); II, p. 119 (Richard Soper and wife to Nicholas Smith). In the original Deeds, Liber I, p. 362, Nicholas conveyed to his son Cornelius; he signed the instrument with an X mark, showing that he was illiterate. His wife also signed; and the deed, dated 9 March, 1697/8, was acknowledged the next day.

For other references to Nicholas Severesmith alias Smith, see the preceding pages.

Nicholas Severesmith (Claes Severtszen Smit) is indicated to have been son of one Severt Smit. Other than this, his ancestry is unknown to us.

5. RUTH ACKERLY 21
m. JOHN FURMAN son of Zebulun Furman and Dorothy Risley

She was born at Patchogue, Brookhaven township, New York, 28 September, 1777. No baptism is now of record.

She married John Furman at Patchogue probably about 1800, and thereafter they were residents in the southern part of that village. Nothing is known of her personal attributes.

She is said to have died in residence at that place, 26 February, 1853; and was buried in a probably unmarked grave in the older part of the Lakewood Cemetery at Patchogue.

She apparently died intestate, but no administration papers were filed.

For descendants see FURMAN, under #20.

NOTES

In The Refugees of 1776 from Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick Gregory Mather, at p. 350 appears a note which was given to Mr. Mather by the late Professor James Furman Kemp of New York city, and which recites the above connection. Incorrect in part, see FURMAN for futher discussion.

The late Orville B. Ackerly, one time Clerk of the County of Suffolk, New York, compiled a manuscript genealogy of the Ackerly family, most of the notes on which he gave to the writer. The latter in 1921 caused these records to be printed in some part in The Journal of American Genealogy, vol. II, p. 69; and, with the exceptions noted herein, Mr. Ackerly endorsed this outline as accurate.

The birth and death records of Ruth (Ackerly) Furman were obtained from this source, and we understand, were taken from the family bible of Stephen Ackerly. We have not seen the latter. Other information was obtained from a MS. compiled by Barton Rollo Smith of Jamaica, New York; and from Mrs. Jacob L. Valentine of Brookhaven, New York.

Ruth Ackerly was the daughter of

6. STEPHEN ACKERLY or AKERLY 42
m. DOROTHY AKERLY daughter of Nathaniel Akerly and Dorothy Tooker

He was born at Patchogue, Brookhaven township, New York, 19 August, 1742. No baptismal record has been found.

He signed Associations lists in Brookhaven, June, July and August, 1775 (#30, 185, 187, 189, 208), as an Associator to protect the interests of the Colonial revolutionaries in the township. He was a resident of Patchogue village, and is said to have been a real estate operator, holding much land in the southern part of the township. Traditionally also he was of a convivial temperament and was noted for his capacity in the aleshops of the village.

He died in residence at Patchogue, New York 26 May, 1819, and was buried in the old cemetery on Waverly avenue in the western part of Patchogue. No will or administration was filed.

He married, probably about 1768, to his first cousin Dorothy Akerly.

In 1864 he was appointed deputy county clerk for Suffolk, and held that office until 1866, and from 1871 to 1876. In 1867 he was chairman of the Republican committee for the county and ran for election at the same time as county clerk. He failed of election at the time, but succeeded in being elected to the office in 1877 and again in 1879. He also served in Riverhead, New York as a justice of the peace, and as a member of the board of education of that place. He was for three years a partner of Nat W. Foster and conducted a mercantile business; and also was one of the founders of the Riverhead Savings Bank, of which he became secretary and trustee. His experience as county clerk led him to accumulate much historical reference material concerning transfers of title, and at his death he had one of the finest collections of Long Island historical and genealogical manuscripts. In later years a real estate broker, Mr. Ackerly was a consultant to many trust and title guaranty companies in matters relating to property. To the present writer he was a kindly friend, who unstintingly gave of his genealogical information on Brookhaven families; not only that, his thorough knowledge of Long Island historians and genealogists gave to us a most thorough perspective upon our predecessors in this field.

Orville Burnell Ackerly married 1, in 1866 to Ione Downs, daughter of John Downs of Aquebogue, New York. She died of diphtheria in 1874 and he married 2, 19 June, 1877 to Maria K. NOTES

The references for these connections have been given in some detail under Ruth (Ackerly) Furman. At p. 1058 of The Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick Gregory Mather, is given a list of members of this family who signed Associations during the War of the American Revolution. As but one Stephen Ackerly is known in this family, the identity of the Associations signer is clearly established.

The descendants of Stephen Ackerly or Akerly have been referred to in Long Island Genealogies, edited by Charles Jolly Werner; the subject material of this book is taken from the manuscripts of the late Benjamin Franklin Thompson, author of the early History of Long Island. It needs severe correction in several places. A manuscript prepared for Jerome Woodford Ackerly, entitled Descent of Jerome Woodford Ackerly from Robert the First Ackerly in Suffolk County, 1651, by the late Orville B. Ackerly, has been consulted with the kind permission of Mr. Jerome W. Ackerly; and Moses Hudson Ackerly's publication, A Genealogy of the Ackerlys, is the basis for the listing of the descendants of Moses Harvey Ackerly. This last account amplifies the record compiled by the Reverend Jacob S. Mallman in his Historical Papers of Shelter Island and Its Presbyterian Church, page 217.

The bible of Elisha Ackerly is owned by Miss Lila Conklin of Patchogue, New York, and has been copied in Bible Records, New York, volume 1, p. 4, in the library of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution at Washington, D. C. Mr. Orville B. Ackerly personally published his ancestry in The History of Long Island, by William Smith Pelletreau, and published by the Lewis Historical Publishing Co., vol. II, p. 637. Gravestone inscriptions have been taken from Cemetery Lists; Town of Brookhaven, Village of Setauket, vol. I, p. 34, under those for Mount Sinai. This is a typewritten manuscript by the late William A. Eardeley and is in the library of the Queensborough Public Library at Jamaica, New York. Entries have been personally verified in the field whenever possible. See also the Boston Evening Transcript for 8 April, 1931, Genealogical Query No. 1576.

Stephen Ackerly or Akerly was the son of

7. EBENEZER AKERLY 84
m. HANNAH FORDHAM daughter of Joseph Fordham and Mary Maltby

He was born in the township of Brookhaven, New York, 20 September, 1713. There is no baptismal record found.

He may have been a resident of Newtown in that township (now called Selden) in his early years; but at the time of the 1741 assessment had moved to the southern part and at Patchogue. His earmark for horses, filed in the town records, 22 November, 1745, states that it had been that of his father, now deceased, and this among other evidences establishes his ancestry. He was rated in the 1741 and 1749 assessments at a moderate value; however the inventory of his estate came to 972 pounds.

He died at Patchogue, New York, 19 February, 1755/6, and was presumably buried there. Letters of administration on the estate were granted to the brother Phillip Akerly on 26 April, 1756; by ten years later a controversy had arisen between executor and the widow Hannah with the children. To settle the dispute William Floyd, William Blydenburgh and William Smith were chosen as arbitrators, and the decision made in August, 1766 was made final by an award dated 20 November, 1766. This referred to land in question as having been given to Ebenezer and Phillip Akerly by their father, Robert Akerly.

He married before 1742 to Hannah Fordham of Brookhaven and Southampton, New York. Issue:

1. Stephen, married Dorothy Akerly. See page 48.
2. Hannah, married Benjamin Smith of Brookhaven, perhaps a son of John Smith, and descended of Arthur Smith. Issue (SMITH):
   i. Dorothy, married 1, in 1800 to Nathaniel Munsell; 2, Phineas Petty. Issue, by second husband (PETTY):
      A. Louisa, born at Brookhaven, New York, 18 August, 1816, died 25 April, 1865; married Samuel Weekes, son of Jacob and Phoebe (Selleck)Weeks. See WEEKES - WEEKS.
      B. Dorothy.

NOTES

The references given under Stephen Ackerly or Akerly are applicable here. In Records, Town of Brookhaven up to 1800, published in 1880 by the town clerk, Ebenezer Akerly is mentioned in the assessment lists at pages 152 (for 1741) and 161 (for 1749). The administration is filed at liber E, page 202 of Administrations at Riverhead, New York; the award of the arbitrators is owned by Moses Hudson Ackerly. See also Book B, part 1 of Deeds, p. 25, in the office of the County Clerk at Riverhead.

For a discussion of the Fordham connection, see FORDHAM.

Ebenezer Akerly was the son of

8. ROBERT AKERLY 168; 172
m.

He was born in the township of Brookhaven, New York, before 1679, as he was already of age 14 March, 1698/9. No baptism is of record.

He filed his earmark for horses in the Brookhaven town records as of the aforesaid date, the first time he is listed. This earmark was crossed off, probably at the time his son Ebenezer was accredited with it. He is one of four of his surname listed in the Brookhaven assessment for the county rate in 1704, and assessed for more than others of the family. He was called husbandman 10 April, 1705, when he conveyed property to Zachariah Hawkins. He is also recorded as having bought land 30 January, 1714/15 from Benjamin Brewster; and one year later, 9 January, 1715/16 he was designated with others to erect a sufficient pound. On 6 May, 1718, he was elected trustee of the township of Brookhaven.

He seems to have been a communicant of the Anglican church, for on 4 December, 1719 he among others resigned his seat in the meeting house because of the introduction of the Presbyterian form of worship. On 1 May, 1721 when divisions of land were granted, it was recorded that there were "Layd out to Roberd Akerly 5 akers & a halfe Jn newtown & In & aboU(ght) his home lot: 9: akers & a halfe & Jn & abought his teen aker lot 8 akers of Land which is all his dew." From this entry it is shown that he was then a resident of Newtown (Selden).

In later divisions of land, made in the right of Robert Akerly (his grandfather) and Samuel Akerly (his father), it is evident that he or his brothers held land by award of the town, situated between the line of the Winthrop patent and the Connetquot (Connecticut, so-called) river. Some of this land undoubtedly was that held by Ebenezer and Stephen Akerly of the succeeding generations.

He was literate, as he signed his name to a conveyance when on 26 June, 1733 he deeded land to Edward King for ten pounds. He is apparently last of record 24 April, 1738, when he and his son Nathaniel with others quitclaimed to Mr. Phillips, the minister, an acre and a half of land adjacent to the dwelling house of the latter. At the time of the 1741 assessment for the county rate, he was deceased; and the "Widow Akarly" who is listed among the known children is supposed to have been the widow.

The name of the mother of his children has not been found.

Issue:

1. Nathaniel, married Dorothy Tooker. See ACKERLY - AKERLY, Second line.
2. Daniel, probably his son, born about 1707, recorded his earmark for horses in the Brookhaven town records 25 November, 1728. He signed the quitclaim to Mr. Phillips of an acre and a half of land adjacent to the parsonage in Brookhaven, 24 April, 1738; but had deceased before the assessment of the county rate in 1741. The name of his wife, mother of the child (perhaps children) is unknown to us. Issue (at least):
    i. Robert, for whom Phillip Akerly (probably his uncle) was guardian as recited in a release of William Smith of a gore of land in the hills of the town, 1 November, 1753, to a considerable number of the inhabitants. He had already listed his earmark for horses in the Town Records 25 December, 1751, and on 28 December, 1757, obtained a license to marry Sarah Smith, widow. Her ancestry is not found. Robert Akerly signed the Association lists in Brookhaven, June, July and August of 1775, to support the colonists in in the War of the American Revolution. He had issue (at least):

A. Daniel, who recorded his earmark for horses on 3 July, 1774; this earmark had been that of John Newton. Not traced further. It is perhaps true that descendants of this line settled at Northport.

3. Ebenezer, married Hannah Fordham. See page 54.

4. Phillip, born in Brookhaven, New York, 29 September, 1715 and died there 8 February, 1785; his will, dated 21 February, 1784 was proved 7 April, 1802. It is filed in Liber C, p. 223 of Wills at Riverhead, New York. He married Joanna, possibly surnamed Satterly; she was born 11 January, 1718 and died 15 January, 1807. Phillip Akerly signed the Association lists in Brookhaven, June, July and August of 1775, to support the Colonists in the War of the Revolution. Issue:

i. Joanna, born 22 December, 1737, married William Longbotham, who died 19 July, 1820, son of Nathaniel and Mary Longbotham. Issue, at least (it is said that there were others) (LONGBOTHAM):

A. Phillip, born 6 April, 1771, died 2 March 1854.
B. Irene, who died 8 October, 1851.
C. Anna, born 16 July, 1769.
D. John, born 29 January, 1779.

ii. Isabella.

iii. Mary, born 6 December, 1745, died 26 October, 1820, married about 1773 John Newton, baptised 22 October, 1751, died after 1836. Issue, at least (NEWTON):

A. John A., married 18 April, 1799, Polly Soper, and had issue:

a. John, born 11 November, 1804, married 17 December, 1828, Lydia Minerva Smith born 15 March, 1805, died 20 January, 1869, daughter of Alexander and Lydia (Ruland) Smith.

iv. John, born 13 December, 1752, died 15 August, 1811; his will, dated 8 January, 1802, was proved 19 August, 1811. It is filed in Liber C of Wills at Riverhead, New York, page 156. He was a signer of Association lists in the War of the American Revolution in 1775. His wife Jane or Joanna died 28 May, 1798, aged 48. Issue:

A. Rachel, born in 1770, died 2 December, 1817, married in 1799, Richard Hudson, son of Nathaniel and Margaret (Swezey) Hudson. Issue.
B. Hannah, married 5 May, 1812 to Richard Oakley, son of Miles and Sarah (Bunce) Oakley, probably. See OAKLEY.
C. Mary, born 9 April, 1795, married 14 February, 1810, Gideon Mills. Issue (MILLS):
a. Selah Smith, born 23 December, 1848.
b. Alonzo.

v. Sybil, born 30 March, 1755, died 12 September, 1804, married (?Isaac) Ketcham.
Perhaps others.

NOTES

The Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw, constitutes the chief source of information relative to Robert Akerly. See Book B, p. 306 (original earmark); p. 405 (renouncing of seat in the meeting house); p. 444 (deed to Edward King); page 530 (earmark of Ebenezer Akerly's, formerly his father's); and in Book C, records of town meetings and divisions of land lists, (indexed). For the 1704 assessment list see Records, Town of Brookhaven, published in 1880 by the town clerk, p. 97. As this volume is available in most libraries while the recently published records mentioned above are not, we refer to unindexed entries in the latter: p. 110 (resigning of seat in meeting house); page 141 (quitclaim to Mr. Phillips). The conveyance to Zachariah Hawkins is recorded in Liber A of Deeds at Riverhead, p. 131; and that from Benjamin Brewster at the same place in Deeds, Liber B, p.76.

Record of Phillip Akerly was obtained from the Southold, Long Island Traveler, a newspaper, which on 3 April, 1914 under No. 2626, published a bible record owned by George S. Longbotham. This was augmented by pedigrees supplied by members of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (Nos. 165,886 and 253-272.). See also Cemetery Inscriptions in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 16, p. 131.

Robert Akerly was the son of 9. SAMUEL AKERLY 336; 344

m. (HANNAH)

He was born about 1642 and probably at Southold, then in the Connecticut Colony.

He came with his father to Brookhaven township on Long Island about 1657, and was evidently considered as one of the founders of that township, as grants of land were made to his descendants on the basis of proprietary rights. He received half the home lot of his father, 20 November, 1670, and was grantee of land in Newtown (now Selden) from the latter, 10 April, 1675. This land seems to have been that which his son Robert lived on.

He recorded his earmark for horses 3 November, 1680. He seems to have followed several trades, as he is variously called a fisherman, surveyor and cow-keeper; he called himself a cordwainer 20 October, 1705. He served as overseer of fences for the town, 3 April, 1676 and was a trustee of the township, 3 May, 1692. He was illiterate, as he signed a deed 29 October, 1705 to his son Jacob with an X mark.

He exchanged land with Robert Smith, 28 December, 1681;was a signer of articles of agreement with Benjamin Smith among others as a majority of the parties in Crane's Neck, 8 April, 1693. In a deed dated 10 November, 1700 to Richard Howell,his wife is called Hannah. He conveyed to his son Jacob through two deeds dated 29 October, 1705; and to his son Benjamin on 1 January, 1715. This is the last time he appears of record; he was certainly deceased in 1718.

No will has been found, and no administration papers were apparently filed.

His wife Hannah may have been the daughter of Edward Benton of Guilford, Connecticut; see the NOTES following. It is not proved that she was the mother of the children.

Issue:

1. Robert; married. See page 55.
2. Joseph, who was grantee in a deed from his father 9 May, 1696, (Liber A of Deeds, Riverhead, New York, page 80b),witnessed by Samuel Muncy, Jonathan Owen and Thomas Smith. He was not on the 1704 Assessment list of the township of Brookhaven, and is undoubtedly the Joseph Akerly who was of Rye, Westchester county, New York, in 1718 and of Greenwich, Connecticut, 1 March 1721, when he bought land of John Marshall senior. The name of his wife is unknown. Issue, at least:
   i. Joseph of Greenwich, Connecticut, listed at that place 4 August, 1747.

   And probably:
   ii. Benjamin, who married in the Reformed Dutch church at Kingstown, New York 13 May, 1728 to Styntje Bosch of Marbletown. In the marriage record it is stated that he was born on Long Island. Issue, at least:
      A. Benjamin, born at Marbletown, New York, married 15 June, 1765 to Helena Suiland or Zuyland. Issue, baptised in the Dutch church at Marbletown:
         a. Johanna, baptised 8 December, 1765.
         b. Catharina, baptised 27 October, 1769.
         c. Benjamin, baptised 29 May, 1774.

         Perhaps others.
3. Jacob, grantee in a deed from his father, 29 October, 1705 (Liber A, pp. 140a, 140b, Deeds, Riverhead, New York). He appears in the 1704 Assessment list for Brookhaven, but not in 1741. Not traced further.

4. Benjamin, born about 1680, grantee in a deed from his father, 1 January, 1715 (Liber A of Deeds, Riverhead, New York, p. 32). He is of record in the 1704 assessment list of Brookhaven, although living on land afterwards considered as being in Smithtown. He had deceased presumably before 15 January, 1732, as a widow Sarah Akerly is mentioned in the Account Books of Henry Lloyd of Queens Village on that date and also on 1 March, 1732. The widow Sarah Akerly married in the First Church at Huntington, New York, 7 October, 1734 to Samuel Munger of Smithtown. It has not been proved that Benjamin Akerly had issue; however it seems reasonable to indicate that he had the children listed below.

-. Perhaps other children.

THE INDICATED DESCENDANTS OF BENJAMIN AKERLY, SON OF SAMUEL AND (HANNAH) (?BENTON) AKERLY OF BROOKHAVEN TOWNSHIP, NEW YORK COLONY.

Benjamin Akerly is believed to have had the following children, and perhaps by his wife Sarah, maiden name unrecorded:

+5. Samuel, married 1, Rachel Udall; 2, Hannah Wickes, widow.
+6. William, married Elizabeth Wickes.
+7. Benjamin, married 1, Sarah Dennis; 2, Hannah Dowd; and 3, Elizabeth.

5. Samuel Ackerly or Akerly, indicated son of Benjamin Akerly, was born on Long Island about 1700. He was a resident of Huntington, N. Y., where he died in 1759. His will, dated 6 February, 1759, was proved 6 March, 1759. He married 1, in the First Church in Huntington, 1 January, 1726/7 to Rachel Udall, daughter of Joseph Udall, probably mother of all of the children. He married 2, in the same church, 3 October, 1751 to Hannah Wickes, widow, who survived him. Statements made by the late William S. Pelletreau that this Samuel Ackerly (or Akerly) married Hannah Fordham are incorrect. Issue:

+8. Abel, married Ruth Higbie.
+9. Samuel, married Elizabeth Wickes.
10. Bethuel.
11. Keziah.
12. Rachel, married 2 June, 1767, James Chichester, widower.

14. Rebecca, married 29 May, 1770, Jacob Sammis, son of John and Susanna (Kelsey) Sammis. See SAMMIS.

6. William Ackerly or Akerly, indicated son of Benjamin Akerly, was born on Long Island about 1703, and died in Huntington, New York, about 1738. He married in the First Church at that place, 2 April, 1733 to Elizabeth Wickes, who as his widow married in the same church to Thomas Dennis, 9 February, 1740/1. By elimination it is probable that William and Elizabeth (Wickes) Ackerly had the following children, baptised in the First Church at Huntington:

15. Nathaniel, baptised 1 August, 1736.
16. William, baptised 20 August, 1738.

7. Benjamin Akerly indicated son of Benjamin Akerly, was born on Long Island about 1705, and was baptised as an adult in the First Church at Huntington, 2 January, 1732/3. He is identified as the one of that name who was a resident of Brookhaven and Smithtown;also rated in the 1741 assessment of Brookhaven. Benjamin Akerly removed to Cow Neck (Manhasset) in Oyster Bay township, where he deceased in the latter part of 1788 or early in January, 1789. His will, dated 29 November, 1788, was proved 26 January, 1789, and is filed in Liber A of Deeds at Jamaica, New York, p. 43. He married, 1,in the First Church at Huntington, New York, 21 December, 1727, Sarah Dennis who died shortly thereafter; 2, at Guilford, Connecticut, 21 May, 1730 to Hannah Dowd, born 8 May, 1703, died 20 January, 1732; and probably 3, Elizabeth, maiden name unknown, who survived her husband. Probable issue by first wife:

His will, as of Benjamin Akerly junior, dated 7 February, 1768, was proved 9 September, 1768. His bequests were to a daughter of a daughter of Deborah Doughty; to Jacamiah, William, Matthew and Catharine Akerly, to Sally, Polly, Elijah and Patty Sands, Maltby Stocker, Ursula Seaman; executors his "near relations" Samuel and Jacamiah Akerly. No issue.
21. Joseph, a resident of Hempstead, New York, died intestate before 26 April, 1760, on which date his brother Benjamin was appointed administrator, and was bondsman also with another brother, Jonathan. (Liber C of Deeds at Jamaica, New York, p. 168). No issue.

It was filed in Liber B of Wills at Riverhead, N. Y., page 194. He married in the First Church at Huntington, 16 March 1756 to Ruth Higbie, daughter probably of Josiah and Sarah Higbie or Higby (see Edward Higby and His Descendants, by Clinton David Higby, Ph. He married in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 2 January, 1760 to Elizabeth Wickes, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Gates) Wickes. Administration on his estate was granted to the son Nathaniel at Riverhead, New York, 31 July, 1802. Issue (at least):
41. Nathaniel; not traced further.
And probably other children; however the account given in the MSS on file in the Huntington Historical Society at Huntington, New York, listing the other children, evidently needs revision.

Samuel Akerly, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Akerly, was born probably in Oyster Bay township, New York, by 1747 as he was of age in 1768 when the will of his brother Benjamin was proved, and of which he was an executor. THE BENTON FAMILY OF GUILFORD, CONNECTICUT: THE AKERLY CONNECTION

In the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 54, p. 175, appears a genealogy of the connections of Edward Benton of Guilford, Connecticut, compiled by Ralph D. Smyth and communicated to the Register by Dr. Bernard C. Steiner. Therein is given that Edward and Anne Benton had among other children a daughter Hannah, born 28 September, 1640, and who married Robert (?) Accerly or Akerly. In reprints of this genealogy distributed later, the name of Robert Akerly has been deleted, which shows us that Mr. Smyth was quite uncertain who the husband of Hannah Benton may have been.

In volume 1, part 2, at page 74 (old), page 78(new) of Wills at New Haven, appears the will of Edward Benton, which probably was the source of Mr. Smyth's information. An abstract is as follows:

> Edward Benton of Guilford, being ill in body....y^{e} holy providence of god, hath left the burden of a creeple child upon my hand to be cared for, whoe may live to be burdensome after my decease Zacheus Benton by name, and that aflixion is an interruption unto the more equall distribution of my small estate amongst all my children; I doe therefore give onely five shillings a piece to five of my children viz^{t}: Edward Benton, Hanna Akerly, Mary Thorpe, Sarah Wright and Tabitha Benton; and unto my son Zacheus I give a colt which he shall choose: I give unto my son Daniells Widdow a cow; I give unto my son Andrew Benton, upon ye condition y^{t} he shall duely attend and provide for his brother Zacheus Benton (for life), (residue), and make him sole executor. Signed: Edwar_ Benton; witnesses, John ffowler and William Johnson.
> Signed 7 March, 1675/6, proved 10 November, 1680 at New Haven by Wm Johnson, the other witness being dead. Another will dated 28. 8. 1680 also presented, agreeing in substance, but imperfect; the will of 7 March 1675/6 accepted. Andrew Benton, son and executor, exhibited inventory. Liberty reserved for y^{e} other children to make objection to the will.

It has not been possible from these records to determine what Akerly married Hannah Benton. It was apparently no relative of Henry Akerly of Stamford, for he left no sons that can be discovered. It is possible that she was the wife of Nicholas Ackley of East Haddam, Connecticut, although none of the members of this family, so far as can be found, ever called themselves Akerly. In volume II, p. 33+ of Gates-Dawes Ancestral Lines by Mary Walton Ferris, a genealogy of the connections of the Ackley family has been compiled; but in this careful study no reference to the Benton family is found.

As Hannah Benton was born in 1640 she was an exact contemporary of Samuel Akerly of Brookhaven, New York, who is known in 1700 to have had a wife Hannah; and it is reasonable to indicate that she may well have been his wife. It must be borne in mind, however, that it is not proved that the wife Hannah was the mother of Samuel Akerly's children, so that in any case this ancestry cannot be claimed as certain. Joseph Akerly, brother of Samuel Akerly may have married and had issue, so that she may have been the wife of the latter; but there is considerable reason to believe that the latter died without issue and unmarried. A fact not without significance is that Samuel Akerly's grandson Benjamin married at Guilford to Hannah Dowd for his second wife in 1732, and he may have become acquainted with her through supposed Benton relatives.

Charles Edward Benton in 1906 published Caleb Benton and Sarah Bishop, Their Ancestors and Descendants, in which the ancestry of Hannah (Benton) Akerly is given as follows:

> Edward Benton, first known ancestor, married in England, 10 May, 1563 to Joane Holloway, who was buried 4 November, 1599. He was buried 16 September, 1605. Among other children they had

NOTES

The agreement wherein Robert Akerly conveyed half his home lot to his son will be found in Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw and others (1930), Book A, p. 33. Samuel Akerly conveyed to Joseph Longbotham, 23 November, 1680 (Book B, page 56); to Robert Goulsbury, 16 November, 1682 (B, p. 138); surveyor, illiterate (B, 301); trustee (B, p. 303); earmark for his horses (B, p. 477+); called Samuel senior, 3 July, 1700 (C, page 19) although no Samuel junior is conclusively established, unless a nephew; and received lands in many division lists printed in Book C.

The connection of Joseph, son of Samuel is established by a deed in Liber A, p. 80b, Deeds, Riverhead, New York; the son Jacob is of record on pp. 140 a and b in the same Liber. Joseph is again mentioned in Baird's History of Rye, New York, and in Spencer P. Mead's Ye Historie of Ye Town of Greenwich, (1911), at p. 446; the connections of the descendants of this line are recorded partly in the printed Reformed Dutch Church Records of Kingston, New York, and a copy in the library of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society of the Dutch Reformed Church Records of Marbletown, New York, has furnished us with other entries. We have referred to other authorities in the course of the text.

The records of the Ackerly family of Huntington were obtained from wills on file in the Hall of Records in New York city, and which have been printed in abstract by the New York Historical Society in their Collections. These abstracts, edited by the late William Smith Pelletreau, need verification; and Mr. Pelletreau was most regrettably in error in assigning Hannah Fordham as the wife of Samuel Ackerly of Huntington (Collections, V, pp.289-290) and which has been mentioned in The American Genealogist, vol. XIII, p. 193. The Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, as edited by Moses L. Scudder, refers to members of this family who lived at that place (indexed). We have not in every case established connections of those of the surname, but here we have been aided materially by the MSS on file in the Huntington Historical Society. These unfortunately, as has been pointed out by the late Helen Mar Ackerly of New York city, contain errors. We acknowledge also the services of Miss Ruth Ackerly of Riverhead in obtaining records for us at Riverhead.

Miss Lucy Dubois Akerly, late of New York, a frequent contributor to the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, established her ancestry as derived from a Benjamin Akerly of Oyster Bay, whose ancestry she never claimed to have found. Miss Akerly however, seems to have been limited in her research in her ancestral lines, for several members of this family, found by us in research, were apparently unknown to her. Among other things Miss Akerly held that her ancestor Samuel Akerly was born about 1753, whereas he was of age in 1768; sheknew nothing of Benjamin junior, Joseph or Jonathan in this line. We are assured that the Benjamin of Huntington and the one of Oyster Bay are identical, although from the number of children it is possible that Elizabeth was a fourth and not third wife of this Benjamin; hence our expression "probably 3" in reference to this. The son Jacamiah occasionally and incorrectly appears as "Jeremiah".

The bible record of Augustine Ackerly has been filed in Bible Records (New York), vol. XXIX, p. 1, in the library of the National Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution. Passing reference to descendants is made in the Documentary History of the Dutch Congregation of Oyster Bay, New York, by Henry O. Stoutenburgh.

Miss Lucy Dubois Akerly published her lineage in American Ancestry, vol. 10, pp. 130, 132, and repeated most of it in the American Armoury and Blue Book, published by John Matthews of London, p. 142. Here Miss Akerly gives a coat of arms for her branch of the family, stating that it was derived from an old seal belonging to Dr. Samuel Akerly, M. D. This is described as "On a mound the stump of a tree, a dove holding in the beak a branch of laurel between two pine trees." (The dove is standing on the stump). We may not doubt, of course, that the descendants of the good Doctor have every right to elect this as their coat of arms, but it should be emphasized that no shield has ever been granted by letters patent. This Akerly seal is undoubtedly derived from a stock design for letter seals which were popular in the early .. nineteenth century. We have seen such devices whose patterns ran a gamut from skull and cross-bones to a champagne bottle in pale (sic), a corkscrew in chief, all natural! The half-grown squab perched on a pine stump, while heraldically hopeless, will prove at least diverting.

See also The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 28, p. 246.

Samuel Akerly was the son of

10. ROBERT AKERLY 672; 688
m. (ISABELLA)

He was born about 1610, perhaps in Yorkshire, England. The baptismal record has not been found.

He was an early settler of Southold, Long Island, recorded at that place in 165½, and without doubt had been there for some years before. He is said to have been a member of a party of thirteen who left England in 1638 and sailed for New Haven, Ct. and afterwards founded Southold in 1640. This account has been severely criticised (see NOTES, following).

The home lot of Robert Akerly in Southold was described in the Southold Town Records in January of 1653, and in a footnote to the printed copy the editor states that the site was occupied by the Cochran place. He took little or no part in the activities of the town, and removed in 1657. On 4 March of that year he with his wife Isabella sold their land at Southold to Thomas Cooper.

He has been termed one of the founders of the township of Brookhaven, and if so, had acquired interests there before he actually settled. His home lot is stated to have been located on "both sides of the road which .... was on the east side of the stream which, after having been dammed, later made what is now the Setauket Mill Pond." (Orville B. Ackerly). Robert Akerly had the southernmost lot, and his neighbor was George Wood.

He was to be made a freeman of the Connecticut Colony, 12 May 1664. He seems to have been a horse trader and was also a farmer.

His wife had died before 1670. On 20 November of that year he made an agreement with his son Samuel, whereby he conveyed to the latter half his home lot; on 10 April, 1675 he gave the latter a five acre lot in Newtown (Selden) provided "the said samuell (doth) forgive the sayd Robard his (father) all depts dues and demands from the beginning of the world (to) this day and date and not to (Re)quire any other porsion (without) his father be willing to (leave him) anything and to surrender up the cattell and taklen (which he) had of his (father)." Robert Akerly sold part of his home lot to his son-in-law Jacob Longbotham, 24 May, 1675; and on 25 November of the same year he conveyed to Richard Waring, another son-in-law, provided the latter "doth ingage to keep the Said Robert Akerly with meat drink and Cloathing washing and Lodging Sufficiantly and what Cloathing the Said Robert have of his own he is not to dispose of it to others." He conveyed his commonage to Robert Kellum of Southampton, 4 July, 1676.

He had died before 26 April, 1681, upon which date Thomas Biggs of Brookhaven referred in a conveyance to land of Robert Akerly, deceased. No will has been found and no administration papers were filed.

The maiden name of the wife Isabella is unknown. We are of the opinion that she was probably mother of the children.

Issue:

1. Samuel, married Hannah. See page 58.
2. Joseph, who recorded his earmark in the Town Records, 24 August, 1672. This earmark was transferred to Benjamin Akerly, his nephew, 2 September, 1704. In view of this it would seem that Joseph left no heirs male, and perhaps no issue.
3. Lydia, married Richard Warring or Waring of Brookhaven and Oyster Bay, New York. For their descendants see A Short History of the Warings, by Robert Newton Waring.

NOTES

Entries in the Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw, have been referred to under Samuel Akerly. See Book A, pp. 33, 35, 37, 46; Book B, p. 71; and also the Southold Town Records, vol. I, p. 19; also other entries as indexed. Griffin's Journal, published in 1857, recites the traditional founding of Southold, and this was repeated in the Celebration of the 250th Anniversary of the Formation of the Town and the Church of Southold, L. I., August 27, 1890, in an address by the late Charles B. Moore, and edited by Epher Whitaker. In Whitaker's Southold, by the Rev. Charles E. Craven, this story of the settlement is stated to be a romantic fiction without historic basis.

In The History of Long Island, by the late Benjamin F. Thompson, Robert and Samuel Akerly are listed among the founders of the township of Brookhaven; Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary of New England misterms Robert and Samuel as brothers. In the Colonial Records of Connecticut, as edited by Trumbull, Robert Akerly is reported to be made a freeman, in vol. I, pp. 341, 428.

According to older members of this family, the first vowel of this name was pronounced with a broad inflection, as though the word were acre-ly. This is responsible for such spellings as Acrely and Ayckriley.

HENRY AKERLY OF NEW HAVEN AND STAMFORD IN THE CONNECTICUT COLONY

Several writers have identified Robert Akerly of Southold and Brockhaven on Long Island as a son or other relative of Henry Akerly, who appears early as a resident of New Haven and Stamford in the Connecticut Colony. There is no evidence yet found which supports any relationship.

Henry Akerly appears in the New Haven Colony Records as edited by Atwater, in April, 1640. He was at the time rebuked for building a cellar and selling it without leave; was a house carpenter and farmer. On 7 December, 1641 he is number 36 in a list of pioneers at Stamford, and was granted land. The Rev. E. B. Huntington mentions him in his History of Stamford, Connecticut, at pp. 20, 25, 27, 42, 54, 59, 82 and 155. His widow Ann was said to have been 75 years of age in 1662, or born in 1587. Henry Akerly also appears in Greenwich, Connecticut, 16 October, 1656.

In the American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 112, appears an abstract of the will of Henry "Accorly", 17 June, 1658, signed with his mark. His wife is to be executrix; his grandchild, Daniel Simkins, under age, son of Vinson (Vincent) Simkins, is mentioned, and "my heir An Accorly"; Mary ( )ason, now living with him, "w^{ch} I tooke as my owne", under 19. Witnesses were ffrances Homes, William Oliver, Rich: Homes, ffrances Browne.

The reference to "An Accorly" is ambiguous. It is not yet determined whether he means his wife, a descendant Anne Akerly, or some other relative. If Robert Akerly were his son it is peculiar that he was not mentioned. The complete disassociation of the two families as well as lack of evidence, renders the probability of close relationship very small; although it is reasonable to assume that ultimately they derived from the same family.

The descent from Henry Akerly is traced from his grandchildren, the children of Vincent Simkins. These removed to New Jersey, where there were numerous descendants.

REFERENCES TO ENGLISH FAMILIES SURNAMED AKERLY AND VARIANTS

In the Parish Registers of St. Andrew's Church, Keighley, Yorkshire, as published by the Yorkshire Parish Register Society, there is recorded a Henry Acreley, who was evidently a resident of Keighley. He married twice, first time unknown, who was buried 20 November, 1578. He married 2, Margaret Harper, 21 May, 1581. Issue, by first wife:

1. John, baptised 31 January, 1572.
2. Anne, no record of baptism, buried 24 June, 1579.
3. Robert, baptised 7 October, 1576, buried in January, 1576-1577.

4. George, baptised 1 December, 1577.

Issue, by second wife:

5. Francis, baptised 9 September, 1582, probably the one of Kildwick-in-Craven, Yorkshire, who married at that place, 11 May, 1607, Helena Bolton. He seems to have had a child without benefit of clergy before this by Jane Townsend, for the register states that Franciscus, illegitimate son of Francis Acarlye and Jane Townend was baptised 1 March, 1605. Issue, by Helena Bolton:
   i. Elizabeth, baptised at Kildwick-in-Craven, 17 June, 1607.

   Perhaps others.
6. William, baptised 3 August, 1584.
7. Richard, baptised 9 October, 1586.
8. Margaret, baptised 19 August, 1593.
9. Jane, baptised 27 August, 1596, possibly identical with Jenet, who married Richard Brush at Keighley, 26 November, 1620. See BRUSH.

At Colne, Lancashire, about ten miles from Keighley, Robertus Acringley married Maria Baldwin 16 June, 1612. The wife of Robert Acringley of Wicolor died 8 December, 1610. The relationship, if any, to the following has not been established:

Ellena, daughter of Ja: Cronley de ffolridge, baptised 18 May, 1600 at Colne.
Thomas, dau. (sic) of Georgii Acringley, baptised 24 February, 1601, at Colne.
Robert, son of Georg Acringley, baptised 26 May, 1602, at Colne.

It is possible that the last named was the emigrant, and that his father was the George of Keighley who was baptised there in 1577, son of Henry. This is, however, purely conjectural.

The descendants of Christopher Ackerly appear in Addingham, Yorkshire, from 1688; a son of Robert Ackerly was baptised at Padiham, Yorkshire, 6 July, 1651. In Goosnarch, Lancashire, Thomas Ackerly had three children baptised beginning in 1699; at Blackburn in the same shire James Eakerly had a son baptised in 1652. However the claimed derivation of the Akerly family from Lancashire is not supported by an investigation of the parish registers available; the name is conspicuous for its absence in the sixteenth century.

In Holme Hale, Norfolk, John Akerly married Johanna Mausman, 7 October, 1548; and John Pedder married Johanna Akerlye, 27 September, 1556. The name is scarce, however, in southern England.

The ancestry of Robert Akerly is unknown to us.

6. DOROTHY AKERLY 43
m. STEPHEN ACKERLY or AKERLY son of Ebenezer Akerly and Hannah Fordham

She was born at Patchogue, township of Brookhaven, New York, 7 December, 1744. No baptismal record has been found.

She married probably about 1768 to her first cousin, Stephen Ackerly or Akerly. They resided at Patchogue, where she died 26 January, 1842, at the great age of ninety-~~eight~~ seven years. She was buried probably in the old cemetery on Waverly avenue in the westerly part of Patchogue.

No will is found, and no administration was filed.

For descendants see ACKERLY - AKERLY, under #42.

NOTES

The bible record of her father is owned by George W. Ackerly of Crystal River, Sullivan county, New York, and it has been copied for Bible Records, (New York), vol. XXIX, p. 4, in the library of the National Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution; for further comment see under Nathaniel Akerly. Originally this information was also furnished by the late Orville B. Ackerly; refer to NOTES under Ruth (Ackerly) Furman and Stephen Ackerly or Akerly.

Dorothy Akerly was the daughter of

7. NATHANIEL AKERLY 86
m. DOROTHY TOOKER daughter of John Tooker and Dorothy, perhaps Corey

He was born in the township of Brookhaven, New York, 26 June, 1704. No baptism is of record.

He recorded his earmark for horses in the town records on 25 March, 1728; and next appears with others as giving 5 shillings to William Smith to release Noccomack meadows in the southern part of the township to the townsmen, 1 June, 1734. He protested the partition of the sheep pasture into lots, 14 February, 1737/8, showing evidently that he kept sheep. On 23 April, 1742 he applied with others to the Commissioners of Highways of the township to have Nicoll's path altered, and this leads us to believe that he lived at or near Patchogue.

In the 1741 assessment rating he was taxed for more than any other Akerly of record, perhaps because as the eldest son he had inherited from his father most of his estate, according to the English laws of primogeniture. In 1749, however, his brothers Ebenezer and Phillip had fared better.

He was illiterate. On 24 April, 1738 he quitclaimed with others an acre and a half of land to the Rev. George Phillips, & signed with his mark. The will also exhibits an X mark. Apparently he held no civil office.

He was a signer of the Associations formed to protect the Colonial interests in the war of the American revolution, June, July and August of 1775, and this is the last time he is mentioned other than by his will.

He died in Brookhaven township, 17 February, 1792, and was buried in the cemetery of the Presbyterian church at Setauket where the gravestone still stands. His will, dated 1 September, 1790, was proved 28 February, 1792; it is filed in Liber A, p. 251 of Wills at Riverhead, New York.

He married, probably in 1734, Dorothy Tooker, whom he survived.

Issue:

1. Nathaniel, born 1 August, 1735, probably died young.
2. Elijah, born in Brookhaven township, 26 October, 1737, died 24 June, 1807 at Patchogue, New York. He married Mary Tooker, who died 26 July, 1811, aged 74. Issue:
    i. Nathaniel, born 25 October, 1771, died 5 June, 1851; married 14 February, 1797 to Deborah Satterly, born 25 October, 1772, died 15 February, 1847, daughter of Elnathan and Mary (Reeves) Satterly. Issue:
        A. Mary, born 12 August, 1798, married Madan.
        B. Deborah, born 26 February, 1800.
        C. Dorothy, born 15 September, 1801, married 30 December, 1819, William Wallace. Issue (WALLACE):
            a. Elijah.
            b. Sophia.
            c. Nathaniel.
            d. Nancy Jane, married William Havens Brewster.
            e. Catharine, married Alexander Smith.
        D. Ruth, born 22 March, 1803
        E. Elijah, born 16 April, 1805.

F. Catharine, born 19 September, 1808.
G. Nathaniel, born 2 August, 1812.
H. Sophia, born 8 July, 1814.

3. Ruth, born 22 March, 1740; died young.
4. Ruth, born 11 April, 1742.
5. Dorothy, married Stephen Ackerly or Akerly. See page 73.
6. Martha, born 17 October, 1747.
7. Charity, born 23 September, 1750.
8. Jemima, born 4 February, 1754.
One of the daughters married Nathaniel Davis.

NOTES

In The Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw, reference is had to Book B, pp. 459 and 519; Book C, pp. 187-188. In Records, Town of Brookhaven, edited by the town clerk in 1880, Nathaniel Akerly is mentioned on pages 134, 141, 152, 161 and 172. He is recorded in the Association lists in The Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick G. Mather, p. 1058.

The bible record owned by George W. Ackerly of Crystal River, Sullivan county, New York and referred to under Dorothy (Akerly) Ackerly, was copied by Georgia C. Cockcroft of the Ketewamoke Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Huntington, New York. She says, in the copy: "Record given me by C. B. Darling of Smithtown, N. Y. Mrs. Darling says these records are copied from the family Bible which was in 1920 in the possession of George W. Ackerly of Crystal River, Sullivan Co., New York. Mrs. Darling also says that George W. Ackerly is the grandson of Elijah Ackerly. She herself is granddaughter of Caty Ackerly as is also Mrs. Mary A. Gorman. Catharine Ackerly married Alexander Smith." This bible record, however, needed correction, as it made Dorothy Tooker, the wife of Nathaniel Akerly, to have been Dorothy Satterly, confusing her with Deborah Satterly, wife of the grandson Nathaniel Ackerly, son of Elijah. The bible record as quoted also gives the wife of this last Nathaniel Ackerly as Deborah Ackerly, which is incorrect. See also the Satterly Family in Long Island Genealogies, by Charles Jolly Werner, p. 81; this account is slightly in error as to dates.

Nathaniel Akerly was the son of Robert Akerly, #168; 172. See pages 55 and 56.

DESCENDED OF JEREMY ADAMS OF HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

9. REBECCA ADAMS 329
m. RICHARD RISLEY son of Richard Risley and Mary

She was born at Hartford, Connecticut in August, 1658. No baptismal record is found.

The date of birth is determined from the inventory papers of the estate of her father. She married about 1676 at Hartford to Richard Risley, and thenceforth they resided on the east side of the Connecticut river and south of the Hockanum river in East Hartford.

She died before 1716, presumably at East Hartford. No will is found and administration papers were not filed.

For descendants, see RISLEY, under #328.

NOTES

We are indebted to Arthur Adams, Ph. D., F. S. G., F. S. A.,for information relating to this family. For specific references to record sources, see under the next generations.

Rebecca Adams was the daughter of

10. JOHN ADAMS 658
m. ABIGAIL SMITH daughter of Richard Smith and Rebecca

He was born probably at Hartford, Connecticut, and about 1640. No baptismal record is reported.

In October, 1669 he was reported as a freeman and living on the south side of the "river". There is little other record of him; he died young.

In the inventory of his estate, taken 9 November, 1670,it is stated that he died 6 September, 1670 at Hockanum or East Hartford. The appraisal was made by Jonathan Gilbert, Nathan Willett and Siborn Nichols; the estate totalled 74 pounds,15 shillings and 6 pence. In the Court Record, p. 103, 9 October, 1670, the inventory is reported exhibited. Administration was granted to the widow; John Talcott and Jeremy Adams were desired by the Court to be overseers of the children.

He married at Hartford, Connecticut, 26 August, 1657 to Abigail Smith, who survived him.

Issue:

1. Rebecca, married Richard Risley. See page 77.
2. Abigail, born at Hartford, Connecticut in February, 1660, married before 29 March, 1684 to Edward Higby or Higbie, son of Edward and Jedidah (Skidmore) Higby of Huntington, New York. See Edward Higby and His Descendants, by Clinton David Higby, Ph. D.
3. Sarah, born at Hartford, Connecticut in March of 1662, married as his first wife John Brush of Huntington, New York, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Conklin) Brush. See BRUSH.
4. Jeremiah, born at Hartford, Connecticut in August, 1664; removed to Huntington, New York with his mother and step-father, John and Abigail (Smith) (Adams) Betts. He is recorded in the printed Town Records of Huntington and Babylon, etc., vol. I, p. 529, when John Betts and Abigail his wife conveyed a farm in Crabmeadow to him. He is named in the 1688 assessment at Huntington at a valuation of £39/04/00. On 10 November, 1689 Jeremiah conveyed to his brother Jonathan land which he had of his "father-in-law" (step-father) John Betts (Town Records, II, p. 46); he was to have ten acres of land in the town's right between "Capt Fleet and Mr. Bryant's hollow if the place will afford it" (ib. II, pp. 47, 48); he contributed towards the patent in 1694 and held one half of three hundreds of farm hundreds in Cow Harbor, the other half having been held by Thomas Fleet. He is listed in a rate for Baiting Hollow, 4 October, 1698 (ib. II, p. 127). He is recorded in Hartford 9 February, 1696/7, at which time Jeremiah Adams of Huntington, Long Island, son of John Adams and grandson of Jeremy Adams and nephew of Thomas Greenhill, made his brother-in-law Edward Higby his trustee and attorney. Unprinted indentures in Deeds at Huntington include: a conveyance dated 2 December, 1706 between John Adams and Phoebe his wife, and Jeremiah Adams (I, p. 532); Jeremiah with his wife Deborah conveyed to Thomas Skidmore, 12 March, 1709 (I, p. 584); this wife Deborah had died before 7 February, 1710, as Jeremiah Adams with Rebecca his wife, now of Egg Harbor in Gloucester co., New Jersey, conveyed to Thomas Bunce of Huntington on that date (II, p. 43). Letters of administration were granted to the son Jeremiah, 16 December, 1735. Issue (by which wife not determined):

    ii. Jeremiah, married 5 January, 1738, Mary Homan; lived near Port Republic, New Jersey. His will, dated 26

June, 1742, was proved 26 November, 1742. An abstract is printed in New Jersey Archives, First Series, vol. XXX, Calendar of Wills, vol. 2 (indexed). Issue:

A. David, married Catharine Wood.
B. Joseph, married Sarah Reeves.
C. Jeremiah.
D. Mary.
E. Sarah.
F. Rebecca.

5. John, born at Hartford, Connecticut in September, 1666. He removed to Huntington, New York with his mother and step-father, as did his brothers. He is to be distinguished from a contemporary, John Adams, carpenter, who had come to Huntington from Ipswich, Massachusetts (see WILLIAM ADAMS). John Adams of Hartford is first definitely of record in Huntington, New York when on 6 May, 1690 the land which the widow Betts had conveyed for the use of her children John Adams and John Betts had the title guaranteed by a former owner, Mark Meggs (Town Records, I, p.75). He bought a hundred pound right of the town in 1694; was a resident of Cow Harbor 10 January, 1697 when Jeremiah and Elizabeth Smith deeded him land (ib., II, p. 198); listed in rates for Baiting Purchase 4 October, 1698 (ib., II, p. 227); is called a weaver when with wife Phoebe on 21 February, 1699 he conveyed land to John Conklin (ib., II, p. 238). Unprinted indentures recorded in Deeds at Huntington include: a conveyance from John Adams, weaver and Phoebe his wife to John Conklin(ib., I, p. 405); from the same to Jonathan Rogers junior, 19 May, 1702 (I, p. 436); to John Samwayes (Sammis) 20 May, 1702 (I, p. 451); to Nicholas Smith, 1 March, 1699 (I, p. 457); to Jeremiah Adams (q.v.); to John Sammis 22 December, 1709 (I, p. 604); to Jeremiah Hubbard, 21 April, 1710 (I, p. 624); without wife mentioned 5 May, 1713, to Ephraim Kellum (II, p. 103); to Daniel Lewis, 6 June, 1721 (II, p. 472); to Joseph Stratton 19 September, 1724 (II, p. 579). He was probably the John Adams admitted to membership in the First Church at Huntington 29 August, 1728, the last time he is of record. His wife Phoebe, whose maiden name is unknown, probably died after 21 April, 1710 and before 5 May, 1713. Issue (at least):

i. Jonas, born about 1700 or perhaps later, baptised as adult in the First Church at Huntington, New York, 9 October, 1737. He married in the same church, 24 June, 1736 to Elizabeth Sexton. Issue (the first very certainly, the rest indicated):

A. John, baptised with his father, 9 October, 1737.
B. Elizabeth, baptised 2 March, 1739/40.
C. Phoebe, baptised 12 May, 1742.
D. Sarah, baptised 7 October, 1744.

Perhaps others.

He is listed in the 1688 assessment at that place; received land from his brother Jeremiah 10 November, 1689 (Town Records, II, p. 46); removed to Great Egg Harbor, New Jersey. His will, dated 25 May, 1719, was proved 7 June, 1727; executors were the wife with Peter White of Great Harbor. An abstract is given in New Jersey Archives, First Series, vol. XXIII, Calendar of wills, vol. 1, p. 5. He married Barbara, maiden name not reported. Issue:
   i. Jonathan.
   ii. John, born about 1708, married Mary, perhaps daughter of Peter and Mary Couwenhoven (Conover). In 1767 he had his plantation resurveyed and in 1770 conveyed it in three equal parts to his sons. Issue:
      A. John, married Elizabeth Goodbartlett. His son Daniel had a son James Reading Adams of Pleasantville, New Jersey. The latter married Marietta English and had a son Arthur, born at Pleasantville, 12 May, 1881; married 22 June, 1910 to Emma G. Steelman, born Mays Landing, New Jersey, 31 January, 1880. Arthur Adams has received the degrees of A. B. (Rutgers, 1902); A. M. (Yale, 1903); Ph. D., (1905); B. D., (Berkeley Divinity School, 1910); S. T. M. (Philadelphia Divinity School, 1916); member of the faculty of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, Professor of English and Librarian; member and official of many genealogical and patriotic societies. See also The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy, Vol. I, p. 25.
      B. Jonathan, married Mary

   iv. Margaret
   v. Rebecca.
   vi. Sarah, married John Steelman.
   vii. Mary.
   viii. Dinah.
   ix. Phoebe.
7. Thomas, posthumous, probably died in early manhood.

NOTES

References to John Adams will be found in Manwaring's Probate Records of the Hartford District, vol. I, p. 171; and to the descendants as hereinbefore recited. John Adams was the son of

11. JEREMY ADAMS 1,316
m. REBECCA ( ) GREENHILL

He was born probably in England about 1604. The record of his baptism has not been found.

He is said to have emigrated with Thomas Hooker, settling at first in Braintree, and then in Cambridge, Massachusetts. In the town records of the latter place he is recorded 7 January, 1632 as sharing in the division of the "Common Pales,"& his portion was 2 rods wide. On 5 August, 1635 he received one rood for a cowyard. From the Proprietors' Records of the town of Cambridge, 10 October, 1635, this lot is shown to have been bounded by the lands of Richard Lord, Samuel Stone and Nathaniel Richards. Three other parcels are also recorded to Jeremy Adams in Cambridge: one in "ould ffeild", one in Great Marsh and one on Small Lott Hill. Records conveying title to this land from Jeremy Adams have not been found,but the lot in the old field was described 1 May, 1636 as "late the land of Jeremy Adams." He was made a freeman in Cambridge, 6 May, 1635.

When "the strong bent of their spirits" impelled Mr. Hooker and his congregation to remove to the new town on the Connecticut river in the latter part of 1635 and the spring of 1636, Adams undoubtedly was one of the company. There are no data by which to determine certainly with which of the detachments he came; probably he came in the spring with Hooker since he had his home lot on the south side.

The first record of Jeremy Adams in Connecticut occurs on 5 April, 1638, when it was ordered that six men shall be sent to the Warranock Indians to trade; and moreover "to knoe the reasons why they saide they are affraide of us, and if they will not come to us willingly then to compell them to come by violence, and they may leave 2 of the English as pledges in the meane time....." Jeremy Adams was one of the six.

In August, 1639 he was constable, and de jure assessor and tax collector; except for the townsmen he was the chief executive officer of the settlement. In the distribution of lands made in the same year, Jeremy Adams was in possession of a house lot containing two acres of land on the present Elm street; probably without a house thereon, as on 14 January, 1639 he was allowed a half year more to build. Other lots held by him were: one in the South Meadow, one on the east side of the Great River, one in the Little Meadow and at least two others. He was also in possession of the Greenhill estate, which included the house and home lot at the corner of Main and Buckingham streets in Hartford where he lived. He was undoubtedly resident at this location until he purchased the land of John Morris in 1651, ~~and~~ He became an innkeeper in 1660-1661.

Adams fell under the censure of the Particular Court in 1644. An execution had been issued against Thomas Hosmer by the Court, and Jeremy Adams had encouraged the latter to resist the officer sent to discharge the execution. The Court on 5 March, 1644 thundered forth: "The Court takeing the cariedge of Jeramy Addams into consideration, fynd in his misdemeanor great in adhereing to Tho: Osmor in his misapprehensions about the execution, and giveing his incouridgement by pravoking speches to resist the officer, but especially in his passionat-distempered speeches, lowd languadge and unmannerly cariedge in the face of the Court, to the great offence of the beholders, Require him to appeare at the next particular Court, there to receave such censure as the Court shall conceave his misdemeanor to deserve."

He was granted 300 acres of upland and 40 acres of meadow 31 March, 1661/2, "in the place where he kept cattle last winter, going to Monhegin, and in case there be a plantation there setled, he is to have a double portion according to his estate out of this land now granted; the rest he is to surrend^r to ye Towne." This grant became later the subject of a protracted legal controversy (see NOTES following).

In May, 1660 the General Court voted that none but Jeremy Adams should sell wine under a quart cask, nor liquors under an "Ankor". The same Court voted 15 May, 1662 that he was to improve his house as an Ordinary (inn) according to certain rules and regulations. Hospitable, jolly, Adams rapidly became one of the most famous of the colonial innkeepers of Connecticut.

Adams had bought the property from John Morris, 26 March, 1651. On 26 January, 1661 he mortgaged the property to the colony, probably to obtain money to recondition the building as an inn; on 10 March, 1673, the mortgage was renewed. On 14 January, 1680 Jeremy surrendered the property to the colony, but continued to keep the inn as the agent of the Court until his death in 1683. It has been assumed that he surrendered the inn because he could not maintain it --- that is, the mortgage was foreclosed. Nevertheless at his death he owned more than sufficient property to satisfy the mortgage, and at his death left a moderately large estate. It would seem, therefore, that he was in effect, the agent of the Court; that the mortgage was practically a sale; that the business was not a financial success, and that he relieved himself of the burden by relinquishing the property to the colony, while continuing the business. Two years after Jeremy died, Zachary Sanford, who had married Adams' granddaughter Sarah Willett, redeemed the property and maintained the inn. Sanford died in 1714,and is believed to have been succeeded by his son-in-law Jonathan Bunce, husband of Sarah Sanford. Later Samuel Flagg, who had married Sarah, daughter of Jonathan Bunce, kept the inn as late as 1757. Consequently it is often spoken of as Flagg's tavern.

What the original name of the inn was is not known, but the County Court on 4 December, 1679 ordered Jeremy Adams to set up a complete sign, as they said, he having none as required by law. The inn after that date seems to have been known as the Bunch of Grapes, probably in allusion to the device on the seal of the colony. In Flagg's time, the name was Black Horse Tavern. At this inn the meetings of the Courts of Assistants were held and probably those of the General Court, at least as early as 1 September, 1661, when a deposition alludes to the "Court Chamber" in the house of Jeremiah Adams. The Committee of the General Court on Indian affairs held their meetings there; and it is frequently named as the place of appearance in summons issued by the Governor or the Court of Assistants. In the inventory of Jeremy Adams, the articles of furniture in the Court Chamber are named. The Court was meeting at this inn in 1687, then kept by Sanford, when Captain Wadsworth blew out the light, seized the Charter and hid it in the famous Charter Oak.

In this position of innkeeper Jeremy Adams must have come to know, in the more than twenty years in which he kept the inn, with some degree of intimacy every man of eminence in the colony. The inn was in effect the capitol of Connecticut.The site is well-known; it was originally the home lot of John Steele, the first Secretary of the colony and consisted of slightly over two acres. At the present time it is represented in the site of the Travelers' Insurance building, and probably extended to the Athenaeum property.

On 14 May, 1663 the General Court voted that Jeremy Adams was to be custom master for Hartford, then a somewhat important office, for trade was far from being free between the town and colonies. He was freed from training, watch and ward, 2 March, 1664/5, as he was sixty years of age. In the Winthrop collection of documents in the Connecticut State Library at Hartford are preserved two documents relating to Jeremy Adams. Document 348, probably in Winthrop's hand, is an appointment of a committee as of 1 April, 1667, to examine objects coming from towns afflicted with the smallpox, to prevent danger of infection; Jeremy Adams was on this committee. At a General Town Meeting, 20 February, 1671, he was chosen a townsman for the north side.

He died 11 August, 1683 and received a public funeral, for treasurer Talcott's account book contains a charge for 3 gallons and three quarts of wine for his funeral. The will, dated 4 August, 1683, was proved 6 December, 1683; the amount of the inventory was 243 pounds, 5 shillings and 6 pence. He was buried at Hartford.

Jeremy Adams married 1, and probably at Hartford, Connecticut, about 1639, to Rebecca, widow of Samuel Greenhill. Her maiden name has not been reported. The deposition of William Pitkin in connection with a controversy over the Greenhill estate shows that this wife had died as early as 1678, but the exact date is unknown. He married second to Rebecca Fletcher, daughter of John Fletcher of Middletown, Connecticut, widow of Andrew Warner; she survived him and died at Middletown 27 January, 1715, aged 77. The "widow Adams", doubtless the widow of Jeremy, received her proportion of the Hockanum meadows in the division of 10 March, 1686.

Issue, by first wife:

1. John, married Abigail Smith. See page 77.
2. Hannah, who married before 1660 as his first wife, Jonathan Smith, son of Richard Smith of Wethersfield. She died shortly after marriage and he married 2, Martha Bushnell. See RICHARD SMITH.
3. Hester, died young.
4. Sarah, born at Hartford, Connecticut about 1641, married Nathaniel Willett. This connection has been given incorrectly in previous printed authorities, and we quote Dr. Arthur Adams: "It has been assumed because Jeremy speaks of Zachary Sanford as his grandson that Ann, wife of Robert Sanford, was a daughter of Jeremy Adams, and every person who has had occasion to speak of the family of Jeremy Adams from Savage subsequently has made the statement that she was, including myself in the New England Register article of July, 1905. All the evidence, however, tends to show that she was not. A study of the dates will show that Ann Sanford could not have been a daughter of Rebecca Greenhill; neither is she mentioned in connection with the Greenhill estate. Moreover there is no indication that Jeremy was married before the marriage to Mrs. Greenhill. Zachary is the only one of the numerous progeny of Robert and Ann Sanford that Jeremy ever mentions --- a circumstance difficult to account for if Ann Sanford was really his daughter. Finally the fact that Jeremy calls Zachary Sanford a grandson is sufficiently accounted for, he having married a daughter of Nathaniel Willett. We learn from the plea of John Shepard (Private Controversies, vol. II, document 15) that all of the children of Jeremy Adams were deceased as early as 1679. Furthermore we infer that all except John and Sarah, who later married Nathaniel Willett, were deceased as early as 15 March, 1665/6, when John and Sarah Adams petition the Court to guard their interest in the Greenhill estate. At that time they were just about attaining their majority. In the will of Thomas Greenhill, dated 16 July, 1653, four children of Jeremy and Rebecca Adams are mentioned, namely John, Hannah, Hester and Sarah. We find record of the baptism of another child, Samuel, 23 November, 1645. So five children are known, and of them probably John was the eldest and Samuel youngest, and of them only John and Sarah left issue. There has been considerable uncertainty as to the name of the daughter who married Nathaniel Willett. Savage (in his Genealogical Dictionary of New England) calls her Eleanor, and the Memorial History of Hartford says Hannah, but both are in error." Dr. Adams states that a deed from Nathaniel Willett, 15 December, 1673, records that his wife was named Sarah. The children of Nathaniel and Sarah (Adams) Willett were:

i. Rebecca, married in 1690 to Thomas Rumney of Middletown, Connecticut.
ii. Abigail, married John Bishop of New Haven.
iii. Sarah, married Zachary Sanford, son of Robert and Ann Sanford.
iv. Hannah, married in 1697 to Baysey Baker.

5. Samuel, baptised at Hartford, 23 November, 1645. No further record.

NOTES

Dr. Arthur Adams presented a memoir of Jeremy Adams as a paper before the Connecticut Historical Society, 3 February, 1914. He has very generously allowed us to present it here, and the following is largely his own text.

The descendants of this family are well established from several controversies which arose in the disposition of the estates of Samuel and Thomas Greenhill and of Jeremy Adams. The 300 acres of land and 40 acres of meadow which the latter was granted, 31 March 1661/2 was supplemented on 11 March, 1662/3 by an additional grant of 300 acres of land to the son John Adams "at ye place where his father Adams took up land in ye way to N. London, whereof thirty acres of meadow ioyning to his father or Nicholas Olmstead. He relinquisheth his right at Fairfield." The language of the first grant to Jeremy Adams deserves careful attention, for sixty years later it became the subject of a long litigation. The statement ".....in case there be a plantation there setled, he is to have a double portion according to his estate out of this land now granted; the rest he is to surrend^{r} to ye Towne." What does this mean? His estate where? Dr. Adams confesses himself unable to determine the meaning of the Court's words, and the members of the General Court sixty years later did not seem to be sure. Jeremy and John Adams held and enjoyed the use of these grants during their lifetime to all intents and purposes; but apparently the heirs of their estate neglected to exercise their title, thinking these lands of little or no value.

On 13 October, 1698 the General Court sitting at Hartford passed the following:

> This court upon the petition of divers of the inhabitants of the countie of Hartford, grant liberty for a plantation at or near the place called Jeremiah's Farme upon the rode to New London and Capt^{n} Dan^{ll} Witherell Capt. John Hamlin, Mr: Will Pitkin, Capt^{n} Samll Fosdick, they or the maj^{r} part of them, are by this court appointed to be a committee to lay out a township there, beginning at the north bound of Twentie Mile River, and so to extend southward, to a river called Deep River, and to extend eastward from the bounds of Haddum seven miles.

On 11 May, 1689 the boundaries of the "new plantation lately granted at or near Jeremies Farm, upon the roade to New London" were changed so that it bounded on the south on Lyme, on the west on Middletown and Haddam, and on the east and northeast on Lebanon and Norwich. A patent was granted 13 May, 1703 to the proprietors of Colchester for the whole township, and in May, 1704, the inhabitants were forbidden to abandon the town on the "breaking forth of warre on pain of forfeiting their lands." The name Colchester seems to have been used first in 1699 when on 13 October of that year Michael Taintor and Samuel Northam with Nathaniel Foote appeared before the General Assembly in behalf of the new plantation now called Colchester, and complained that they were obstructed in the improvement and settlement of their plantation by reason of several persons who claimed considerable tracts of land within the grant of the said township, and particularly several of the inhabitants of Saybrook. The court ordered that all persons claiming any lands there > ....shall appear at the Generall Court in May next, and make their claims appear, that so the Grantees may not be further obstructed in their settlement of said plantation and that the name of that plantation shall be called Colchester and belong to the County of New London, and further that this act be transmitted to the severall towns where any person claiming land, there doe reside that so thay may have reasonable notice thereof.

There is nothing in the record to show that any one appeared in response to this notice. Both Jeremy and John Adams were dead, all the children of Jeremy were dead, and none of the Adams name lived in Connecticut to conserve the interest of the family in the Colchester lands, if indeed any of the heirs of Jeremy or John were aware that they had any interest.

Perhaps all might have gone well and the proprietors of Colchester might have remained in peaceful possession of "Jeremy's Farm" if one Ebenezer Coleman, a tanner, who settled in Colchester about 1702, had not in an unlucky hour, learned of the grant to Jeremy Adams. On April 10, 1711, he purchased of Richard Risley what he believed to be a one-half interest in the grant to Jeremy Adams, apparently not knowing of the grant to John Adams, since he is not mentioned in the proceeding. In May of 1720 the heirs of Jeremy Adams petitioned the General Court for a decision as to the validity of the grant to Jeremy Adams, and 13 October of 1720 the Court voted > Upon consideration of the petition of the heirs of Jeremiah Adams; Resolved by this Assembly, that the grant made to said Addams by this Assembly, March 13, 1661/2 was good for a double portion of allotment in the town of Colchester, notwithstanding those words in said grant, viz., (according to his estate). (Colonial Records, vol. VI, p. 215; Connecticut State Library, Hartford, Conn., Towns and Lands, vol. V., Document 194).

Accordingly the heirs petitioned the Court at its May meeting to appoint a committee of prudent and indifferent men to lay out the land, since the county surveyor was a prejudiced party and since > ....they conceive that their Remedy in the Common Law is very Dubious----yes----rather that they have none there.

The petitioners are Thomas Ranney of Middletown and Rebecca his wife, Baisey Baker of Middletown and Hannah his wife, Abigail Bishop of New Haven, widow, Sarah Bunce of Hartford, widow, John Bunce junior of Hartford and Abigail his wife, Joseph Bunce of Hartford, father and natural guardian of Abijah Bunce, and Ebenezer Coleman of Colchester. They recite the grant to Jeremy Adams in 1661/2; the decision of the Court as to the validity of the grant; that Jeremy Adams in his will, dated 8 August, 1683, devided one half to the children of his son John, and one half to his son-in-law Nathaniel Willett's children; that all the children of John Adams, except Rebecca, wife of Richard Risley, are departed out of "this government", and for all what the petitioners know died without issue "whereby ye whole moiety fell to the said Rebecca Risley, who conveyed her interest to Coleman; that the other half came to Rebecca Ranney, Hannah Baker, Abigail Bishop and Sarah Sanford, mother of Sarah and Abigail Bunce and grandmother of Abijah Bunce, only child of Anne, late wife of Joseph Bunce, in equal shares; that Sarah Sanford was deceased and her fourth part had fallen to Sarah, Abigail and Anne Bunce; that Anne being deceased, her part belonged to her only son Abijah;etc. These parties estimated that 580 acres of the divided land belonged to them, beside their interest in the common land; they said that the town of Colchester

> .....have laid the very land of Jeremiah Addams farm into ye home lots and refuse to lay out any allotment to yr Petitioners.

In compliance with the petition the General Court, 11 May, 1721, appointed Mr. Hezekiah Brainerd, Mr. John Sprauge and Thomas Kimberly or any two of them "to be a committee at the charge and expense of the petitioners, to survey and lay out the said division to them accordingly."

The townspeople of Colchester, who had believed their titles in these premises to be secure, were not slow to act. In the State Library at Hartford, in Towns and Lands, vol. V, Document 195b reports the difficulties of this surveying committee:

> To the Generall Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut at their session at Newhaven, October 1721. The Report of John Sprague, Hez. Brainerd, and Thomas Kimberly -- humbly Sheweth
> That Whereas by an Act of this Assembly in May last Wee were appointed to Lay out Savrall parcells of Land to the heirs of Jeremy Addams in the Township of Colchester - Pursuant to sd Act of Assembly wee mett at Colchester on the 19th day of June following, and the next day We went forth (being led, directed, and Accompanyed by Mr. Rt Sanford, Ebenezer Coleman, and John Bunce who represented part of sd heirs, whom we desired to carry us to Land truely undivided as the act directs) in Order to begin our work of Surveying, and being attended with a great number of men and boys (of which the Town Streets Seemed to be full, almost from the time of our Intring into it, to that time) the Said men on horse backs to the number of 50 or 60 as we suppose upon our Assaying to Sett up the Surveying Instruments did Ride and Crowd in earnest and vehement manner So close to Said Instruments and other Implements of Surveying, as would have thrown and probably broken sd Instrument had it not been carefully held up, and did bend with treading upon the chain, and Some what damnifie other of sd Implements, and upon our attempting to Stretch out sd Chain many of Sd persons did in huddling and earnest manner ride across said Chain and broke it, and broke five links at least of it from the two parts which we kept which 5 links by Searching diligently for could not then be found. Whereupon seeing the great Resistance they made and were likely to make, wee desisted from any further proceeding in the affair under hand, and being informed we were likely to meet with the Same opposition, if we returned at an other time. We thought it best to lett the matter rest till we could lay the State of it Before this Honorable Assembly, that so your Honours may take such further Consideration therein, and measures their as to your Hons in your Wisdom Shall seem meet and Convenient.

We are your Hon^rs humble Servants,
John Sprague, Hez. Brainerd, Thos. Kimberly.

To the same Court, the Proprietors of Colchester present in a lengthy document their side of the case. They recited that they have been in actual possession since the grant of 1698; that one allotment amounted to more than the 340 acres granted to Jeremy; that the heirs insisted on the validity of a deed from the Indians to Jeremy Adams for near half the town; that they had paid taxes, made improvements and otherwise had developed the settlement, for which the Adams heirs had paid nothing, although the value of the land was increased; that all land had been divided for most purposes, except the necessary commons; that the Committee of the Court proposed to survey the land to the Adams heirs in small lots, even in the Commons, wherever they could find good enough land; and that they had resisted the surveyors only to gain time to lay their case before the Court. They professed their surprise that the General Court had granted to the Adams heirs one thousand acres, more or less, of their best land, worth £2000 when Jeremy was to have only 340 acres in a definite place. They said that the Adams heirs might have shared with them at the first, but thought the land of no value, and did not care to risk anything with them.

The General Court resolved after hearing the petition to let the matter go over until the next meeting in May, and to direct the committee to survey to suspend proceedings until the further order of the court.

The General Court was not unmindful of its dignity nor of the respect due to its lawful representatives, and on the acquittal by the County Court of those persons indicted for resisting the surveyors, it appointed Jonathan Law and John Hall of the Upper House and George Clark and Captain Samuel Maltbie of the Lower House to investigate the action of the County Court; this was in May, 1722. The report of this Committee is not found of record.

At the meeting of the Court in October, 1722,

Upon consideration of the petition of the committee of > Colchester vs. Heirs of Jeremiah Adams: Resolved by this Assembly, that by virtue of the grant of this Court 13 March, 1701/2, to Jeremiah Addams, he was allowed to be a proprietor to lands in the plantation which should afterwards be erected in the place which is now called Colchester; and that his heirs or assigns ought to be admitted to whatsoever may be his just proportion in said plantation, according to the rules and methods by which the proprietors of lands in that plantation have divided the said lands among themselves.

With this evasive method of disposing of the matter, the General Court seemed to have been satisfied, and no doubt intended to divest itself of further responsibility in the matter. In October 1722 it refused the petition of Coleman to appoint a Committee to see that the Proprietors of Colchester gave them justice. Coleman and the Adams heirs were helpless, since the General Court refused aid, and since the Colchester proprietors would do nothing. But hope springs eternal, and for many years Coleman and his son petitioned the General Court for relief.

Up to this time no mention had been made of the grant to John Adams, but John Read of Lonetown (Redding) and Ebenezer Coleman at the October meeting of the Court in 1723 petitioned to have someone appointed to lay out three fifths of John Adams' grant, reciting that they had purchased three fifths of the grant from the Adams heirs, and alleging that the people of Colchester intended to defraud them of this as well as of Jeremiah Addams' farm. An original deed from John and Jonathan Adams, sons of John and grandsons of Jeremy, dated 6 November, 1721, is on file in the State Library. In October of 1725 Coleman petitioned that the decision of 1722 be reversed, or so explained as to give Jeremy a double proportion as proprietor; the matter went over to May, 1726, when the petition was denied. Again in October, 1733 Coleman petitioned for land elsewhere in lieu of the Colchester land, and the petition was denied because of a failure of the two houses to concur. In May, 1734 the petition was renewed, and this time denied. The matter was brought up again in May, 1746, when Niles Coleman of Hebron, son of Ebenezer, petitioned for permission to take up the land granted to John Adams anywhere in the colony. He recited that his father "had consumed all his substance and dyed" in the contest for the land, and since "Right does sometimes Sleep, yet (it) never dies" he asks for the granting of his petition. Other petitions were without effect.

To conclude the Colchester land case, then, it may be said that Jeremy Adams was, at least so far as actual possession and the decision of the General Court could make him, the founder and original proprietor of the town of Colchester, an honor which has never been accorded to him.

An abstract of the will of Jeremy Adams of Hartford is printed in Manwaring's Probate Records of the Hartford District, vol. I, as indexed; it states that the original will appears in Liber IV of Wills at Hartford, pp. 127-129. The grant of land from the Indians to Jeremy Adams, mentioned in the foregoing in the outline of the difficulties with Colchester, was recorded at Hartford, and has been printed in Connecticut and the Mohegan Indians, published at London in 1769, p. 176.

General accounts of Jeremy Adams are numerous. Dr. Arthur Adams published an outline of the family in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 59, pp. 315+. William H. Powers in 1921 published the Powers-Banks Ancestry, and gives a biography; another appears in Roberts' Towns of the Connecticut Valley, at page 204. The Rev. William De Loss Love, Ph. D., in The Colonial History of Hartford, describes the function of inns in the early days of the Colony, and draws a parallel from English custom. Dr. Love waxes lyrical in his account, but discounting this, it is useful to quote him in part:

> (Page 215)....In England, courts of that time were frequently convened at inns, and are sometimes to this day. At the inn, members could stable their horses and find lodgings and entertainment for themselves. The hall was a suitable meeting place.
> (Page 233)....Jeremy Adams was doubtless a typical landlord. He was a man of some standing in the town, had been a constable, and in 1638, was twice appointed to attend Captain Mason in trading with the Indians for corn. On some public matters he seems to have been considered an authority.... He was careless in his financial management; a man, too, it is thought, who had some personal idiosyncracies. And yet he was apparently the inhabitants' or Court's choice to succeed Thomas Ford as innkeeper. Probably he had some affable or generous characteristics, which made him a good entertainer with wit and wisdom, as well as in the culinary department. At least his inn was a popular resort for social life. It stood some rods back from the roadway. In front of it there was a well. A garden and outbuildings were conveniently placed in the rear. It was just such an inn as a man, who was nearly thirty years old when he left England, would have established in a new country --- as much like the old inn of his native town as it could be. The same scenes transpired within it, as are recorded of famous hostelries across the sea. There, the habitues discussed political issues, named their candidates for the next town meeting or the Colonial Government, and by unanimous consent drank to their military heroes..... That old inn probably witnessed many a festive scene about Landlord Jeremy's hospitable board.....

In Peck, Adams and Allied Families, prepared and privately printed for Rebecca P. Dusenbery and Belle P. Bryant, by the American Historical Society, Inc., certain connections are given for Jeremy Adams on page 57. The statement is made that Jeremy Adams was derived from the line of Henry Adams which settled in Braintree, Massachusetts. We know of no competent authority which supports such a connection, implied or otherwise.

The ancestry of Jeremy Adams is unknown to us.

DESCENDED OF WILLIAM ADAMS OF IPSWICH, MASSACHUSETTS

FIRST AND SECOND LINES

12. HANNAH ADAMS 3,937; 4,065
m. FRANCIS MUNCY

She was born probably at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and about 1639. No baptismal record has been reported.

She married at Ipswich, Massachusetts, 6 December, 1659 to Francis Muncy, then of Ipswich; they removed shortly afterward to Brookhaven, New York, where she resided during his lifetime. After June, 1675 and before 5 February, 1677, as his widow, she married 2, John Ramsden of Newtown, New York, widower of Sarah Gray of that place.

John Ramsden died in 1686 leaving her a widow for the second time. His will, dated 20 September, 1686, was proved 12 October, 1686; it mentions a daughter Mary, although it has not been possible to ascertain by which wife he had this child.

Hannah (Adams)(Muncy) Ramsden married 3, after 12 October, 1686 and before 4 October, 1687 to Thomas Wickingham of Newtown, widower. She was living 11 June, 1707 when the inventory of his estate was presented, he having died intestate.

It is not known when or where she died; she left no will of discovered record, and no administration papers were filed.

For descendants see MUNCY, under #3,936; #4,064.

NOTES

The marriage record of Hannah Adams has been published in the Vital Records of Ipswich, Massachusetts, as published by The Essex Institute in 1910, vol. II, p. 315. For references to Brookhaven records see under MUNCY, and also The Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw, Book B, p. 117, wherein John Ramsden of Newtown calls John and Samuel Muncy of Brookhaven his sons-in-law (that is, step-sons). See also Liber 3/4 of Wills at New York city, New York, for the will of John Ramsden, p. 167; the inventory of Thomas Wickingham is recorded in the same place in Liber 5/6 of Wills, p. 470. In Liber A of Deeds at Jamaica, New York, p. 26 appears a conveyance from John Ramsden to Cornelius Berrien of Flatbush and Abraham Youss of Flatlands, dated 3 October, 1684. This was recorded 4 October, 1687 and ratified by the widow, then Hannah Wickingham, 16 November, 1687.

The Town Records of Brookhaven call her the "widow Muncy" 1 October, 1679, after she had married John Ramsden; she is the person meant, without doubt. The explanation seems to be that the Town Clerk found this to be the easiest way of referring to her, unless her second marriage to John Ramsden was unknown to him.

It has been stated that Hannah, as the widow of Francis Muncy, married 2, John Kimball. In The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 50, at p. 488 appears a note which refers to a query in vol. 18 of the same publication, at page 244; this quotes from "an old account book thus":

> Mothere Adams wente to live at brother John Kimbals the fiftene day of decembere 1680.

This entry is explained by the note, signed J. R. K., which says that Hannah Adams of Ipswich, born before 1641, daughter of William Adams, married secondly John Kimball; and by implication infers that the widow of William Adams is the "Mothere Adams" of the account book record. In The Old Families of Salisbury and Amesbury, Massachusetts, by David Webster Hoyt, and published in 1897, the following appears at page 225:

> A John Kimball married Hannah Adams (wid. of Francis Muncy), after 1660.

In the next year (1898) an article on the William Adams family was published in volume 2 of The Essex Antiquarian, at page 88, and this says that Hannah Adams married first to Francis Muncy and second, perhaps, John Kimball. However the parties interested in the Kimball connection seem to have been unhappy about the certainty of this, and in vol. 10 of the Antiquarian, p. 137, William Lincoln Palmer of Cambridge states that "It was Hannah (Adams) Muncey's (sic) ..... son John Muncey's widow Hannah who married John Kimball."

It is evident that none of these investigators examined records on Long Island. It is utterly unreasonable, in the light of present evidence, to assign John Kimball as a husband of Hannah (Adams) (Muncy) (Ramsden) Wickingham; and the descendants of John Kimball bear the burden of proving such a connection. As to Mr. Palmer's allegation that John Muncy's widow married John Kimball, it must be borne in mind that she is stated to have married second to Samuel Thompson of Brookhaven. Admittedly, Benjamin F. Thompson's pedigree of his ancestry as given in the famous History of Long Island has been subjected to severe criticism, but we have reason to believe Mr. Thompson correct in this instance. If so, a re-analysis will have to be made of the Kimball-Adams relationship. See also MUNCY and BREWSTER.

Hannah Adams is stated to have been the daughter of William Adams of Ipswich in an early compilation on the family published in 1881 by William S. Appleton; this was issued as a reprint of an article in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register. The accounts of this family which have been printed by other writers have quite generally followed his, although the evidences upon which the present connection rests have not been published. We find it very probable, however, that Mr. Appleton was correct.

Hannah Adams was the daughter of 13. WILLIAM ADAMS {7,874 / 8,130

m.

It is alleged that he was born at Wem, Shropshire, 3 February, 159¾, and baptised in the parish church at that place, 10 February 159¾. The proof of the identity is not found.

He was undoubtedly the William Adams of Cambridge in the Massachusetts Bay Colony who was made freeman, 22 May, 1639. He was a commoner of Ipswich, 31 January, 1642, which shows that he had removed to that town sometime before. Adams is most frequently of record as a juryman, and he served continuously in that capacity with little interruption until 1659. On the 28th day of 10th month, 1647 he was discharged from the compulsory military service of the Colony because of his age; this maturity, however, was useful in rendering wise decisions on the grand jury.

William Adams was granted twelve acres of land 27 February, 1644, "beyond Mr Appletons his farme near to the Land of the Widdow Stacye as may be convenient to be laide out by Mr Appleton, John Whipple and the lott layers." On 19 July, 1654 William Payne of Ipswich, merchant, sold to William Adams of the same place, miller, six and three quarter acres of marsh for nine pounds. The deed was witnessed by William Goodhue and recorded in 1701.

William Adams senior died shortly before 26 March, 1662, on which date his will was proved; an agreement was signed between the sons Nathaniel and Samuel, 24 April, 1668, dividing the property. He probably died at Ipswich, and probably was buried there.

There is some reason to believe that he married more than once, but the identity of the wife or wives is not found. A wife survived him; the widow was living in 1668.

Issue:

1. William, born probably in England about 1620; on 28 March, 1654 a resident of Ipswich, Massachusetts, when he was on the Jury of Trials. He served again on this jury 25 March, 1656, and also, probably, 30 March, 1658. He was a witness to the will of Mark Quilter of Ipswich, proved 28 March, 1654, and proved the will of Thomas Scott of Ipswich the same time. His short life was terminated 18 January, 1658/9, and he was presumably buried at Ipswich. Administration of the intestate estate was granted to his father and brother John Adams, and the inventory amounting to £218 was produced in court 24 January, 1658/9. The administration was dated 29 March, 1659; the overseers were Elder John Whipple and Thomas Stacy. He married about 1647/8, Elizabeth, termed daughter of Simon Stacy of Ipswich; she was born about 1630, and died in 1655. Issue:
   i. William, born at Ipswich, Massachusetts, 27 May, 1650, died at Dedham, Massachusetts, 17 August, 1685. He was a well known Minister of the Gospel. He married first to Mary Manning, daughter of William and Dorothy Manning of Cambridge, who died 24 June, 1679. His second wife was Alice Bradford, daughter of Major William and Alice (Richards) Bradford of Plymouth. Issue.
   ii. Simon, born about 1652 at Ipswich, Massachusetts, died there 17 October, 1723. He was a soldier in the Narragansett campaign. The maiden name of his wife Hannah is unknown; she died at Ipswich, 6 May, 1727. Issue.
   iii. John, born at Ipswich about 1653, removed to Huntington, New York, where he is listed on the rate list of 1673 for 2s 6d. He appears in the Town Records of Oyster Bay when on 28 December, 1681, he desired to erect a grist mill and saw mill, and received a grant of land for that purpose. He was a miller and carpenter and as such is to be distinguished from his contemporary John Adams, weaver, descended of Jeremy Adams of Hartford, Connecticut (see JEREMY ADAMS). This grant at Oyster Bay may have been near Cold Spring, as on 1 April, 1682, the townsmen of Huntington voted that John Adams shall have the town's right "of the stream called by the name of Cold Spring to set up a good sufficiant grist mill and saw mill upon it." His business, however, does not seem profitable, for, 22 December, 1687, if the town and Jonathan Rogers agree about the sawmill, "John Adams will resign up his right therein." In the 1688 assessment he is listed as a carpenter. At a town meeting, 2 April, 1689 it was voted that he was to have a 100 pound right of land from the first settlement of the town, he to pay the town £5 therefor within one year. On 1 April, 1690, thirty acres of land were granted to John Adams of the mill dam, and at the northwest end of Dicks Hills. His influence and popularity in the town increased. He was chosen assessor 3 July, 1691; townsman, 2 April, 1692; assessor again, 3 April, 1693, re-elected in 1694, trustee of the township, 7 May 1695, and assessor and supervisor the same date. He was trustee again 2 May, 1699. In 1701, John Adams, formerly of Ipswich, but now of Huntington, New York, carpenter, sold to Michael Farley of Ipswich his rights to six and three quarters acres of land in Ipswich for £34. He signed a quit-right to the estate of Captain Simon Stacy in 1717, and was then still of Huntington. Attempts to prove issue have been unsuccessful. It is possible that relatives may have lived in Newtown, New York.

2. John, born probably in England about 1630, and before 1632, died at Ipswich, Massachusetts before 12 December, 1703, and after 26 July, 1702, intestate. He married 1, about 1665 to Rebecca, maiden name not found, who died there 31 December, 1666, probably in child-birth. He married 2, before 25 September, 1667 to Sarah (Woodman) Brocklebank, born about 1630, died at Ipswich, 31 May, 1676, probably in child-birth, daughter of Archelaus and Elizabeth Woodman of Newbury, Massachusetts, and widow of Ensign John Brocklebank of Rowley. He married 3, at Ipswich 8 May, 1677 to Dorcas (Watson) Dwight, born about 1639, died at Ipswich as his widow 9 November, 1707, aged 68, daughter of John Watson and widow of Timothy Dwight. Issue, by first wife:

i. Child, died 31 December, 1666.

Issue, by second wife:

ii. John, born 11 March, 1667/8, married 22 May, 1690, Hannah Treadwell, who died 23 October, 1733. He was a miller; died in March, 1717/8.

iii. Mary, born 26 August, 1670, died 16 June, 1734 at Ipswich; married there about 1688 to Joseph Whipple, born at Ipswich 17 September, 1665, died at that place 14 December, 1729, son of Lieutenant John and Mary (Stephens) Whipple. Issue.

iv. Archelaus, born about 1673, married 1, Sarah(Coker) March; 2, Sarah Green, widow; 3, Dorothy (Carr) (Frees) Clement and 4, Mary Pearson, widow.

v. Son, born in May, 1676, died 2 June, 1676.

Issue, by third wife:

NOTES

One of the earliest printed references to this family will be found in the Early Inhabitants of Ipswich, Massachusetts, written by Abraham Hammatt in 1854 and edited by Augustine Caldwell in 1880, at p. 5. In the next year William S. Appleton of Boston published Some Descendants of William Adams of Ipswich, Massachusetts, as a reprint of an article in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register. A genealogy of the family was given in The Essex Antiquarian, vol. 2, p. 88, issued in March, 1898; and in other general works this was followed by an incorrect outline in New England Families, Genealogical and Memorial, edited by William Richard Cutler and published in 1913. More recently studies of certain branches of the family have been made, notably by Winifred Lovering Holman and Mary Lovering Holman, in Descent From William Adams of Ipswich, Massachusetts, and compiled for Mrs. Homer Clark of St. Paul, Minnesota; a type-written copy is on file in the Library of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society.

Raymon Meyers Tingley in his Some Ancestral Lines, published in 1935, at page 7 lists certain connections of William Adams. He confuses, like many of his predecessors, the death date of the son William Adams with that of his father; and states also that William Adams senior was born 3 February, 1594 in Shropshire. The list of the latter's children is augmented by Sarah, born in England in 1627, died 3 December, 1643, aged 16; Thomas, born in England in 1629, died 10 July, 1649, aged 20; Patience, born in 1633, died 6 November, 1648, aged 15; Elizabeth, born at Cambridge, Massachusetts in 1637, died 1 July, 1651, 14 years old. We have not seen the evidences for the connections of these children, and have preferred to follow Appleton's account. Miss Winifred L. Holman queried the writer as to the documentation of the connection of Hannah Adams, and it must be admitted that publication of the legal proof is not yet forthcoming.

Mr. Tingley gave William Adams junior a daughter Mary, born in 1648 at Ipswich, and who is said to have married Edward Stephens; and also a daughter Patience, born 18 December, 1654. In Records and Files of the Quarterly Court of Essex Co., Massachusetts, vol. 2, p. 150, a report of the disposition of the estate of William Adams junior is printed. This states that > William Addams, father, and John Addams, brother of William Addams jr. of Ipswich, were appointed administrators of the latter's estate. The inventory amounted to £218. The estate was distributed to the eldest son William, one half, and one fourth to each of the other two children, when they were of the age of twenty one years.

It remains to be explained, in view of the above record, why any other children (if any) were not mentioned in the distribution.

Other references in the Records and Files, etc., as quoted, are: Vol. 1, p. 40 (William Adams senior on the second trial jury); p. 107 (same, on jury of trials, 29/7/1646); p. 130 (William Adams senior discharged from training on account of his age, 28/10/1647); p. 145 (William Adams on the grand jury, 26/7/1648);p.161 (William Adams of the grand jury find for not appearing; fine remitted); p. 260 (same on grand jury, 28/7/1652); p. 308 (witness); p. 396 (on grand jury, 25/7/1655). In vol. 2: p. 111 (on grand jury 28/7/1658); p. 150 (administration on the estate of William Adams junior, which see); and p. 197, where a record may provide a clue as to certain family connections of William Adams senior. This is as follows:

> There being a complaint made against Joseph Medcalfe, as appeared by a testimony upon oath of Left. Samuel Appleton, William Addams and Robert Day, which the court judged they were not in a capacity to issue, on account of the law of near relation, the court left it to Mr. Samuel Symond, who ordered said Medcalfe to appear at the next General Court.

The pronoun "they" may refer to the court.

In The Ancient Records of the Town of Ipswich, edited and published by George A. Schofield, volume 1 (unpaged) refers to the land of the senior William Adams under date of 27 February, 1644. William Adams junior was of age 19 December, 1648, when he with his father contributed to the gratuity to be offered to Major Denison for his military services. A picture of the homestead of William Adams will be found in the Ancestry of R.B.Collins.

In The Probate Records of Essex County, Massachusetts, at vol. 1, p. 366 as printed, is given the agreement among the surviving sons of William Adams senior after his death.

THE ALLEGED ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF WILLIAM ADAMS OF IPSWICH, MASS.

In History of the Thomas Adams and Thomas Hastings Families of Amherst, Mass., published in 1880 and by Herbert Baxter Adams, at page 17 is the following footnote:

> The genealogy of the Ipswich line of Adamses (that is, of William of Cambridge 1635 and Ipswich ante 1642) has been worked up by Prof. C. K. Adams of the University of Michigan, and it will be incorporated into the History of the Adams family, by Mr. N. D. Adams, at least so I have been informed by Dr. Henry C. Adams of Waterloo, Iowa, and late Fellow of Johns Hopkins University.

We have not been able to trace out fully the results of the efforts of these gentlemen, but we understand that some of their information was supplied to Henry Whittemore who published in 1893 a History of the Adams Family; and in this the present writer has found what appears to be the earliest statement of the birth date of William Adams:

> William Adams of Ipswich, the ancestor of this branch of the family, was born in England, February 3d, 1594, came to America in the spring of 1628.....

This chronicle was extended in Americana in vol. 22 (1928) at page 432, in an article entitled "Adams and Allied Families" by E. C. Finley, since deceased. This pedigree follows:

> The family traced below is believed to be of Saxon origin, springing from Randall Adams, of Norwood, a small village in the town of Wem, Shropshire, England. Their ancestors in England were respectable, industrious men of firm religious principles, and were generally found on the side of the Puritans, in all the religious and political persecutions from 1604 to 1640, and this determined character caused them and other families of the same name to leave their native land and flee to America.
> I. Randall Adams, a descendant of one of the old Saxon families, which settled in England, had a son Thomas, of whom further.
> II. Thomas Adams, son of Randall Adams, was born in 1558. He married Margaret Erpe, and they had a son William, of whom further.
>
> (The Family in America)
> I. William Adams, son of Thomas and Margaret (Erpe)Adams, was born in England, February 3, 1594, and died in Ipswich, Massachusetts, January 2, 1659 (sic). He came to America about 1628, among the original immigrants of the Massachusetts Colony, and settled first in Cambridge, but in 1642 removed to Ipswich, where he took up a large tract of land on the Ipswich River, on the site of what is now Hamilton, Massachusetts. The farm which he cultivated remained in the family, being handed down through will or inheritance for over two hundred and fifty years. He had four sons and probably, other children.....

This pedigree terminates in Ruth Charlotte and Elizabeth L. Adams. The proofs cited by Mr. Finley are thoroughly non-specific.

Following this James Taylor Adams in a publication dated 1929, obviously copies the Whittemore statement in his Adams Family Records, at page 8:

William (Adams) Born in England, February 3, 1594, he came to America in the spring of 1628. Settled first at Cambridge, then at Newtown, Massachusetts (sic) where he was made freeman in 1639, removed from thence to Ipswich, Massachusetts prior to 1642, where he died in 1661. He is said to have descended from Randall Addams, of an old Saxon family of Norwood, town of Wem, in Shropshire.

Winifred Lovering Holman in a letter to the writer dated 20 Nov. 1939, observes:

Page 4, of my 1933 report cites:

"A statement has been made that this particular William Adams was born in Wem, in Salop, England, 3 February, 1594, and that he married in 1619. But as no proof was offered in this connection the statement alone means nothing.*

*See typed statement pasted on page 41, Volume 8, New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Reference shelves, Library of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, Boston, Mass., signed 1 March 1933, by F. L. Moore."

If William Adams or Addams was the son of Thomas Addams and Margaret Erpe (Herpe, Harpe, Harper) he was apparently baptised in the parish church at Wem in the diocese of Litchfield, 10 February, 1593/4, seven days after his reported birth on 3 February in 1593/4. He was also putatively a brother of Sir Thomas Adams, one-time Mayor of London, no Puritan, but a staunch Royalist. In volumes 9 and 10 of the publications of The Shropshire Parish Register Society the parish registers of Wem have been printed. Entries relating to the Adams or Addams family of Wem are numerous; although nothing is afforded whereby a positive identification of William Adams of Ipswich could be made with any of a similar name therein.

Thomas Addams, a tanner, tentatively and presumably son of Randall Adams, was buried at Wem, 23 August, 1607. He is stated to have married Margaret Erpe, the latter surname apparently a variant of Harpe or Harper. We construct this family from these registers as follows:

Issue of Thomas Addams and Margaret Erpe:

1. Mary, married Lawrence Whittakers, 30 November, 1606.
2. A son, name not given, baptised in March, 1584. He is perhaps to be identified with Randall, who was a butcher in Wem, and who married 31 May, 1605 to Margery, dau. of John Wrighte. His wife was buried 30 December, 1618. Issue (at least):
    i. Jane, baptised 7 July, 1605 (sic).

ii. Mary, baptised 22 February, 1606.
iii. Agas, baptised 1 November, 1609, buried 2 August, 1610.
iv. Anne, baptised 30 September, 1611.
v. John, baptised 2 January, 1613.
vi. Richard, baptised 4 October, 1616.
vii. Isabel, baptised 30 June, 1620.
viii. Anne, baptised 26 December, 1621.

3. Thomas, knight, baptism not found, born about 1586. Biographies of this gentleman appear in An Essay Towards a Topographical History of the County of Norfolk, by the late Rev. Charles Parken, A. M., commonly designated as "Blomefield's Norfolk", vol. 5, page 1374; Memorials of Old Shropshire, edited by Thomas Auden, M. A., F. S. A., (1906), page 229; A Genealogical and Heraldic History of the Extinct and Dormant Baronetcies of England, etc., by the well known John Burke, Esq., published in 1844. Thomas Addams or Adams seems to have been a man of some ability. He took a degree at Jesus college, Cambridge, where later he founded the Readership of Arabic. As a woollen-draper settled in London he became wealthy, turned to politics and was sheriff of the city in 1639. By 1645 he had become Lord Mayor of London after serving as Alderman; was knighted, and became a baronet 13 June, 1660. The latter honor was undoubtedly because he advanced £10,000 to the king at a critical moment, when the latter was sorely beset by his enemies. He was therefore, a staunch Royalist. Adams' intellectual interests found their chief expression in converting the house of his nativity into a free school for the education of the "Town-born" children of Wem, and in having the Gospels translated into Persian at his expense. Parken states that Sir Thomas Adams purchased the lordship of Sprouston in Norfolk of Sir Thomas Cornet, baronet, and that he died at his house in Ironmongers' Hall, London, 24 February, 1667, aged 81. He was buried in the chancel of St. Catharine Creed's church in the latter city. The arms are given by Burke as ermine, three cats passent in pale azure; the crest is described as on a wreath a wolf's head erased, ermine. Sir Thomas Adams, bart., married Anne, daughter of Humphrey Mapstead; she died 11 January, 1641 and was buried in the chancel of St. Leonard's Eastcheap, at London. Issue.
4. Roland, baptised 29 January, 1592, buried 30 November, 1592.
5. William, baptised 10 February, 1593/4, alleged to be identical with the emigrant of that name to Ipswich, Massachusetts. Perhaps others.

Evidently Sir Thomas' prominence and wealth did not mean much materially to his collaterals, for in the parish registers appear a number of entries of members of this family, all of them called poor. What astonishes us is the apparent lack of any effect on the fortunes of his presumed brother William, who seems to have been a pious supporter of the conventions as practiced in Ipswich. It seems to us that there would be repercussions in the Puritan community if it ever became known that William Adams was the brother of a baronet, and of a Stuart Royalist in the bargain; and one may be assured, knowing the Puritans as we do, that such a fact would be well-known.

On the other hand, we cannot agree with some of our contemporaries who condemn the pedigree out of hand because proof has not been published. In the words of the late Frank Allaben, negative historical or genealogical criticism is very alluring, but our negative proponents frequently forget that their case is judged by the same standards of criticism that they require of others. There is no proof that the connection recited in Americana is incorrect. There is, in fact, some favorable observation to be made, despite patent errors.

First of all, there is evidence that private research has been done and in England. The pedigree does not trace to an ancestor of high social rank, excluding Sir Thomas Adams for the moment from consideration; there seems to have been no attempt at what Mr. Ernest Flagg would call "superlative genealogy." As far as we have been able to trace, parish register entries support the pedigree. Moreover, while we have listed Sir Thomas Adams as a son of Thomas and Margaret (Erpe) Adams, as cited in the pedigrees, we do not find his baptismal record, and this identity may not be correct. If incorrect, a certain amount of objection to the validity of this pedigree would be removed.

There still remains, however, a definite responsibility resting upon those who possess original information or proof relating to the parentage of the first William Adams of Ipswich. No desire to publish "intact" a genealogy of the William Adams family at some future date can possibly excuse the persons holding this information from making known the present proofs. Until this is done the descent from Randall Addams will continue to be held suspect, and deservedly so.

The ancestry of William Adams is indeterminate.

ALLERTON

12. SARAH (ALLERTON) VINCENT 3,315
m. DEGORY PRIEST

She was born about 1585 and presumably in England. Shortly before 1611 she was resident of London.

London parish registers disclose no baptismal record.

With her brother Isaac Allerton she was in Leyden, the Netherlands, in 1611; as the widow of John Vincent she married there 4 November, 1611 to Degory Priest of London and Leyden, a hat-maker. For nine years they resided at Leyden, until Priest decided to emigrate in the Mayflower, in 1620. After his arrival at Plymouth in the new Colony, Priest died in "the first sickness" on 1 January, 1620/1. The bereaved Sarah, who had remained at Leyden until Priest should have established a home, was left with two children and dependant upon her brother Isaac.

She was betrothed to a native of Leyden, Godbert Godbertson, on 25 October, 1621 and married him on 13 November following. When the Anne set sail for New England in 1623 Godbertson & his wife were on board, and they arrived in Plymouth 10 July of that year. In Plymouth records Godbertson (or Godbertszen) appears as Cuthbert Cüthbertson on several occasions, although his connections are traced with some difficulty. Prior to his marriage with Sarah (Allerton) (Vincent) Priest he had been the widower of Elizabeth Kendall.

Sarah died at Plymouth shortly before 3 November, 1633, and probably was buried there. Godbertson had died in the same year, and before 24 October, 1633, the date of the inventory of his estate; he was insolvent. On 11 November, 1633 Phineas Pratt, one of the sons-in-law, was appointed by the Court at Plymouth to take into his possession "all goods & chattels of Godbert Godbertson & Zarah his wife & safely to preserue them according to an Inventory presented upon oath to be true and just by Mr Joh: Done & Mr Steph. Hopkins." In December, 1633 William Bradford was appointed by the Court to settle the estate of Godbert Godbertson and his wife, both deceased, and to discharge the debts "so far as his estate will make good." Isaac Allerton, merchant, brother of the deceased Sarah, and the largest creditor "to whom £75: 10:03 was due, gave free leave that all others should be paid before himself, desiring rather to lose all rather than other men should lose any."

No issue is reported by John Vincent; for those by Degory Priest, see PRIEST, under #3,314. For Godbertson's children see the discussion under NOTES following.

NOTES

Isaac J. Greenwood, A. M., of New York city published an article entitled "Allertons of New England and Virginia" in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 44, pp. 290+. At practically the same time Walter Scott Allerton published his A History of the Allerton Family, 1585 to 1885, a second edition of which was issued in 1900. The second edition of Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth, published in 1899 by William Thomas Davis, at page 79 recites the children of Cuthbert Cuthbertson to have been Samuel; Sarah (sic) who married John Coombs; and "others". He goes on to say that Samuel was one of the original purchasers of Dartmouth. It has not been determined, however, so far as we can ascertain, that these Cuthbertson children were by Sarah Allerton. Sarah, given as Cuthbertson's daughter, is properly assigned to Degory Priest.

Other references to Sarah Allerton are found in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. I, pp. 9+; vol. II, p. 118; and particularly in vol. VII, p. 129. This gives a transcript of the original record of the marriages of Isaac and Sarah Allerton:

This is translated:

> Degory Priest, unmarried man from London in England, accompanied by William Lisle and Samuel Fuller, his acquaintances, (married) with Sarah Vincent, also from London in England, widow of John Vincent, accompanied by Jane Thickens and Rosamund Jepson, her acquaintances.
>
> Isaac Allerton, unmarried man, from London in England, accompanied by Edward Southworth, Richard Masterson and Randall Thickens, his acquaintances, with Mary Norris, single woman, from Newbury in England, accompanied by Anne (Susanna) Fuller and Dille (Dorothy) Carpenter, her acquaintances.

The entries "tje de 8, 10, 1611", refer to the first, second and third date of publication of banns; beneath these is added, as translated:

> They were married before William Cornelisen Tybault and Jacob Paedts, sheriffs, this 4th of November, 1611.

References to other connections will be found in the McDonough-Hackstaff Genealogy, by Rodney McDonough; in Phineas Pratt and Some of His Descendants, by Eleazer Franklin Pratt; and in Edward Small and His Descendants, volume II (1934), by Lora Altine Woodbury Underhill. In the latter is given an outline of the connections of Isaac Allerton, which is unqualifiedly the best biography of this gentleman that we have seen. Abridging this slightly for our present purposes, we quote:

> No one of the Pilgrim fathers is more widely known today than Isaac Allerton, fifth signer of the Mayflower Compact; yet the praise accorded to him is modified by insinuations that greatly mar his memory. Bradford, failing to understand him, wrote with an unwarrantable prejudice, unmindful of the fact that Allerton, as agent for the Colonists, was endeavoring to solve an almost impossible financial problem. Some of our later historians, following Bradford, represent him as a shrewd schemer, who trampled upon the rights of others regardless of everything except his own aggrandizement. (Goodwin's Pilgrim Republic, 1888; 322, 330, 346 and 347; also Drake's Pine Tree Coast, 236). That this estimate is unjust is shown by a study of the original records of the Colonies of Plymouth, Massachusetts Bay and New Haven, as well as those of Maine and New Amsterdam.
> A deposition dated at Plymouth, September 26, 1639, in which he states his age as "about 53 yeares", indicates that he was born about 1586. His birthplace is unknown. Prior to his removal to Holland about 1609, he was of London.

He may have been with the Pilgrims in Amsterdam, but probably joined them with the others from London, at Leyden. His name first appeared in the Leyden records with that of his widowed sister, Sarah (Allerton) Vincent, whose marriage to Degory Priest occurred on the same day as his own. This double marriage took place November 4, 1611. While in Leyden, Isaac Allerton was a tailor. He was admitted to citizenship February 7, 1614, upon the guaranty of Roger Wilson and Henry Wood; November 16, 1615 he "guaranteed" his brother-in-law Priest. Allerton buried a child, February 5, 1620, at St. Peters. He was then living in Pieterskerkhof.

The few records of 1620, in Leyden, do not throw much light on the last few months of the Pilgrims' sojourn there. That Allerton was actively engaged in the preparations for removal is evident from the letter written by Samuel Fuller, Edward Winslow, William Bradford and himself, on June 10, 1620 to Robert Cushman and John Carver, then in England. The Speedwell left Delftshaven with Isaac Allerton and his family on board; when the passengers were readjusted at Plymouth, England, and some were sent back to London, the Allertons continued with the Mayflower on its eventful voyage. Bradford, in enumerating "those which came over first, in ye year 1620" mentions "Mr. Isaack Allerton, and Mary, his wife; with 3 children, Bartholomew, Remember, Mary; and a servant boy, John Hooke." (Bradford, History of Plimouth Plantation, 1898: 531). The youngest daughter, Sarah, followed soon after in the care of her aunt Sarah, widow of Degory Priest, who had married Cuthbert Cuthbertson.

While on the Mayflower in the harbor of Cape Cod (Provincetown harbor), a second son was born to Isaac and Mary Allerton, who did not live. The mother, enfeebled with the hardships and privations of that terrible winter, "dyed with the first," February 25, 1620/1. She was buried at Cole's Hill, near the foot of the present Middle Street. In 1626 Isaac Allerton married Fear, daughter of William Brewster and his wife Mary. Fear Allerton died December 12, 1634, of "the pestilent fever", then prevailing in Plymouth. The third wife of Allerton, by whom he had no children, was Johanna -------, whom he married before 1644.

Isaac Allerton invariably was mentioned by others as "Mr." or "Gentleman"; he styled himself a merchant. During his later years in Connecticut, he bore the title of Captain or Master. He was chosen to be an Assistant at Plymouth in 1621, and was Bradford's sole Assistant until 1624 and probably continued as one of the Assistants for several years longer; was such on January 1, 1633/4. On the same date he headed the first complete list of freemen of the Plymouth Colony; and on March 25, 1633, he was assessed the largest tax in the Colony, £3/11/00.

After the death of Robert Cushman in 1625, Isaac Allerton was sent over to England repeatedly as the agent for the Colony, and to rescue their badly failing finances. In the summer of 1626, Allerton was again sent over to England to make a composition with the Merchant Adverturers, which Captain Standish had attempted the year before (1625), but abandoned. He was instructed to make the best terms he could, and "not to conclud absolutly till they knew ye termes, and had well considered them." They also gave him "a comission under their hands & seals" to borrow money not exceeding a specified sum, which he was to expend for the "use of the plantation."

"At ye usuall season of ye coming of ships", that is, in the early spring of 1627, Allerton returned, bringing goods and £200 which he got at thirty per cent. After "much adoe and no small trouble" he had succeeded in bringing back the draft of an agreement with the Merchant Adventurers, "drawne by the best counsell of law they could get, to make it firme." This contract was dated in London, November 15, 1626.

Allerton was sent again to England in the fall of 1627. He carried a copy of the agreement for their English friends to sign. After considerable dickering this was signed. He brought back in 1628 a patent for a trading place at Kennebeck. Several other trips were undertaken in connection with the Colony's business. He was discharged from this function in 1631, in some part from quarrels arising from charges involved in the use of his boats in the services of the Colony. His differences with the Colony progressed and in 1653 he had sold his interests completely out.

While yet a citizen of Plymouth, Allerton had extended his operations eastward along the entire coast. He had a residence and warehouse at Marblehead, and was well-known in Boston. At the same time he established business relations in New Amsterdam and New Haven, and also acquired large interests at Delaware Bay and Virginia.

He joined the First church in Salem in 1647.

The earliest references to Allerton in New Amsterdam are found in a declaration of Director Kieft, dated February 17, 1639, that he had offered to receive tobacco from Mr. Allerton in exchange for corn or money. This appears to have been the beginning of those business relations at New Amsterdam which later assumed such large proportions. On May 19, 1643, Albert Cuyn conveyed by deed a house and two lots at New Amsterdam, to Isaac Allerton and Govert Loockermans; and within a month (June 2) Allerton and Loockermans received a grant of land in New Amsterdam from the West India Company of Amsterdam, Holland. The latter grant consisted of two lots on the east side of the "Great Highway" or Broadway, on the island of Manhattan. The landupon which Allerton built his warehouse, a capacious two-story building, included in "Allerton's Buildings", he purchased April 10, 1647 from Philip de Truy.

In the summer of 1643 an Indian uprising began at New Amsterdam. At the request of Director Kieft, the Commonality of the Manhattas elected, on September 13, 1643, eight selectmen as Council in the emergency. On October 28, 1644, the "Eight Men" (which included Allerton) sent a letter to Amsterdam, charging Director Kieft with malfeasance in office and inciting the recent Indian war, and requesting his removal. Their efforts were rewarded eventually by the arrival in May, 1647 of Peter Stuyvesant, who was sent over as Director General to supplant Kieft. Isaac Allerton was a burgher or freeman in New Amsterdam, though his name does not appear in the first list, dated April, 1657. The miscellaneous services of Allerton in New Amsterdam extend over a long period, and as recorded in the Registers of the Provincial Secretary, were notable.

At what date Isaac Allerton, Sr. removed his family to New Haven is uncertain. In a deed of October 27, 1646, and repeatedly afterward, he called himself a merchant of New Amsterdam. Yet at a general Court held in New Haven, March 10, 1646/7, he and his wife held seats of honor in the meeting house. Isaac Allerton died at New Haven between February 1, 1658/9, when he appeared in Court as defendant in a suit brought to compel the payment of an old debt, and February 12 of the same month, the date on which the inventory of his estate was taken. His will, without date, was allowed October 29, 1659.

The children of Isaac Allerton and his wife Mary Norris were:

1. Bartholomew, born at Leyden about 1612; came with his parents in the Mayflower, and was in Plymouth at the division of cattle in 1627. He returned to England, where he married and had issue.

2. Remember, born at Leyden about 1614, came to Plymouth Colony in the Mayflower. She was married before 6 May, 1635 to Moses Maverick of Marblehead. Remember died there between 12 September, 1652 and 22 October, 1656. Numerous descendants.
3. Mary, born at Leyden about 1616, married about 1636 at Plymouth to Thomas Cushman, who died at Plymouth 28 November, 1699, aged about 83.
4. Sarah, born about 1618 at Leyden. She came in the Anne to New England with her aunt Sarah (Allerton) (Vincent) (Priest) Cuthbertson.
5. A child, buried 5 February, 1620 in the Pieterskerk at Leyden.
6. A son, born and died in Provincetown harbor.

Issue, by second wife, Fear Brewster:

7. Isaac, born about 1630 at Plymouth, Massachusetts. He was a graduate of Harvard University in 1650, and a resident of New Haven, Connecticut. He married about 1652 to Elizabeth, maiden name unreported; 2, in Virginia about 1663, Elizabeth, widow of Major George Colclough and daughter of Captain Thomas Willoughby of Virginia. Isaac had then removed to Virginia; he was on 22 April, 1663, a Justice of the Peace for Northumberland County, Virginia, and a prominent colonial official. His will, dated 25 October, 1702, was proved 30 December, 1702. Numerous descendants.

The late Colonel Charles Edward Banks investigated the English records in an endeavor to discover the ancestry of Isaac Allerton and his sister Sarah. In his work entitled The English Ancestry and Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers, he writes at page 29:

> (Isaac Allerton) was called a tailor of London in the Leyden records, and was born in 1586, according to his deposition. There is nothing in his later career to show that he followed the occupation declared in the Leyden archives, although he may have been a tailor's apprentice. He became a merchant and engaged in extensive trading in New England. As early as 1611 he was a resident of Leyden where he married Mary Norris of Newbery, co. Berks, for his first wife. In 1514 he was admitted as burgess of Leyden and it is worthy of note that Robert Allerton, called a "Scotchman" was living there contemporaneously with Isaac. None of the London registers nor the records of the Merchant Tailors Company of London give a positive clue to Isaac Allerton.
> A Robert Allerton of St. Andrew's Undershaft married a Grizell Playne in 1574 and had one son, John, baptised 1581, but no other entries of the name occur for twenty years. This seems the clue to his parentage. London wills afford no help. A Christopher Allerton was living in Bread Street, London in 1616, and an Edward Allerton of St. Dionis Backchurch was married to Rose Davis, but no issue is of record in that parish.

Col. Banks refers here to a footnote published in the article by Mr. Greenwood, and in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 44, p. 290:

> The records of St. Dionis, Backchurch, London, give the marriage of Edward Allerton, of that parish, to Rose Davis of St. Peter's, Cornhill, 14 Feb. 1579-80; the wife survived her husband six years and died in June, 1596; possibly they were the parents of Isaac and Sarah.

Allerton is the name of a locality in Yorkshire, many of whose inhabitants are recorded in the parish church at Bradford, Yorkshire. The burials in the parish register at Bradford have been printed in the Bradford Antiquarian, and the marriages in a supplement to the latter. The Bradford Antiquarian will be found in the New York (city) Public Library and in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C., and the supplement, so far as we know, is only to be found in the former library. As the baptisms of the Bradford parish have not yet been available to us, it is useless to speculate upon possible connections between the Allertons of Bradford and those of London. In this connection it should be remembered that the absence of the name from the registers in London may be traced to the probable non-conformity of members of the family. Anglican ministers, in their zeal to have at those who disagreed with them, often refused to record names of those who did not accept their tenets, even in extremis.

We believe, nevertheless, that a patient, persistent and careful search in London archives would disclose the connections of Isaac and Sarah Allerton.

The ancestry of Sarah Allerton is unknown to us.

ARMITAGE

FIRST AND SECOND LINES

10 & 11. ARMITAGE 563; 1,635
m. DANIEL WHITEHEAD

She was born about 1626/7 in Yorkshire, England, and perhaps in the parish of Bradford. No baptismal record has been discovered.

From the printed Hempstead and Oyster Bay Town Records it is known that a daughter of Thomas Armitage married Daniel Whitehead before 1659, and who seems definitely to have been the mother of the latter's children. Her given name has not been found. She was undoubtedly with her father when he sailed from Bristol, England 4 June, 1635 for New England, and came with him from Sandwich, Plymouth colony to Stamford, Connecticut; subsequently the family was of Hempstead, New York, where she married Daniel Whitehead. About eight years later or more after their arrival in Hempstead (which had been by 1644) her father and husband removed from Hempstead to Oyster Bay, having a short time previously joined in the first purchase at that place.

She was living 16 November, 1668 at the time Daniel Whitehead died, provided she is the widow named in a now unrecorded and lost will; her renunciation of the right to administer the estate is of record (see WHITEHEAD). At the time she was a resident of Newtown, New York.

Nothing more is known of her.

For descendants, see DANIEL WHITEHEAD, under #562; #1,634.

NOTES

For references, see under THOMAS ARMITAGE. For discussion of statements that Daniel Whitehead married a Jane Skidmore, refer to DANIEL WHITEHEAD and also to WHITEHEAD OF HUNTINGTON. A great many incorrect statements appear in print concerning these connections.

Armitage was the daughter of

11 & 12. THOMAS ARMITAGE 1,126; 3,270
m. (SUSAN MICHELL or MITCHELL)

He was born about 1600, in Yorkshire, England, and perhaps in the parish of Bradford. The baptismal record is not reported.

Thomas Armitage is referred to by the Reverend Richard Mather in his Journal on 27 May, 1635, when the latter was at Bristol, England, waiting for the James to make ready for a trip to New England. On that day the Reverend Mather with Mr. Maud (Mawde), Nathaniel Wales, Barnabas Fower and Thomas Armitage went aboard the Angel Gabriel, one of the ships lying in the harbor, in order to examine her. On 4 June following the James set sail for the two month journey across the Atlantic; the company included the men mentioned above, their families and others.

John Winthrop in his Journal, kept contemporaneously, records the difficulties of the James on 16 August, 1635, when a hurricane struck her while she was riding anchor off the Isle of Shoals. The "one hundred passengers, honest people of Yorkshire", as Winthrop describes them, narrowly averted a shipwreck. The immigrants were disembarked safely, and in 1637 Thomas Armitage was settled at Sandwich, Massachusetts, after having been made a freeman of the colony at Plymouth, 7 March 1636/7.

Armitage stayed at Sandwich six years or less. Perhaps in the wake of Matthew Mitchell who had come in the same ship with him, he removed to Stamford, Connecticut. In 1642 he is listed as a pioneer of that place, and was granted ten acres of land, 7 December, 164-, probably 1641. By 1644 he had removed to Long Island.

He was without doubt an original proprietor of Hempstead, New York in 1644, and likewise of Oyster Bay in 1653, when Thomas Armitage, Daniel Whitehead, Mr. Washburne, Anthony Wright, Robert Williams, John Washburn and Richard Holbrook, purchasers of land in common from the Indians, were accepted as proprietors with Samuel Mayo, Peter Wright and William Leverich.

Thomas Armitage was now in middle age, and had probably been twice married. A wife named Martha, surname not found, was the stepmother of his son Manassah, who in 1659 was a student in Harvard college at Cambridge. At that time Martha had deceased, and Thomas Armitage had fallen in love with one Ann Willestone whom he had married after 1652 and before 1658. As a consequence there seems to have been a quarrel between him and his son Manassah, which found expression in affidavits recorded in the Hempstead, New York Town Records. On 3 June 1659 Robert Ashman testified that he was told by Thomas Armitage that he had reserved an estate for his son; similarly Anna, wife of John Smith nan, Jeremy Wood and his wife Elizabeth and William Smith recounted conversations held with Thomas Armitage to the same effect.

Finding that the evidence would support a case for his son, Armitage resorted to testy threats against his son-in-law, James Pine, saying that "James Pine were best be quiet as he would make such work with him and his son Mannasseth as would make them better be quiet." It is not clear from the records what disposition was made of the affair, but as frequently happens when a middle-aged man marries a young wife, she probably got what of the estate she wanted. Thomas Armitage disowned his son.

He died after October, 1665. In September and October of that year he was present in court in New York city when he attested the same as Richard Holbrook concerning reserving Horse Neck by Indians when the Oyster Bay and Huntington purchase was made. No will or administration is found. He was buried presumably in Oyster Bay.

In our opinion Thomas Armitage married 1, in the parish ch. at Bradford, Yorkshire to Susan Michell or Mitchell, 27 September, 1625, and who came with him probably in the James. The date of her death is unknown. He had married before 1652 to Martha, surname unknown, and who was deceased before 1658. His third wife was Ann Lillestone, derivation unknown, whom he married after 1652 and before 1659. There were apparently no children by the second or third wives; and the latter was probably the Anne Hermitage who married Samuel Barrett by a license issued 18 December, 1667.

Issue (by first wife):

1. A daughter, married Daniel Whitehead. See page 113.
2. A daughter, born about 1632, perhaps at Bradford, Yorkshire; m. about 1652, probably at Hempstead, New York to James Pine, son presumably of James and Edith (Williams) Pine of Woodbury, Devonshire; Stamford, Connecticut and Hempstead, New York. James Pine, then senior and of Hempstead, died between 1 January, 1684/5, the date of his will, and 12 October, 1686, when it was proved. His wife was then deceased. Issue (PINE):
   i. Susan, died after 1698, married 10 May, 1671, John Searing.
   ii. John, married 1, about 1684, Ogden; 2, in 1687, Abigail, maiden name not found. He is listed in the 1698 Census for Hempstead with five children:
      A. Mary.
      B. Daniel.
      C. Abigail.

D. Ruth.
E. Phoebe.

iii. James, born by 1656, a defendant in court, 7 November, 1677; died after 1738. There are no children recorded to him in the 1698 Census for Hempstead. He was then living with his brother Benjamin next to Aaron Onderdonck.

iv. Nathaniel, died after 26 March, 1713; recorded in the Hempstead Census for 1698, but issue not found.

v. Jonathan, died after 1693; in 1690 of eastern New Jersey.

vi. Samuel, whose earmark was recorded 5 July, 1682; died 23 May, 1695, leaving a nuncupative will. He married in 1687 to Rachel Ellison who after his death probably married Ephraim Valentine, son of Obadiah Valentine.

vii. William, died in 1737. He married about 1690 to Sarah Smith; in 1698 he had three children
A. Elizabeth.
B. James.
C. Ruth.

viii. Leah, married Robert Williams.

ix. Sarah.

x. Agnes.

xi. Benjamin, died after 1712.

3. Manassah, or Mannaseth, born probably in Yorkshire; appears in Dorchester, Massachusetts in 1655, when he witnessed deed on September 1 of that year between James Batte junior of Dorchester and his father-in-law Henry Withington. In the next year he was attending Harvard college, being listed for quarter bills on the Steward's books beginning 5-7-1656 and ending 4-7-1659. For four quarters, from 5-10-1658, he is credited with "service in the buttery." Manassah was on 1 April, 1662 a resident of Newtown, when he witnessed a deed between Robert Coe and John Furman. He had died before 1698; no descendants are known.

Perhaps other children.

NOTES

In Chronicles of the First Planters of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay From 1623 to 1636, published in 1846 by Alexander Young, at p. 447 is printed Richard Mather's Journal. The Rev. Richard Mather had come from Toxteth in Lancashire, and his chronicle of the trip of the James is one of the few depicting the trials and hazards of those early days. It is exceptionally interesting, and we regret that want of space precludes other than an abstract:

We came from Warrington on Thursday, April 16, (1635) and came to Bristol on the Thursday following, viz.April 23; and had a very healthful, safe and prosperous journey all the way.....

Coming to Bristol, we found divers of the company come before us; but some came not till after us, Howbeit, the last was come by the first of May. Nevertheless, we went not aboard the ship until Saturday, the 23d of May; so that the time of our staying in Bristol was a month and two days; during all which time we found friendship and courtesy at the hands of divers godly Christians in Bristol. Yet our stay was grievous unto us, when we considered how most of this time the winds were steady, and served directly for us. But our ship was not ready; so ill did our owners deal with us.

Going aboard the ship in King Road the 23d of May, we found things very unready, and all on heaps, many goods being not stowed, but lying on disordered heaps here and there in the ship. This day there came aboard the ship two of the searchers, and viewed a list of all our names, ministered the oath of Allegiance to all at full age, viewed our certificates from the ministers in the parishes from whence we came, approved well thereof, and gave us tickets, that is, licenses under their hands and seals to pass the seas, and cleared the ship, and so departed.....

On Wednesday (27 May, 1635), the wind continuing still at the west, we having sent some of our men ashore to fetch more bread and victuals, and more water for the cattle, our master, Captain Taylor, went abroad the Angel Gabriel, Mr. Maud, Nathaniel Wales, Barnabas Fower, Thomas Armitage, and myself, accompanying him.....

(4 June, 1635) Thursday morning, the wind serving for us, and our master and all the sailors being come aboard, we set sail, and began our sea-voyage, with glad hearts that God had loosed us from our long stay wherein we had been holden, and with hope and trust that he would graciously guide us to the end of our journey. We were, that set sail together, this morning, five ships, three bound for Newfoundland, viz., the Diligence, a ship of 150 tons, the Mary, a small ship of 80 tons, and the Bess; and two bound for New England, viz. the Angel Gabriel, of 240 tons, (and) the James, of 220 tons. And even at our setting out, we that were in the James had experience of God's gracious providence over us, in that the Angel Gabriel, hauling home one of her anchors, had like, being carried by the force of the tide, to have fallen foul upon the forepart of our ship.....she passed by without > touching so much as a cable or cord; and so we escaped that danger.....

The sequel is found in Winthrop's Journal, published in Original Narratives of Early American History, general editorship of J. Franklin Jameson, Ph. D., LL. D. In vol. I, pages 155 and 156, the end of the journey of the James is given in Winthrop's own words:

> August 16, 1635.... The wind having blown hard at S. and S. W. a week before, about midnight it came up at N. E. and blew with such violence, with abundance of rain, that it blew down many hundreds of trees, near the towns, overthrew some houses, (and) drave the ships from their anchors.....
> In this tempest, the James of Bristol, having one hundred passengers, honest people of Yorkshire, being put into the Isle of Shoals, lost there three anchors; and, setting sail, no canvas nor ropes would hold, but she was driven within a cable's length of the rocks at Pascataquack, when suddenly the wind, coming to N. W. put them back to the Isle of Shoals, and, being there ready to strike upon the rocks, they let out a piece of their mainsail, and weathered the rocks.

While the reason for this emigration has been based on religious motives, in The Original Lists of Persons of Quality, by John Camden Hotten, published in 1874, at p. xxxi, is another:

> We know that many ships sailed from Bristol, among others The Angel Gabriel and The James, conveying the Revd. Richard Mather and the Revd. Daniel Maude, but no record of departures from that port remain.....
> Among the thousands who emigrated to New England, it cannot be doubted but that a very large number left to avoid payment of the hateful subsidy, and that they would not take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy. These, therefore, must have left secretly, and of such no record would exist.

The late Colonel Charles Edward Banks, in his The Planters of the Commonwealth, states that the passengers on the James included as well as those given in the foregoing, also Joseph Armitage and Godfrey Armitage, later of Lynn, Massachusetts; Matthew Mitchell, his wife Susan and their son Jonathan; John Smith and his wife Mary and their daughter Mary; George Kendrick and his wife Jane. The Rev. Richard Mather's account bears Colonel Banks out in all except two particulars. Joseph and Godfrey Armitage did not come on this vessel and had been resident in New England for several years before the advent of the James. Who the other immigrants of the James were, we probably shall never know.

The History of Sandwich and Bourne states that Thomas Armitage was to pay 2d on two unringed swine, 4 September, 1638; and on 16 April, 1640 he held six and one half acres of land in Sandwich. Statements which have been made to the effect that he was also a resident of Lynn are without foundation; further, he was very certainly not a brother of Godfrey and Joseph Armitage of the latter place.

Armitage is credited by the late Benjamin Thompson, author of the History of Long Island, with filing a statement with the town officials of Hempstead on 26 May, 1659 to the effect that "his son Manassah, then a student at Cambridge, had fraudulently obtained his deeds and other valuable writings, and ..... forged a deed of gift of his lands; he therefore desires that the facts should be made known and recorded in all the New England colonies in order to guard the public against the impositions of his son."

Thompson undoubtedly refers to the following in the printed Hempstead, New York, Town Records, vol. 1, pp. 108+:

> On May 26, 1659 Thomas Armitage declares that he is a yeoman of Oyster Bay, and in perfect health and memorie and so had been quite some time..... He cites that any document supposedly made over unto him (referring to his son Manassah) by he, the said Thomas Armitage, in exchange for a competent maintainance during his life, to be false and forged and that moreover his said son Manasseth Armitage had taken several bills and writings from him.

> Robert Ashman on 3 June, 1659 testifies that he was bound in/about nine years past, for James Pine unto Thomas Armitage his father-in-law for the some of £30 as may be seen on an ye specially the wch as he towld this deponent that he did intend to give it to his sonn Manasseth And this he did, because his wife should not have his estate after his death and deprive his Sonn Alsoe that he had an estate in the hands of Daniel Whitehead of £70 sterling for his son Manasseth.
> And being at Hempstead in the winter last part Anno 1658 The said Thomas Armitage was at the house of the deponent (Robert Ashman) and he said that James Pine had been with him at the house of Robert Jackson the night before, and Thomas Armitage told Robert Ashman that James Pine were best be quiet as he would make such work with him and his son Mannasseth that would make them better be quiet.

> And Ashman replied - I know you said you would give him that estate in Daniell Whitehead's and Goodman pines hands, and now I hope you will not deprive him. Whereupon Thomas Armitage said he had married a young wife and may have other children and therefore needed the estate.
> William Smith cites 3 June, 1659 that about nine years past Thomas Armitage put the cattle to him for the use of his son Manasseth. Jeremy Wood also deposed, and so did Anna, wife of John Smith nants.

In the deposition of Elizabeth, wife of Jeremy Wood, the second wife Martha Armitage is mentioned. In the same Town Records, Thomas Armitage is recorded at vol. I, p. 108 as disowning his son, now at the college in Cambridge (i. e. Harvard).

The next entry appears in the printed Oyster Bay Town Records, vol. 1, p. 7, wherein Thomas Armitage of Oyster Bay, planter, gives to Ann Lyllestone, likewise of Oyster Bay, and whom he intends to marry, a horse, 2 milch cows, his dwelling house, lot and orchard; mentions his will and contradicts it. The estimated date of this is given as 1660/1, but from the Hempstead Town Records it is evidently about 1658. Further at vol. 1, p. 591 of the same Oyster Bay Town Records, from the original Book B, p. 212, appears the following:

> Oysterbay this 30th of ye 11th mo: 1663. The note appended to this document by the editor of the printed Oyster Bay Town Records, Mr. John Cox, junior, should be disregarded.

The will which Thomas Armitage made, and which he later so definitely renounces, has not been found.

Arthur S. Wardwell of Brooklyn, New York, has contributed some excellent research on certain of these connections, with particular reference to the descendants of the daughter who married James Pine. Following on the research of John B. Pine, who published "James Pyne of Hempstead, Long Island, and Some of His Descendants" in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 43, p. 1, Mr. Wardwell writes:

> James Pine Sr. of Hempstead, L. I., died leaving a will dated January 1, 1684/5, proved October 12, 1686. This will makes bequests to eldest son John, to sons James and Nathaniel, to sons Jonathan and Samuel, to two youngest sons William and Benjamin, to daughters Leah and Sarah, to children of his daughter Susan, to Mary daughter of his son John, to daughter Agnes. Residue divided among his eleven children. The sons John and James were executors. Overseers: his cousin John Smith and neighbor John Smith (Rock). Witnesses, Jeremiah Hobart and Edward Spragg Sr.
> It is evident that this James Pine senior is actually of the second generation, that his father James Pine or Pyne had deceased before this time. There is of record no death of a James Pine before 1686, and consequently to prove the dates of James the first, father as is presumed of James, called senior, is difficult. However the generations indicate that the James called senior was of the second generation, for if the eleven children are arranged in the order indicated in the will, making the married daughter the eldest child.....we have (see page 115. The span of these children is indicated by Mr. Wardwell to cover the years from 1653 through about 1676. Susan is given as the eldest, and Benjamin as the youngest).....
> Assuming that the mother of this family was born about 1632 and married at age 20 in 1652, she would have been about 44 years of age at the assumed date of the birth of the youngest child, and which is a reasonable assumption.
> Now, it has been stated that a James Pyne, son of William and Mary, was baptised June 4, 1608 at Woodbury near Exeter in Devonshire, and that he married in September of 1630 to Edith Williams at St. Mary Magdalen's, Taunton, Somerset, and that it is probable that he was later of Stamford, Connecticut and Hempstead, New York. If the Hempstead line is represented in this, and a son James was born to them in 1631 or later, he would have been of just the right age to marry the mother of the above Pine family. It is not likely that the James baptised in 1608 and so much older than his putative wife would be of this connection, particularly as the wives are reported differently.

Richard Ellison Sr. of Hempstead in his will not dated, but probated June 13, 1683, bequeathed to his son-in-law Joshua Jacock 10 acres "in lieu of a cow James Pine left for his wife, which cow is long since dead." This will was made while the James Pine who was testator of the above will was still alive and it seems to indicate that James Pine left at his decease a cow to a girl who later became the wife of Joshua Jacock. That because the girl, at the time of the said James Pine's decease, was a minor, that the said cow was placed in the hands of her father Richard Ellison. Now the wife of Joshua Jacock (Jaycox) was Sarah, daughter of Richard Ellison, and she was born at Braintree, Massachusetts, June 4, 1652. She would have been of age in 1670 (18 years) or 1673 (21 years). It seems reasonable to indicate that some time prior to Sarah's coming of age that James Pine died leaving a cow to Sarah, which cow, at the date of Richard Ellison's will, was long since dead.

If the cow was living when Sarah became of age or married, which she did about 1673, the cow would have been given by Richard to Sarah. It would seem that the cow must have been deceased before 1675, and therefore this James Pine deceased before then also. How long is impossible to say, but perhaps his death occurred 1669 or earlier. The first mention of a James Pine junior on Hempstead records was November 7, 1677, at a time when the testator's son James together with his father and Samuel and Nathaniel were defendants in an action for trespass.

One other point may be mentioned. James Pine the testator made one overseer his cousin John Smith, not John Smith Rock. Abraham Smith who came to Hempstead at about the same time as did James Pine.... had a son John Smith who was probably the cousin mentioned by the testator James Pine. It is Mr. Wardwell's opinion that this Abraham married Mary Pine, a sister of James Pine the testator, and therefore, cousin John Smith was actually nephew of the maker of the will. With this ingenious explanation of these connections the present writer is heartily in accord.

Manassah Armitage is mentioned in The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 41, p. 84 (with reference to the iron works at Taunton); in Biographical Sketches of Graduates of Harvard University, in Cambridge, Mass., by John Langdon Sibley, M. A., vol. I, p. 576, vol II, p. 67. Mather in his Magnalia Americana calls him deceased in listing Harvard graduates, in 1698. The reference to his location in Newtown will be found in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 63, p. 360.

THE ARMITAGE FAMILY OF THE WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE, ENGLAND

When John Winthrop referred to the immigrants who came over in the James in the summer of 1635, he described them as from Yorkshire. This statement of his was general and not perfectly accurate, for the Reverend Richard Mather came from Lancashire. However an examination of the connections of his companions on that voyage shows that essentially Winthrop was correct, and on this basis we have ascribed Yorkshire as the original locality from which Thomas Armitage came.

Examination of Yorkshire records lends considerable support to this premise. The Armitage family appears beginning with the sixteenth century to have favored locating in the valleys of the Aire, Calder, Colne and Don rivers, all of which are tributary to the river Humber. The greatest concentration of persons of this name is found within a roughly shaped pentagon, the points of which are provided by the towns of Bingley, Leeds, Doncaster, Sheffield and Slaithwaite. It is at Bradford that we think we have found the original parish of Thomas Armitage.

A Thomas Armitage married at Bradford to Susan Michell, 27 September, 1625, and then disappears from record. This marriage has been printed in a supplement to The Bradford Antiquarian, vol. 3, and a copy will be found in the New York (city) Public Library. Mr. Arthur S. Wardwell wrote to the Vicar of Bradford to ascertain what record of baptisms of children of this union appeared on the registers, and was informed that there were none. No burials appear to have been recorded either at Bradford, Calverley, Bingley, Shipley, or Leeds; and no wills or administrations are found at York or Pontefract or at any of the other principal places where such were filed. We have not had access to the baptismal registers of Bradford, but those of adjacent parishes yield no further record.

It will be observed that one of Armitage's companions on the James was Matthew Mitchell, who was a native of South Ouram in Halifax parish, Yorkshire, according to the Rev. Cotton Mather, writing in his Magnalia. The history of Mitchell's experiences in New England has been given in some part in Stiles and Adams' History of Ancient Wethersfield, Connecticut, vol. II, p. 504. It is stated that Mitchell married 16 April, 1616 to Susan Butterfield of Ovenden, in Halifax parish, and had eight children who were baptised at Halifax. He became a member of the General Court in 1637, and was a large landowner in Wethersfield. He was later of Stamford and is said to have been briefly of Long Island. His son Jonathan was a well-known minister and graduate of Harvard college.

There is a certain amount of parallelism in the accounts of the two pioneers, Thomas Armitage and Matthew Mitchell; both came in the James; both were at Stamford, and had sons at Harvard. From this it might be supposed that Susan Mitchell or Michell, putative wife of Thomas Armitage, was a sister or other relative of Matthew Mitchell; however, research does not bear this out.

That the vicinity of Halifax was the source ground of these immigrants is rendered still more probable by the fact that the Rev. Richard Denton, later of Connecticut and Long Island, is also held to have come in the James by some present writers. He had ministered to a curacy in North Ouram, Halifax parish before emigration, and is held responsible for forming the band which later followed him in the New World through the vicissitudes of colonization. Space forbids further analysis, but we are convinced that Thomas Armitage came from this same locality. In order to illustrate more completely the basis for our opinion, we give an account of the Armitage families of the west riding, as we have found them to be.

1. The Armitages of Eccleshill, Calverley, Idle, and Bradford.

Eccleshill is a small village about one mile north of Bradford, lying between the latter city and the River Aire; before one comes to the river, Idle is found lying on the main road between Shipley and Leeds. Three miles east of Idle, and north by northeast of Bradford, is the village of Calverley. Eccleshill, sometimes called Ecclesfield, should not be confused with the Ecclesfield lying in the southern part of the west riding, and a short distance from Sheffield, nor with Ecclesall in the same vicinity. No Armitages are to be found in the latter Ecclesfield.

Thomas Armitage (Hermytage, and variations) is mentioned in an article in the Bradford Antiquarian by the late J. Horsfall Turner, F. R. H. S., on "Ancient Eccleshill", wherein it is reported that Armitage was constable in 1533. This is the first known ancestor. His will, dated 30 August, 1551, was proved at York, 23 September, 1551; and filed in vol. 13, p. 763 of Wills in the York Registry. An abstract of the will is given in vol. II of The Parish Registers of Kirkburton, co. York, with an Appendix of Family Histories, edited by Frances Anne Collins, page lv. He calls himself Thomas Armatage of Eckylfelde (sic), and was to be buried in the church yard of the parish church at Bradford; his wife Isabel was to have his farmhold during her life, and the third part of his goods and cattle; and was to be executrix. She may have been a widow Johnson when she married him, as he mentions an Isabella Johnson in the will who received the customary daughter's portion of one ewe; possibly a step-daughter.

The will of an Isabell Armitage of Ecclesfeild (sic), dated 30 and 31 December, 1589, was proved at York, 28 June, 1589. It is filed in vol. 24 of wills at p. 219 in the York Registry. Mrs. Collins made no abstract of it, and we have not seen it. It may refer to the widow Isabel above.

Issue:

+ 1. William, married.
2. Richard, born say about 1523 at Eccleshill, possibly the one of that name whose will, dated at Calverley 15 May, 1590, was proved at York 1 December, 1591, and filed in vol. 24 of Wills in York Registry, p. 753.
3. Thomas, born about 1525, not traced further.
4. Jennet, not traced further.

1. William Armitage, son of Thomas and Isabella Armitage, was probably born at Eccleshill in the parish of Bradford, west riding of Yorkshire, about 1520. He had married before the date of his father's will and perhaps to one Allison, maiden name not determined. At p. 182 of The First Volume of the Registers of the Parish Church of Calverley, by Samuel Margerison, (1880) under "Additional Notes" he gives an abstract of the will of Allison Binns, widow of John Binns or Binnes of Calverley, dated 1 December, 1592. She gives to Barbarye Tinker, reputed daughter of Thomas Tinker, one cowe; to John Armitage, reputed son of Robert Caldrey, a tagged cowe called Tagell. The said two persons receive all her apparel, and the farmhold is to go to William Armitage and Nicholas Kitchen, her sons. It may be that this William is

+ 5. William, married

5. William Armitage of Eccleshill, presumably son of William Armitage of that place, was born about 1545. His will, dated 23 May, 1596, was proved at York 3 March, 1596/7, and is filed in vol. 26 of Wills in the York Registry at p. 478. Bradford Registers show that he was buried as from Eccleshill, 14 February, 1596/7; the widow was buried 7 December, 1605. We have not seen the will, but he was undoubtedly ancestor of some of the following.

The next entry we have in Bradford registers after the burial of William Armitage of Eccleshill is that a child of a William Armitage was buried from Bradford, 29 December, 1597. There was, therefore, a William Armitage, born about 1575, married about 1596. This may be the William Armitage who was married at Bradford, 20 June, 1597 to Marye Vickars; she may have been a second wife and this child by a first; or the child may have been premature. Contemporary with this William Armitage were the following, perhaps his sisters, and married in the parish church at Bradford:

Alice Armitage, married George Walker, 28 May, 1597.
Marie Armitage, married Thomas Emson, 3 June, 1600.
Anne Armytage, married Leonard Burnett, 24 June, 1601.

In the next generation the following are recorded at Bradford as from Eccleshill:

Edward Armitage, who was buried from the parish church at Bradford, 10 September, 1640. His wife had been buried 18 March, 1632. The children apparently included:

6. Edward, buried 24 October, 1627, recorded at Bradford.
7. Thomas, buried 26 May, 1635, recorded at Bradford.

William Armitage, perhaps to be identified with the one of that name who married at Bradford, 13 December, 1626 to Edith Beamond or Beaumont. The following burials of children are recorded at Bradford as of William Armitage of Eccleshill:

8. Sarah, buried 21 March, 1639/40.
9. James, buried 13 February, 1650/1.

Other records at Bradford available to us include the following:

10 June, 1603: baptised an illegitimate child of Edward Armitage, Wrose.

4 May, 1630: baptised William, son of William Armitage of Wibsey (a locality in the southern part of Bradford).

20 July, 1634: baptised William, son of William Armitage of Wibsey.

In vol. III of the Bradford Antiquarian, p. 122, is listed a poll tax for the west riding of Yorkshire. There were then no Armitages in Eccleshill on 1 March, 1692/3, the date of this list; and further on p. 144 of the same volume, a poll tax for 1380 similarly shows none of the name. A muster roll taken in Bradford during the time of Henry VIII (22 April, 1509 to 28 January, 1547) shows no Armitages.

In The First Volume of the Registers of the Parish Church of Calverley, by Samuel Margerison, published in 1880, there appear to have been several members of the family settled at that place in the latter half of the seventeenth century.

Richard Armitage of Calverley, born about 1550, had the following children baptised in the parish church at Calverley:

10. Jenett, baptised 7 December, 1578.
11. William, baptised 21 May, 1582, probably died young.
12. William, baptised 28 November, 1584.

Perhaps others.

William Armitage of Calverley, born about 1575, probably the one of that name buried from the parish church at Calverley, 8 June, 1630. Children of a William Armitage of Calverley were 13. Elizabeth, baptised 18 April, 1596, perhaps the one who married Ralph Howmes at Calverley, 21 July, 1626.

14. William, baptised 23 March, 1598, perhaps the one of that name buried as son of William Armitage, 25 April, 1605.
15. Michael, baptised at Calverley, 17 December, 1599, buried from the parish church at that place 8 September, 1635. He married in the parish church at Bradford, 15 November, 1625 to Elizabeth Ward. Issue included
    i. Mary, baptised 26 April, 1630.
    ii. Nicholas, baptised 23 June, 1633.

    Perhaps others.
16. John, baptised 12 March, 1602.
17. Marie, baptised 30 June, 1605, buried 10 July, 1605.
18. Ane (sic), baptised 11 October, 1607
19. Joseph, baptised 19 November, 1609 (not the emigrant to America; the latter was born about 1600).

Perhaps others.

Thomas Armitage of Calverley, born about 1575, had the following children baptised at that place:

20. Edward, baptised 13 April, 1600, perhaps the one who married 13 January, 1631 to Dorothy Barrett.
21. Elizabeth, baptised 30 July, 1603. See 13 above.
22. Ane (sic), baptised 27 April, 1606.
23. Sara, baptised 11 February, 1609, probably married James Boith, 13 November, 1632.

Edward Armitage of Calverley married 24 July, 1604 at that parish church to Elizabeth Robinson of Bradford. Her name is not given in the parish register, but is supplied from Paver's marriage licenses, published in the Yorkshire Archaeological Journal. He may be identified with Edward Armitage of Idle Park in the parish of Bradford, who was buried from the Calverley church 11 July, 1633. If so, Agnes, daughter of Edward Armitage of Idle, buried from the church at Calverley 17 February, 1631, may be descended. Edward Armitage of Idle had also a son Edward baptised 19 June, 1629 at Calverley.

William Armitage of Idle Park, parish of Bradford, was born about 1575; his will, dated 10 May, 1610, was proved 4 July, 1610, and filed in vol. 31 of Wills, p. 354 in the York Registry. His children probably included the following:

24. Nicholas, baptised in the church at Calverley, 30 December, 1599, buried 6 February, 1599/1600.
25. William, baptised at Calverley 25 January, 1600/1, probably the one of Idle who was living there about 1640. His children included
    i. Joseph, buried 4 December, 1640.
    ii. John, buried 24 December, 1640.
    And probably
    iii. Joseph, on March 1, 1692/3 assessed for 4s poll tax, the only one in Idle on that date.

    Probably others.

Thomas Armitage of Idle, perhaps brother of the above William, was deceased before 1631. In The Bradford Antiquarian, vol. II, p. 237 is given "Local Military Tenures from A Survey Made in 1631, by Order of James 1st". The reference of concern is:

> In IDLE
> The heirs of Thomas Armitage and John Smith of Bradford hold by the 160th part of a fee, and each pay annually 1/2d.

If this John Smith were related to the John and Mary Smith who with daughter Mary were passengers on the James in 1635, with Thomas Armitage and Nathaniel Wales, son of John Wales of Idle, it would suggest that we have here the parentage of Thomas Armitage, the emigrant.

Other references to the family of Idle include the will of a Mary Armitage, widow of Idle Park, perhaps widow of William. It was dated 8 June, 1614 and proved 17 December, 1614; and is filed in vol. 33 of Wills at York Registry, p. 357.

There can be no question that for interested parties who wish to finance a thorough search in Yorkshire records, much additional information could be obtained. At this writing we have had no opportunity to search these records further than indicated herein. There are a few other entries in the parish registers concerning members of these families at later dates, but as they could not shed light upon the connections of Thomas Armitage of Oyster Bay, New York, we have omitted them.

2. The Armitages of Halifax, Hipperholme, Lightcliff, Sowerby and Ovenden, and of other places in the parish of Halifax.

In a deed enrolled 31 March, 1553 before Trystrem Bolling, Justice of the Peace for the West Riding and Henry Brome, Clerk of the Peace, Thomas Armytage is witness to a deed dated 2 Nov., 1552, from John Hardy of Halifax to John Nowell and Richard Nowell of Newhouse, for a consideration of £16. It has not been possible to identify this Thomas Armitage, apparently of Halifax. Contemporaries as recorded in the parish church of Halifax are as follows:

Edward Bynnys (probably Binns) married Johanna Armitage, 16 July, 1542.
John Armitage married Alice Hawell, 10 November, 1549.
John Armitage married Isabell Walshawe, 20 July, 1551.
Richard Armitage married Sybilla Waterhouse, 31July, 1559.

Edward Armitage of Hipperholme and Lightcliff married at Halifax 18 November, 1565 to Alicia Whitaker. Their children were the following, as baptised at Halifax:

1. Richard, baptised 4 August, 1566, provisionally identified as the one who married at Halifax to Jenet Fletcher, 30 September, 1591. Issue not traced.
2. Alice, baptised 20 March, 1568.
3. Susane, baptised 8 June, 1572.
4. Abraham, baptised 1 April, 1576.
5. William, baptised 20 April, 1579.

William Armitage of Ovenden had the following issue baptised at Halifax:

6. Grace, baptised 29 January, 1575/6.

He may be the same as William Armitage of Sowerby in the parish of Halifax, who had baptised at the latter place:

7. Johanna, baptised 8 September, 1583.

Nicholas Armitage of Shelf, perhaps originally from Birstall in the West Riding, married at Halifax to Sybbel Firth 26 July, 1584. A Sybill Armitage was baptised at Halifax 5 March, 1591. The administration of Nicholas Armitage of Halifax is recorded 15 December, 1674 at Pontefract, folio 128. The only baptism recorded to 1594 is

8. Alicia, baptised 16 February, 1588/9.

3. The Armitages of Bingley, Yorkshire.

Entries in the registers are as follows:

Anthony Armitage married Isabell Smyth, 17 August, 1584.

Widow Armitage buried, 9 June, 1580.
Wife of Will'm Armytaige de P^r^stropp (that is,Priesthorpe) buried 15 June, 1587.

Johan, an infant of Thomas Armitage, buried 25 Nov., 1587/8.
Dorothy, wife of Thomas Armytaige, buried 10 June, 1588.
Elsabeth Armytaige of Bingley buried 2 September, 1593/4.
Richard Armytaige buried 21 August, 1596/7.
Isabell, wife of Anthony Armytaige, buried 15 May, 1598.
William Armytaige de Preisthrope buried 21 September, 1608/9
(The will of William Armitage of Priesthorpe, dated 4 February, 1604, was proved 6 October, 1608, and is filed in vol. 30 of Wills in the York Registry, page 721. Reference to it should disclose, undoubtedly, the connections of many of the foregoing entries).
Thomas Armitage of Bingley, buried 19 April, 1611.

4. The Armitages of the Hermitage, Huddersfield, Kirklees, Morley, Liversedge and Farnley Tyas.

Beginning with this section we outline the majority of the connections of the Armitage family of Yorkshire, which appear of exceptionally frequent occurrence in the parishes of Almondbury and Kirkburton in the West Riding. In The Parish Registers of Kirkburton, Co. York, with Appendix of Family Histories, the editor Frances Anne Collins devotes most of her space to these, and quotes from the records compiled by several of her local contemporaries. One of her authorities is "the late John Nowell, Esq., of Farnley, an expert student of the Armitage pedigree" and abstracts of many wills and deeds are credited to Thomas Robinson ("T. R."). Neither of these gentlemen, however, seem to have been interested in the Armitages of Bradford, Calverly, Halifax or Bingley, and as a consequence we have not been able to incorporate them into the following. Mrs. Collins, whom we understand was the wife of a vicar of Kirkburton, also has had reference to The History and Topography of the Parish of Kirkburton and of the Graveship of Holme, by Henry James Morehouse, and published at Huddersfield in 1861.

The present writer realizes the serious disadvantage he is under in being 3600 miles removed from the locality where these persons resided, and in not being familiar with local information; but a certain amount of intensive study has shown Mrs. Collins to be occasionally in error. We have checked also with all printed parish registers as published by the Yorkshire Parish Register Society, those printed independently where available, and with the Record Series of the Yorkshire Archaeological Society publications. For convenience we have followed to a limited extent Mrs. Collins' text

From Dodsworth's Notes, and from other material published by the Yorkshire Archaeological Society, the following information has been gathered. "The Hermitage" in Crosland in the parish of Almondbury probably originated from a donation of land for "building" by Richard de Rihill, between 1211 and 1240 to the Knights Templars. The latter were an Order instituted in 1118, and introduced into Yorkshire in 1152. The building on the land thus given would become the residence of a so-called "warrior-hermit." These hermitages were frequently placed under the protection of a monastery; in the Rev. Joseph Hunter's South Yorkshire, that writer gives an account of a hermitage at Kimberworth which was so associated.

A deed owned by Charles Armitage, Esq., and dated probably about 1277-1297, states that Robert de Notingham, Rector of the church at Almondbury, granted and confirmed to Adam son of John de Locwode.....a certain messuage with garden and buildings erected thereupon with appurtenances which was called the Hermitage, with ten acres of land in a certain clearing immediately adjoining the messuage and garden towards the south in the freehold of Crosland Roger. About a hundred years after this time, the Records of the Poll Tax for North Crosland show in 1379 the names of "Willelmus del Ermytache et Agnes ux: ejus"; (William of the Hermitage and Agnes, his wife).

From the latter or his collaterals it may very well be that all of the name of Armitage are descended, and who were resident in the general locality in the next two hundred years. In 1422 Thomas Armitage was holding an acre in Almondbury parish, and that had been lately held by John Armitage; for which he paid ij d (two pence). In 1462 Richard Beaumont of Whitley demised a tenement in Crosland for twenty years to William Armitage of the Armitage.

By 1500, however, when Armitages suddenly appear in the registers and other records, the threads connecting these later generations to the foregoing have utterly disappeared, and we are compelled to enumerate them in separate units. It is thus that we have the following, who may or may not have been brothers,but between whom there was very evidently some relationship:

+ 1. John, married Anne
+ 2. Thomas, married Cecilie
+ 3. William, married Katharine Beaumont.

1. John Armitage of the Hermitage in Yorkshire, was born about 1495, perhaps earlier. He died 4 June, 1561 and was buried from the parish church at Almondbury 6 June following. His will of 4 June, 1561 was proved 8 July, 1561 and is filed in vol. 17 of Wills at the York Registry, p. 80. He requested to be buried in the parish church of Almondbury; to John Armitage, son of John Armitage, ten sheep; to Elizabeth, daughter of William Armitage, ten sheep; to his servant Gyles Kay, ten shillings; to his maidservant, Anne Kay, 6s 8d; to William Crosland, son of John Crosland, 6s 8d. His wife Anne received a house or cottage called Sheepcote, two closes of land and pastures adjoining them in Honley. The wife was executrix with Humphrey and Johane Armitage. Richard Beaumont of Whitley was supervisor of the will, and witnesses were Thomas Armitaige, Edward Berrye and John Lockwood. Issue:

4. Isabell, who received £3/6/8 from the will.
5. Elizabeth, who received £3/6/8 from the will.
6. Alice, who received £3/6/8 from the will.
+ 7. Humphrey, married Margaret (Hutchinson) Shawe.
8. Jane.

It is stated that he was also father of the following, who is not mentioned in the will:

+ 9. John, married.

2. Thomas Armetadge of Huddersfield, born about 1480, died at Huddersfield in 1532. He was a clothier. Administration on his estate was granted to the widow Cecilie, 20 December, 1532, and recorded in the Pontefract Act Book. The inventory was exhibited 30 January, 1532/3. Issue:

+10. John the elder, married
11. John the younger, whose will dated 20 June, 1543, mentions his mother; sisters Anne, Johane and Ellen; to Thomas Mawde, a pair of hose and a cape; to William Horsfall, a pair of hose; to Richard Sikes a doublet and a pair of hose. His wife Elizabeth was his executrix; they had no surviving children. The witnesses were Sir James Wilde, Richard Charlesworth and Christopher Horsfall, and "others more as William Horsfall." The will was proved 3 November, 1543 according to Mrs. Collins, although the date on file in the York Registry is 22 October, 1543; it is filed in volume 11, at p. 713.
12. Alice.
13. Anne, who received 13s 4 d from John the younger.
14. Johane, who received 6s 8d from John the younger.
15. Ellen, who received 6s 8d from John the younger.

3. William Armitage, presumably of Farnley Tyas, and perhaps at one time a tenant of the Manor of Kirklees, was born about 1490. He is provisionally identified as the one mentioned in the will of his contemporary John Armitage of the Hermitage, and also was a witness to the will of John Armitage the elder of Huddersfield. He was perhaps the William Armitage buried from the parish church at Kirkburton, 2 April, 1558, but no will or administration is reported. The descendants of this family are recorded in Ducatus Leodensis by Ralph Thoresby, Second Edition with Notes and Additions by Thomas Dunham Whitaker, LL.D., F. S. A, on an inset pedigree between pages 86 and 87; and reference is also had to Abstracts of Inquisitiones post mortem Relating to the Family of Armitage of Kirklees, from a Collection Made of Those Relating to the Parish of Halifax, by the late John Richard Walbran, Esq., F. S. A., a MS in the possession of Edward Akroyd, F. S. A. William Armitage married Katharine, daughter of Henry Beaumont of Crosland, Yorkshire. Issue:

+ 16. John, married Elizabeth Kay.

He was probably father also of

17. Elizabeth, mentioned in the will of John Armitage of the Hermitage.

+ 18. Thomas, married

Quite probably others.

7. Humphrey Armitage, son of John and Anne Armitage of the Hermitage, is identified as the one of that name resident in Kirkburton. He was born about 1530 and was buried from the parish church at Kirkburton, 18 October, 1568. His will, dated 28 March, 1568 was proved in the Peculiar Jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter Court at York, 2 March, 1569, and is filed in vol. 18, Wills in the York Registry, p. 99. He was to be buried in the churchyard at Kirkburton; mentions his servant John Armitage; his master and faithful friend, John Kay of Woodsome, esq., who was supervisor of the will. He married at Kirkburton, 30 June, 1560 to Margaret Hutchinson, widow of Roger Shawe or Shaye. Issue:

+ 19. Robert, married.

20. John, baptised in the parish church at Kirkburton, 25 February, 1562/3; probably one of those of the name recorded in the Kirkburton registers as father of children baptised there.

21. Thomas, baptised at Kirkburton 3 February, 1565. Not traced further.

9. John Armitage of the Hermitage, stated to have been son of John and Anne Armitage of the Hermitage, and aged 47 at the time of his father's death, 4 June, 1561. He was born, therefore, in 1514. Mrs. Collins, following her expert Mr. John Nowell, identifies him as the one of that name who married at Kirkburton, 21 August, 1564 to Agnes Castell, and died in 1590 or 1591. We disagree with this construction point-blank, from internal evidence in the will of the John Armitage of the latter date of decease. We are of the opinion that the present John Armitage is one of those listed as a father of children baptised and recorded in the parish church at Kirkburton, although which ones we are not able to say. Reasonably, however he was father of + 22. John, married Agnes Castell.

Possibly there were other children.

10. John Armitage the elder, son of Thomas and Cecilie Armetadge, was born probably at Huddersfield about 1505, and died before 22 April, 1556. His will, dated 1 July, 1555, calls him of Huddersfield in the parish of Almondbury, and mentions among others his apprentice John Sikes and servant John Shaw. His wife had predeceased him. The supervisors of the will were Gyles Kay, Umfray Brooke and Edmonde Marshe; witnesses John Crosley, John Turner, Robert Ramsden and William Armytage. Issue:

+ 23. John, married.

+ 24. Anthony, married

+ 25. Thomas, married Isabel
26. Jenet.
27. Alice.
28. Jayne.
29. Elsabeth.
30. Anne,
31. Grace.
These daughters were not married on 1 July, 1555;they were each to receive £30 at marriage.

16. John Armitage, son of William and Katharine (Beaumont) Armitage, was born about 1520 at Farnley Tyas, and died at Kirklees, 21 February, 1573/4. He was a wealthy clothing merchant; numerous fines and deeds show him buying up lands in the West Riding, and he purchased Kirklees from Robert Pilkington and his wife Alice 26 October, 1565 (Yorkshire Archaeological and Topographical Association, Record Series, vol. 2 (1886), vol. 1 of Fines, p. 321). He is the founder of the well-known family of Armitage of Kirklees, and filed his pedigree in The Visitation of Yorkshire Made in the Year 1584/5 by Robert Glover, Somerset Herald, To Which is Added the Subsequent Visitation made in 1612 by Richard St. George, Norroy King of Arms; this has been edited and published by Joseph Foster (printed page 488). See also Miscellanea Genealogica and Heraldica for 1877. The arms granted to this branch of the family were: Gules, a lion's head erased between three crosses batone argent.* The inquisition post mortem of John Armitage, gentleman, of Kirklees was dated 23 March, 1573/4; it mentions lands in Kirklees, Overlees, and Hall in Shepley, Yorkshire; Huddersfield, Hartshead, Harnsey Burton, etc. His administration calling him late of the parish of Dewsbury, was granted to his widow Elizabeth and to John Armitage, his son, 27 March, 1574. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kay of Lockwood, sister of the Reverend John Kay, cleric. Issue:
+ 32. John, married 1, Emma Gregory; 2, Margery (Beaumont) Knight.

18. Thomas Armitage, probably son of William and Katharine(Beaumont) Armitage, was born about 1525 at Farnley Tyas, and died at Morley in the parish of Batley in 1574. His will, dated 25 February, 1573/4, was proved at York 28 April, 1574, and filed in vol. 19 of Wills, p. 714, York Registry. In 1569/70, Robert Eland, esquire, Thomas Armytage and Thomas Crabtree were plaintiffs and William Calverley and Ann his wife were deforciants, in the sale of 3 messuages in Carlynghowe, Batley, Morley and Pudsaye. In his will, Thomas Armitage desired to be buried in the churchyard of Batley; he gave to his maidservant, Margaret Bark-

*It hardly needs to be said that this grant of arms cannot be associated with any pedigrees detailing descent from Godfrey, Joseph or Thomas Armitage who were emigrants from England to North America, from the present evidence. Any such portrayal is absolutely without warrant.

er, and to his children. The wife was then apparently deceased, for she is not mentioned. Witnesses to the will were William Jackson, clerk; Nicholas Burwell, John Webster, John Austwick the younger; Richard Crowder, wheelwright; Thomas Blackbourne, Robert Armytage of Liversedge and John Houldsworth with others. He also gave to George and William Armitage of Brestwell, who may have been his nephews. See The Armitages of Brestwell, Heeley, the Mylne and the New Mylne. Thomas Armitage had issue:

33. William, probably the one of that name whose will, dated in 1619, was proved at York 4 May, 1620, and filed in vol. 35 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 64.
34. Robert, probably the one of that name whose will, dated in 1609, was proved 26 April, 1610, and filed in vol. 31 of Wills at York Registry, p. 300.
35. Henry, not traced further.
36. Thomas; administration on the estate of Thomas Armitage of Batley was granted 10 February, 1591, and the record is filed at Pontefract.

Others who may be of this line are William Armitage of Batley, administration of whose estate was granted 12 July, 1603 (Pontefract); John Armitage of Batley, will dated 3 September, 1592, proved 10 November, 1592, filed in vol. 25 of Wills in York Registry, p. 1062; administration of Edward Armitage of Batley, 12 April, 1616 (Pontefract); Edward Armitage of Morley, glover, will dated 5 February, 1618, proved 26 July, 1619, filed in vol. 35 of Wills at York Registry, p. 411. Fines for the Easter Term in 1614 include the following: Alvery Armitage and Matthew Hudson, quer., John Raynor, deforciant: messuage and lands in Morley; John Raynor and Thomas Wood, quer., Alvery Armitage, def., messuage and lands in Batley; William Halliday, Edward Armitage and Richard Webster, quer., Robert Smith and Anne his wife, William Raynor and Dorothy his wife, def., cottage and lands in Morley.

19. Robert Armitage, son of Humphrey and Margaret (Hutchinson) (Shawe) Armitage, was baptised in the parish church at Kirkburton, 1 January, 1560/1; he is provisionally identified as the one of that name who was buried 3 September, 1595. A Robert Armitage married at Kirkburton 29 June, 1590 to Elizabeth Lockwood. Issue:

37. A chrisom child, buried 24 January, 1591/2.
38. John, baptised 17 June, 1593.

22. John Armitage of the Hermitage, believed by us to be the son of John Armitage of the Hermitage who was born in 1514. This son would be born about 1540, and was buried from the parish church at Almondbury, 31 December, 1590. His will, dated 29 November, 1590, was proved in the Exchequer Court at York 22 April, 1591, correcting Mrs. Collins; it is filed in vol. 25 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 860. He willed to be buried in the parish church at Almondbury; the witnesses to the will were Godfrey Armitage, John Armitage, Beatrix Armitage and Dorothy Armitage. He is stated to have married at Kirkburton, 21 August 1564, Agnes Castell. Issue:

+ 39. Nicholas, married Mary
40. John, executor of the will of his father, baptised at Almondbury 6 December, 1565, sponsors John Baylye, John Armitedge and Isabella Beaumont. Not traced further.
41. Godfrey, baptised at Almondbury, 10 October, 1568, perhaps the one of that name who married in the parish ch. at Thornhill, 23 September, 1602 to Mary Smith. If so, this wife was buried 21 May, 1604. A Godfrey Armitage of Whitley had Susan baptised at Thornhill, 30 August, 1617; and this Godfrey was buried from the parish ch. of Thornhill, 24 May, 1619. No further record is available to us.
42. Beatrix.
43. Dorothy.
44. Grace.
45. Anne, married Henry Shawe.
46. Elizabeth, married James Beaumont; issue.
47. Mary, married Roger Swallow. Probable issue:
i. Richard.
ii. Godfrey.
iii. Sarah.

23. John Armitage of Huddersfield, son of John Armitage the elder, was born before 1533. He received from his father a term in a close called Salter Roode; all lands leased in Huddersfield from William Ramsden, gent.; and he was to be bound in the sum of £200 to perform the will of his father. Mrs. Collins identifies him incorrectly as the one of Farnley Tyas who bought Kirklees and founded that family. In a Fine in Easter Term, 1565, John Brooke was plaintiff and John Armytage and Sibilla his wife were deforciants, relative to a messuage and a cottage with land in Huddersfield. He may have been the John Armitage of Bearscroft in the parish of Huddersfield whose will, dated 17 April, 1579, was proved 6 May, 1579; it was filed at vol. 21 of Wills, p. 338, in the York Registry. Sybil, widow of John Armitage of Huddersfield made her will 3 November, 1607; it was proved 12 June, 1609 and filed in vol. 31 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 60. The administration of a John Armitage of Huddersfield was dated 5 May, 1584 and filed at Pontefract. In the next generation there appears a John Armitage of Huddersfield, which hypothetically we place here:

+ 48. John, married

24. Anthony Armitage, son of John Armitage the elder of Huddersfield, was born after 1534 and before July 1, 1555. He received £40 from the will of his father; and is undoubtedly the cousin mentioned in the will of John Armitage of Kirklees in 1606. He was thus of Liversedge Hall. The name of his wife is not found, but their children included at least

+ 49. Robert, married.

25. Thomas Armitage, son of John Armitage the elder of Huddersfield, was born after 1534 and before 1 July, 1555; and died at Farnley Tyas, Yorkshire before 3 March, 1596, the date his will was proved. The will is filed in vol. 26 of Wills at York Registry, p. 478. From his father's will he was to have an estate in Lockwood, parish of Almondbury in the occupation of Thomas Hemmyngway, and in Farnley Tyas in the occupation of Alice Snape and Robert Hay, with a yearly rent out of the lands of Matthew Marshe in Thurstonland; and received lands also in Lepton in the occupation of James Drancefield, if his father's executors approve his conduct prior to reaching the age of 22 years. This Thomas Armitage must not be confused with a contemporary of Farnley near Leeds, who was at the most a distant relative. Thomas Armitage of Farnley Tyas married Isabel, maiden name not reported. Issue:

50. John, perhaps to be identified with the John Armitage of Farnley Tyas whose will, dated 5 April, 1615 was proved 27 September, 1615, and filed in vol. 33 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 651.
51. Thomas.
52. Frances.
53. Jennet.
54. Beatrice.
55. Robert of Almondbury, will dated 4 January, 1605, brother Thomas.

32. John Armitage, son of John and Elizabeth (Kay)Armitage, was born at Kirklees, Yorkshire, 17 January, 1546/7, and died 26 June, 1606. His will, dated 16 June, 1606, was proved at York 30 October, 1606; the inquisition post mortem was taken 28 August, 1606. He was buried from the parish church at Hartshead, where the family had been communicants. John Armitage was of the Middle Temple, London, and one of the wealthier men in the West Riding. He married 1, before 12 January, 1571 to Emma Gregory, daughter of John Gregory of Kingston-upon-Hull, Alderman; they probably resided at Westroyds shortly after their marriage. He married 2, after 1580 to Margery Beaumont, widow of Henry Knight and daughter of Richard and Katharine (Gascoigne) Beaumont. Issue, by first wife:

56. Emma, baptised 6 September, 1573 at Kirklees, buried 5 October, 1573.
+ 57. John, married Winifred Knight.
58. Anne, married Hugh Wirrall, kt., of Levers Hall. She was buried at Doncaster, 26 October, 1594.
+ 59. Gregory, married Elizabeth Savile.
+ 60. Edward, married Elizabeth Hanson.
61. Joseph, mentioned in his father's will, not traced further.

39. Nicholas Armitage, son of John and Agnes (Castell) Armitage, was born about 1565, probably at the Hermitage, and was buried at Almondbury 14 May, 1609. His will, dated 3 June, 1608 calls him of the Hermitage, yeoman; it was proved at York 24 January, 1609/10. In a Fine in Hilary Term, 1587/8 he was plaintiff and John Armitage was deforciant, in the sale of a third part of two messuages in Carlescoats and Thurlestone and the moiety of a third part of a messuage with land there. In 1590 John Allott was the plaintiff and Nicholas Armytage and Mary his wife with Thomas Blackborne and Isabel his wife were deforciants, in the sale of a messuage and a cottage with lands in Wakefield. The will states that the tuition of his children was to go to John Armitage of Kirklees. Issue, presumably by wife Mary:

62. Margaret, baptised at Almondbury 28 September, 1589, godparents being John Armitage, Margaret Bayley and Alice Lockwood.

63. Dorothy, who married William Crosland. In a Fine in Trinity Term, 1624, Edward Haighe, William Haighe and William Hoyles, quer., William Crosland and Dorothy his wife, def., there is the transfer of a moiety of four messuages, three cottages, a fulling mill and lands in South Crosland, North Crosland and Lockwood; with warranty against the heirs of Nicholas Armitage, deceased, father of said Dorothy.

64. Mary, married Thomas Kirke. In a Fine in Hilary Term, 1624/5, Edward Haigh, William Haigh and William Hoyle, quer., Thomas Kirke and Mary his wife, def., transfer the moiety of four messuages, three cottages and lands in South Crosland, North Crosland and Lockwood. Warranty against the heirs of Nicholas Armitage, deceased, father of said Mary.

65. John, who died aged 3; buried at Almondbury 23 October, 1594.

66. David, baptised at Almondbury, 6 May, 1599, godparents being Rufin Appleyard, John Lockwood and Margaret Hawxworth. He probably died young.

Nicholas Armitage in his will mentions his two "sons" John Raynor and Richard Eastwood. We have not been able to explain the relationship.

48. John Armitage, hypothetically the son of John Armitage of Huddersfield, was born there about 1555 and died there between 1603 and 1605. His will, dated 30 January, 1604 was proved at York 9 December, 1695; and is filed in vol. 29 of Wills in York Registry, p. 732. He held property at Bank in Huddersfield. Issue:

+ 67. John, married.

68. Samuel, a merchant of London.

69. Hester, wife of a Longley.

70. Susan, wife of a Williamot.

71. A daughter.

72. A daughter.

49. Robert Armitage, son of Anthony Armitage of Liversedge, was born about 1570 and died shortly before 28 January, 1599, when administration upon his estate was granted (Pontefract). He married and had issue (at least):

73. Anthony, probably the one who had the following baptised at Thornhill:

i. Thomas, baptised 8 March, 1619/20.

ii. Dorothy, baptised 25 July, 1620 (sic).

An uncle of the foregoing Robert was probably the Robert Armitage who with John Bull alias Bele was plaintiff and Thomas Goodale with Robert Goodale and Agnes his wife were deforciants, in Easter Term, 1575. In Trinity Term, 1575, John Raynor and Robert Armytedge were plaintiffs and William Broke, Johanna his wife with Thomas Broke and Agnes his wife were deforciants, re lands in Liversedge. In Michaelmas Term Richard Armitage and Michael Drake, quer., Robert Armitage and Matilda his wife and Thomas Fearneley and Mary his wife, def., were parties to a Fine concerning two messuages with lands in Little Liversedge, 1621.

57. John Armitage, son of John and Emma (Gregory) Armitage of Kirklees, was born 1 or 2 January, 1573/4, and died in 1650. His will, dated 2 July, 1650 was proved 2 July, 1650 and is filed at London in Register Grey, p. 47. He was High Sheriff of Yorkshire. He married Winifred Knight, daughter of Henry and Margery (Beaumont) Knight, and who was buried 11 July, 1637 from the parish church at Hartshead, Yorkshire. Issue:

74. John, born in 1598, buried at Hartshead 6 July, 1624. Administration on his estate was granted 6 October, 1625 (Pontefract Act Book). He married Dorothy, dau. of Cyril Arthington of Arthington, York; she was living at Heath near Wakefield as his widow before her death, which took place 29 June, 1683. She was buried at Kirkthorpe. No issue.

75. Elizabeth, married at Hartshead, Yorkshire, 4 February, 1626 to Sir John Savile of Lupset, Yorkshire.

76. Sir Francis, kt. and baronet, married Catharine, dau. of Christopher Danby of Farnley. She was buried 16 January, 1666 at Wakefield. Issue.

77. Thomas, perhaps the child baptised at Hartshead and not mentioned by name, in September, 1613; buried 12 May, 1624 at Hartshead.

78. Gregory, baptised 9 March, 1614, buried 18 June, 1617 at Hartshead.

79. Joseph, baptised 16 March, 1616, buried 29 June, 1617 at Hartshead.

59. Gregory Armitage, son of John and Emma (Gregory) Armitage of Kirklees, was a resident of Nethershitlington otherwise Netherton, Yorkshire. His will is said to have been dated 1 March, 1657, but the administration filed in the Administration Act Book in London is of that date, p. 296. He married Elizabeth Savile, dau. of John Savile of Netherton. Issue:

83. William, buried as an infant at Hartshead, 15 September, 1613.

85. John, probably the one buried at Thornhill, 26 June, 1620.
86. Elizabeth, married at Hartshead, 6 September, 1629, Sir Thomas Beaumont of Castle Hall, after of Whitley Beaumont, kt.

60. Edward Armitage, son of John and Emma (Gregory) Armitage of Kirklees, Yorkshire, was the founder of that branch of the family which settled at Kerresforth Hall. He married 1, 22 October, 1607 to Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Hanson, who was buried 26 March, 1616 at Barnsley. His second wife was Jane, daughter of John Popley of Moorchouse, widow of Thomas Cutler of Field Head, Yorkshire, gent.; she was living 4 July, 1653. Issue, by first wife:

92. Francis, baptised 5 June, 1623 at Hartshead.

67. John Armitage, son of John Armitage of Huddersfield, was born about 1580, and died between 22 January, 1612/3, the date of his will and 21 March, 1612/3, when it was proved. It is on file in York Registry in vol. 32 of Wills, p. 305. He was a resident of the Hall in Huddersfield. The name of his wife has not been reported. Issue:

93. Samuel, born about 1605, a citizen and mercer of London, whose will is given in abstract in Genealogical Gleanings in England, by Henry F. Waters, vol. 1, p. 125. The will, dated 23 September, 1631 at London, and in Register St. John, p. 105, mentions his wife Joan

99. Sarah, married John Seaman of Hull, Yorkshire.
100. Jane.

5. The Armitages of Brestwell, Healey, the Mylne and the New Mylne.

In the will of Thomas Armitage of Morley, dated 25 February, 1573/4, he left 3s 4d apiece to George Armitage and William Armitage of Brestwell, although he does not specify their relationship to himself (see page 135). They may have been his nephews or possibly his grandchildren. These seem to be members of a family which had representatives not only in Morley and Batley but also in Gomersall and Little Gomersall. At the beginning of the seventeenth century John, William and George Armitage of Brestwell, without much doubt related to the above-named George and William Armitage, appear on the registers of the parish church at Thornhill. We have found the following records:

John Armitage of Brestwell, will dated 13 July, 1659, was proved 11 February, 1661, and filed in York Registry at vol. 44 of Wills, p. 81. The only child recorded to John Armitage on the parish registers is a son

1. Thomas, baptised 21 July, 1605.

It is quite possible that we have in this John Armitage the father of Joseph and Godfrey Armitage, early settlers of Lynn, Massachusetts. We are quite convinced that research in the associations of the Armitages of Brestwell will shed considerable light upon these connections.

William Armitage of Brestwell, married Elizabeth Brooke in the parish church at Thornhill, 31 July 1608; she was buried from the same church, 2 June, 1639. Issue:

2. John, baptised 30 September, 1610.
3. George, baptised 23 February, 1611.
4. Joseph, baptised 25 August, 1613, buried 13 May, 1615.
5. Margaret, baptised 5 February, 1614/5.
6. Thomas, baptised 15 December, 1616, twin with
7. Godfrey, baptised 15 December, 1616.
8. Robert, baptised 10 January, 1618/9.
9. Grace, baptised 27 August, 1620.
10. Elizabeth, baptised 26 May, 1622, buried 21 April, 1624.
11. Francis, baptised 22 August, 1623/4.
12. Marie, baptised 21 May, 1626.
13. Elizabeth, baptised 23 December, 1627.
14. Joseph, baptised 29 November, 1629.

George Armitage of Brestwell, buried from the parish church of Thornhill, 17 April, 1637; administration was granted on his estate 6 April, 1638 (Pontefract Act Book). He married 15 October, 1609 to Elizabeth Waterhouse. Issue:

15. Ellen, baptised 25 November, 1610.
16. John, baptised 28 December, 1612.
17. Margaret, baptised 11 February, 1615.
18. Thomas, baptised 16 August, 1618.
19. Elizabeth, baptised 7 May, 1620.
20. Marie, baptised 31 March, 1622.
21. George, baptised 5 October, 1623.
22. Alice, baptised 3 August, 1624/5.
23. Susan, baptised 6 January, 1627/8.
24. Sarah, baptised 10 January, 1629/30, buried 11 April, 1632.
25. Child, unchristened, buried 17 May, 1632.

Another family of Armitages who were communicants at Thornhill were probably related to the Thomas Armitage of Heeley (variously spelled) whose will, dated 12 September, 1592 was proved 10 November, 1592; it is filed in vol. 25 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 1062. He was quite possibly the father of

26. John of Heley, so-called, buried from Thornhill 27 July,

1605. As the only one apparently of record at this locality in his generation, he is provisionally assumed to have been the father of

i. John, born about 1580, buried from the parish church at Thornhill, 31 January, 1618/9. His wife, not mentioned by name, was buried 7 December, 1618. Administration on the estate of John Armitage of Heeley was granted 15 April, 1619 (Pontefract Act Book). Probable issue:

a. Joseph, baptised 18 March, 1609, perhaps the one of that name who married at Thornhill, 19 November, 1639 to Alice Copley.

b. Susan, baptised 26 April, 1612.

c. William, baptised 26 July, 1618, probably the child buried 28 February, 1618-1619.

Humphrey Armitage of Middleshitlington (Middleton, Middlestown) called "milnour" of the Mylne, Thornhill parish, made his will 23 January, 1610, which was proved 23 December, 1611. It is filed in vol. 31 of Wills in York Registry, p. 742. He may well be a son of William Armitage junior of Crosland, who was, so far as we can find, holder of land in "His Mylne" or the Mylne (see The Armitages of Crosland and Honley). Humphrey was buried from the parish church in Thornhill 5 March, 1610. The next entries on the Thornhill church register relative to this family include the burial of the widow Armitage of the New Mylne, 29 November, 1623; Humphrey Armitage, buried 10 July, 1629. John Armitage of the Mylne or the New Mylne, perhaps a son of the Humphrey buried in 1610, married Elizabeth Pulley at Thornhill, 8 November, 1612.

Issue of John and Elizabeth (Pulley) Armitage:

27. Thomas, baptised 29 June, 1613, buried 31 August, 1635.
28. Marye, baptised 12 May, 1616.
29. Elizabeth, baptised 2 October, 1618.
30. Edward, baptised 30 January, 1619/20.
31. Susan, baptised 25 November, 1621.
32. Tobie, baptised 31, born 28 August, 1623.
33. Dorothy, baptised 12 June, 1624/5, buried 5 April 1632.
34. John, baptised 25 May, 1628.
35. Sarah, buried 5 April, 1636.

A John Armitage of the Mylne was the father of Helen, buried 24 June, 1639. Another John Armitage, residence not given, was father of John, baptised 28 January, 1606. He may have been of either Brestwell or the Mylne.

6. The Armitages of Crosland and Honley.

In the first part of the sixteenth century three men by the name of Armitage and two of whom were certainly brothers, appear to have been of Crosland in Almondbury parish. These were:

1. John Armitage, whose will of 1527, in the Saturday of Easter Week, was proved by Commission 10 May, 1527 and filed in vol. 9 of Wills in York Registry, p. 372. He was to be buried in the parish church at Almondbury; Elizabeth his wife was the executor of her husband's will with son Thomas. The witnesses were John Tailor, senior, Laurence Beaumont, Robert Butterworth and others. Issue, at least:

4. Thomas, executor of his father's will. Mrs. Collins was of the opinion that he was the Thomas Armitage who was in 1523 listed in the subsidy lists as of Crosland, and who was later buried as Thomas Armitage of Thickhollins in Meltham, 26 August, 1561. See The Armitages of Thickhollins in Meltham.

2. Roger Armitage, brother of the foregoing John Armitage and supervisor of his will, was born about 1475 and died in 1537. His will, dated 10 April, 1537, requested that he be buried in the parish church at Almondbury; the overseers were Peter Armitage, James Oldfelde, Edmond Bayle and son Thomas. The witnesses were Sir Roger Langfelde, "pvsler"; John Tony Cliff; John Armytage, Thomas Brooke and others. The will was proved in the Exchequer Court at York 5 May, 1537 by the oath of James Armitage, to whom probate was granted; and it was filed in vol. 11 of Wills in York Registry, p. 236. This Roger is credited with having been the one of Honley in 1523, and who paid 4s in a subsidy for that year. The name of his wife is not given in the will. Issue:

5. James, executor of the will of his father.
6. Thomas, whom we think the one of Crosland in the subsidy list of 1523. Not traced further.
+ 7. Seth, married.
+ 8. William, married Margaret Turton.
9. Richard, who received 4 ewes and 4 lambs from his father's will.
10. Roland, who received 3 ewes and 3 lambs from the will of his father.
11. Charles, who received 1 ewe and 1 lamb from the will of his father.
12. Giles of Honley, who received his father's best lamb. It is stated that his will, proved in 1561, was proved in 1568. No further information.

3. Peter Armitage, perhaps a brother of the foregoing, an overseer of the will of Roger Armitage. No further record.

7. Seth Armitage, son of Roger Armitage, born about 1500, was holder of lands in Hoyland and in the surrounding country. His children probably were 13. Seth, of Nether Hoyland, buried at Wentworth; his will, dated 10 March, 1602, was proved 30 September, 1602. In 1581 Seth Armitage was deforciant with his wife Elizabeth in a fine brought by William Armitage, plaintiff, in Hilary Term; and Seth was plaintiff in 1595/6 with others contra William Wombwell Esq., Mary his wife, re the Manor of Hoyland and four messuages with six cottages, with lands in Hoyland, Over Hoyland, Nether Hoyland, Wombwell, Worsburgh and Barnsley. Issue not determined.

\+ 14. John, married Jane

15. Jennet, who received from the will of her brother John one cowe or one quye, "3 copill of sheep", one mattress with bolster and one pair of sheets; and two coverlets. Not traced further.

33. Alice, baptised 21 February, 1579/80.
34. Thomas, baptised 3 December, 1581, died young.
35. Thomas, baptised 20 February, 1583/4, probably the one buried at Leeds 13 February, 1621/2; will dated 11 January, 1622, proved 3 October, 1622, filed at vol. 37 of Wills in the York Registry, p. 75. He had issue, probably:
    i. George, baptised at Leeds, 13 April, 1620.
    And perhaps
    ii. Thomas, of Farnley, the administration on whose estate was granted 7 May, 1635.
36. Elizabeth, baptised 19 June, 1586.
37. Beatrice, baptised 19 November, 1588, married 16 November, 1612 to Gilforth Cromack.
38. Isabel, buried 16 September, 1587.

There are a considerable number of entries on the Leeds Registers relating to Armitages who are probably related to the foregoing; in view of the lack of a more complete record, however, we omit them.

11. The Armitages of Doncaster; other notes.

In South Yorkshire, The History and Topography of the Deanery of Doncaster, by the Rev. Joseph Hunter, 1828, under the discussion on the parish of Barnby, Foliot Manor, p. 210, a pedigree of the Armitages of Doncaster are given, beginning with an Edmund Armitage of the latter place, born about 1500. Our examination of this family does not show any connections of apparent interest, and it is on this account merely referred to in passing.

Armitages appear sporadically in a number of other parishes, and as we have stated elsewhere, research in England would undoubtedly complete much of the family record.

JOSEPH, GODFREY AND DEBORAH ARMITAGE OF LYNN, MASSACHUSETTS

Joseph Armitage, who by his own testimony was born in 1600 or 1601, is recorded at some length in the History of Lynn, Massachusetts, by Alonzo Lewis and James R. Newhall, published in 1890; he arrived in Lynn apparently in 1630, five years before Thomas Armitage emigrated in The James. Joseph Armitage lived on the north side of the Common, a little east of Mall street; his land extended to Strawberry brook. He is first recorded as a tailor, a profession characteristic of the Armitages in those days. He was admitted as a freeman in 1637. Later Joseph opened the first tavern in Lynn, called The Anchor; it stood on the Boston road a little west of the river. For one hundred and seventy years this was the most celebrated tavern in Essex county, being half way from Salem to Boston. He was also proprietor of a corn and slitting mill.

He called himself about sixty years of age 26 March, 1661 at the Ipswich court, when he testified under oath as follows:

> In this division of lands I and my brother Godfrey Armitage had given Vnto Vs about fourscore acres. I sold it about twenty and one years since for fiftene pounds in gold. And that the Land in Lyn Village, the thirty and forty acre lotts, are worth and sold for twenty shillings pr acre.

Joseph Armitage was a poor business man and adept at getting inebriated. So we find that having become involved in "pecuniary difficulty, in consequence of certain speculations beyond his means, his wife Jane presented a petition to the General Court,....., that they would 'reconfirme the custody of the said ordinary to the petitioness'". Armitage was allowed to keep the ordinary, but not to draw wine.

He died 27 June, 1680, aged 80. The administration was granted to Henry Styche; Richard Haven and John Ballard appraised the estate, which they rendered at £6/2/6. Jane Armitage, the wife, had died 3 March, 1675. She was probably mother of the children:

1. John.
2. Rebecca, married 14 November, 1665, Samuel Tarbox.

Godfrey Armitage, brother of the foregoing, was admitted as freeman of the Massachusetts colony 14 March, 1639. He was a tailor and farmer of Lynn until about 1639, when he removed to Boston. He became a prosperous merchant of the latter place. Godfrey Armitage is stated by Farmer to have been at Lynn in 1634; Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary of New England calls his wife Sarah, perhaps a daughter of William Webb (we have not investigated this connection); and in The Cogswells in America, by Ephraim Orcutt Jameson, it is stated that Godfrey married at Boston in 1649 to Mary Cogswell, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Thompson) Cogswell. The latter was evidently a second wife. Jameson, however is in error in asserting Godfrey Armitage was a son or brother of Thomas Armitage who came in The James in 1635; these immigrants were assuredly but distantly related. Godfrey is mentioned in a letter of John Cogswell junior, his brother-in-law, written to the latter's parents in March, 1653 from London, England. Armitage was executor of the will of John Cogswell junior. Issue, by first wife:

3. Samuel, born 7 October, 1645, baptised at Boston, Massachusetts, 12 October, 1645; probably died young.

4. Rebecca.

Issue, by second wife:

5. Samuel, born 14 April, 1651; he is probably the Samuel Armitage of Boston, a sergeant, who received £10 a year for carrying the halberd.

Deborah Armitage, a resident of Lynn and contemporary of the foregoing, is the subject of a biography in Liñ, or Notable People and Notable Things in the Early History of Lynn, by James Robinson Newhall, under the pseudonym of Obadiah Oldpath, at p. 239. She seems to have been an itinerant herb-woman and quite aged in 1679. She kept her own cottage, and no further members of her family are found. In her going from house to house she was caught in the open country in a blizzard in 1680, and was found frozen to death when the snow had cleared away. Her relationship to Joseph and Godfrey Armitage, if any, has not been established.

OTHER NOTES

A Thomas Armitage, aged 24, with others was to be embarked in the Expedition, Peter Blackler, master, on 20 November, 1635; he took the oath of allegiance and supremacy at Gravesend (New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 14, p. 357).

The ancestry of Thomas Armitage remains unproved.

DESCENDED OF GEORGE BALDWIN OF HEMPSTEAD, NEW YORK

FIRST LINE

4. CORNELIA BALDWIN 13
m. HARVEY WEEKS son of Abraham Weeks and Hannah Ruland

She was born at the residence of her father, Higbie lane(now avenue), West Islip, town of Islip, New York, 15 February, 1828. The record of baptism is not found.

She was married in the old Methodist Meeting House on Ocean avenue just across from the Trail Inn, Near Rockaway (Rockville Centre) in 1848 to Harvey Weeks of North Babylon, New York; and was subsequently a member of the Methodist Episcopal church church of Babylon. They resided on Burling lane in North Babylon.

She died at North Babylon, New York, of apoplexy, 1 February, 1894, and was buried in the Babylon Rural cemetery in the lot belonging to the late Francis Smith Weeks, 3 February, 1894.

For descendants, see WEEKES - WEEKS, #12.

NOTES

Information was given by the late Francis S. Weeks of Babylon, New York, in whose bible the vital statistics quoted are of record; and likewise the dates of birth and death are engraved on the Weeks monument in the Babylon, New York Rural cemetery. In The South Side Signal for 10 February, 1894, published at Babylon, is printed her obituary notice; this newspaper is on file in the Babylon Public Library.

Cornelia (Baldwin) Weeks was a very tall, stout and amiable woman of dark hair and eyes and a florid complexion. In later years she was lame because of circulatory difficulties and high blood pressure, and got about with difficulty. No picture of her was ever made, but she had what is rather uncertainly called the "Baldwin eyes"; her son William Sanford Weeks resembled her very greatly, particularly in this respect.

Cornelia Baldwin was the daughter of

NOTES

The family of Bible records of members of the family as copied by the late Mrs. Joseph A. Douglas of Babylon, New York, provided the vital records of Amos Baldwin. The birth date as given to the writer, however, disagreed with that reported to the Marshals of the Census, and we have accepted the latter as correct. In his will Amos Baldwin gave his wife Anne, with the exception of one feather bed and bedding thereunto belonging, all his household goods, bedsteads, beds, bedding and all other furniture together with her right of dower. He gave his daughters Cornelia, Charity and Harriet $100 each, his children Hetty, Catharine and Lawrence $50 each; his son Wickham $400; his son Jordan $400; his son Amos $1000; and thereafter the residue went to the children Cornelia, Charity and Amos, share and share alike.

This distribution of the property is said to have displeased the eldest surviving son, Lawrence, in view of the fact that he received so little; later however, he obtained a considerable share of his mother's estate.

According to his daughter, Charity (Baldwin) Smith, Amos Baldwin was tall, spare and blond; and he seems to have been possessed of some considerable business ability, albeit somewhat short-tempered. Charity Baldwin (Mrs. William Jarvis Smith) supplied the present writer with much information, and future generations who may be interested in their family connections are deeply obligated to her.

We wish to acknowledge here also the unfailing interest and help received from her three daughters, the late Hannah Maria (Smith) Haff, the late Louise Belle (Smith) Douglas and Mrs. Frank W. Walker; other records were obtained from the late Riley Weeks of Babylon, New York, the late Mrs. Abraham H. Vreeland of Newark, New Jersey; the late Mrs. Charles H. Johnson of Bayshore, New York; as well as from the writer's grandfather, Francis S. Weeks. In 1908 the late Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, who was an early student of the George Baldwin genealogy, published in the Long Island Traveler a somewhat incorrect record of these connections. These were issued 3 and 10 January, 1908, respectively.

Some members of this family possessed what is known as "temperament"; the chief celebrity in this connection seems to have been Catharine (Baldwin) Edwards. Her ability to lay about her in all directions when she was displeased has given rise to a great number of anecdotes, in most of which her gentle, easy-going and fun-loving husband seems to have played the chief opposite rôle.

The homestead of Amos Baldwin was an excellent example of the typical story-and-a-half Long Island architecture, set well off the road and surrounded by large trees. When we last viewed it however, it had deteriorated sadly. It is much to be regretted that one of the oldest houses in the vicinity is certainly rotting away; we hope that circumstances will permit the descendants of Amos Baldwin to save his home before too late.

Amos Baldwin was the son of

6. AMOS BALDWIN 52
m. PHOEBE WEEKS daughter of Thomas Weeks and Mary Udall

He was born between 1742 and 1755 at Dicks Hills, Huntington, New York; we have the opinion that he was named for Amos Wood, an uncle.

He was a farmer of Dicks Hills until 1782. In that year or the next he had removed to Huntington South (now North Babylon) where he lived adjacent to property of his brother-in-law George Weeks, and facing the present Deer Park avenue. He was of the Episcopalian faith.

Amos Baldwin was a Signer of the Associations in support of the Colonial cause, 6 May, 1775, but served in none of the armies. When the British captured Long Island he took the oath of allegiance to George III and received a certificate attesting to the fact. He was obviously guided by expediency and was equally successful in avoiding military service with the British.

His assessed valuation in Huntington South in 1793 was over one hundred pounds, most of which was represented by real estate. He died between 1800 and 1810, although the exact date has not been found; and no will seems to have been filed. It was frequently true in the days of adjustment following the War of the Revolution that families were reluctant to file either wills or administrations, to avoid expense in difficult times, as well as an occasional political confiscation. He and his wife were buried in the Muncy cemetery at West Islip, New York, in unmarked graves.

NOTES

We have not found the bible of Amos Baldwin senior, and the estimates of his birth and death dates are derived from census records. Publication of this bible record, if it still exists, is very desirable.

The completeness of the present record has been made possible because of the interest of the late Evelyn Briggs Baldwin of Washington, D. C., who in 1907 and 1908 obtained from the descendants then living most of the foregoing genealogy. This he published in the Southold, Long Island Traveler in the issues for 3 and 10 January, 1908; we have amplified it with notes obtained from the late Mrs. William J. Smith of Babylon, New York and the late Mrs. Abraham H. Vreeland of Newark, New Jersey.

There is a tradition that Amos Baldwin was born in 1742; however he is not enumerated in the 1764 assessment list for the town of Huntington, and we believe therefore, that he was then not of age. In Huntington Town Records, Including Babylon, vol. III, at page 92 he is recorded in 1782 as assessed on a valuation of £46. The 1790 New York Census reflects the fact that he lived next to his brother-in-law George Weeks, confirming a statement of the late Mrs. Vreeland (supra). The Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick G. Mather show on page 1062 that he signed Associations 30, 3, 20, 23 at Huntington, 8 May, 1775; but he was no colonial sympathizer. The Town Records, vol. III, p. 40, show that he received a certificate attesting to his loyalty to the king; such certificates were given only to known loyalists, and, in the words of our Revolutionary friends, he was a rank tory.

There are many other friends and relatives who have supplied us generously with information, including the late Eugenie Wicks, Frank S. Weeks, Riley Weeks, John Oakley, all of Babylon, New York, and the late Tunis B. Burr of Commack. The marriage record has been printed in The Records of the First Presbyterian Church at Smithtown, New York, published in vol. 42 of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, and through vol. 44, as indexed.

Amos Baldwin was the son of

7. SYLVANUS BALDWIN 104
m. CHARITY WOOD daughter of Joseph Wood and

He was born at Westbury in the town of Hempstead, New York, about 1705. No baptismal record is found.

He was still living in Hempstead at the time of his marriage, but in the next twenty years had invested in land in Dicks Hills in the central part of the town of Huntington, largely in association with Amos Wood, his brother-in-law. This removal from Hempstead had taken place by 1747, in which year he had pledged three pounds towards the building of St. Johns Episcopal church in Huntington.

He was a farmer and is recorded in the 1764 and 1782 assessment lists in Huntington, as printed in the Huntington Town Records; in the unprinted list for 1793 he was reported for a valuation of one hundred and thirty-five pounds. After this date this property was assessed to Uriah Wood. Sylvanus Baldwin also held lands in East Woods, town of Oyster Bay on 12 April, 1742. He signed his mark with an "S", and was therefore illiterate.

He was a loyalist during the war of the American Revolution,& his name appears nowhere on Association lists. With his son Amos he received in 1778 a certificate attesting to his fidelity to the crown. Nevertheless he could present receipts to the new state government for eleven bushels of oats at 7s,taken by his Majesty's Quartermaster on 2 September, 1779, the total with his time to come to four pounds nine shillings.

Sylvanus Baldwin had died shortly before 24 June, 1788, on which date administration was granted to the widow Charity & the son-in-law Isaac Burr at Smithtown. The administration is filed at Riverhead in Liber A of Administrations, p. 12. He was buried on his farm at Dicks Hills; it is said that the gravestone was standing thirty-five years ago.

Sylvanus Baldwin married Charity Wood in St. George's Episcopal Church at Hempstead, New York, 3 March, 1735; she survived him. Issue:

NOTES

The record of this family was largely compiled by the late Evelyn Briggs Baldwin and published in the Southold, Long Island Traveler in 1908; we have referred to this in more detail under AMOS BALDWIN. The three younger children of Sylvanus Baldwin are given as reported by the late Mrs. William J. Smith of Babylon, New York. Sylvanus Baldwin is recorded in St. George Episcopal church registers upon his marriage, published in Adventures for God, by John Sylvanus Haight, p. 160. The year was 1735 old style, 1736 new style. See also The Town Records of Huntington, New York, vol. II, p. 475; III, appendix, p. 44. In A General History of the Burr Family, by Charles Burr Todd, (Fourth Edition), a detailed record of the descendants of Mary (Baldwin) Burr is given beginning at page 289. Many records of the Baldwins of this line were obtained through the efforts of the late Tunis Bergen Burr.

The descendants of Jacob Baldwin were supplemented by information furnished by Mrs. Ray E. Baldwin of Richmond Hill, New York.

Sylvanus Baldwin was the son of

8. THOMAS BALDWIN 208
m. ELIZABETH

He was born at Westbury, town of Hempstead, New York, about 1680; no baptism is of record.

He was a resident of Westbury and held considerable land at that place, mentioned in the will of his father George Baldwin alias Benham, whom he predeceased. He probably farmed it. His neighbors were his brothers and William Willis senior and junior, John Davis and Nathaniel Seaman. He registered his earmark in the town records, 12 December, 1705, and another which had been form erly Joseph Jenning's, 18 September, 1716.

His will, dated 7 April, 1728, was proved at New York city 11 May, 1728 and is listed as an unrecorded will. The inventory is filed with the New York Historical Society. He was probably buried at Westbury.

Much research has not definitely established the name of his wife, other than that her given name in his will was Elizabeth. She survived him.

Issue:

1. Sylvanus, married Charity Wood. See page 170.
2. Elizabeth, usually identified as the wife of Jonathan Seaman, son of Jonathan and Jane (Denton) Seaman; and who removed to Virginia. The connection as given in The Compendium of American Genealogy, vol. IV, p. 32, is undoubtedly too late by one generation.
3. Thomas, a resident of Hempstead, New York, and born there about 1710. He married Rachel, and is said to have left issue:
   i. Rachel, who married her cousin Jacob Baldwin, son of Sylvanus and Charity (Wood) Baldwin.
4. James, who married Hannah Goulding. See below.

He married 2, at Boston, Massachusetts on 16 August, 1867 to Lydia Ann Gibbs of Bridgeton, Maine, daughter of Alpheus and Sophia (Brigham) Gibbs. Elias Briggs Baldwin was a school teacher and educator in East Greenwich, Rhode Island; Auburn, New York and in Aurora, Illinois. He was active in the formation of the 36th Regiment of Infantry Volunteers under Lincoln's first call for troops, and was chosen captain of Company C. At a later date he was made lieutenant colonel of the 8th Missouri Cavalry and was Provost Marshal of the southwestern district of Missouri. Issue, by 1st wife:

314. Evelyn Briggs, born at Springfield, Missouri, 22 July, 1862, died at Washington, District of Columbia, 25 October, 1933. He attended Northwestern college at Naperville, Illinois and in 1885 and 1886 toured Europe by foot and bicycle. After teaching in a high school in Missouri he joined the Weather Bureau as a meteorologist. His knowledge of this subject obtained for him his first opportunity to accompany an expedition to the North Polar region. After further experience as inspector at large for the Signal Corps of the United States Army, in 1893/4 he joined the Second Peary Expedition to Greenland as meteorologist. In 1897 he planned to join the ill-fated Andree balloon expedition and Baldwin was included in the party which set out for Spitzbergen, although he arrived at the latter place too late to join the balloon attempt at the North Pole. This saved his life, for the party never returned. In 1898/99 he was meteorologist and second in command of Walter Wellman's Polar expedition to Franz Josef land, which reached a latitude of eighty-one degrees and thirty seconds north. The party was inadequately equipped, however, and the final dash to the Pole had to be abandoned. Baldwin, with a small group of the party, set off to the westward, discovered and named Graham Bell land. In 1901 Captain Baldwin made his own definitive and supreme endeavor to reach the Pole. He organized and commanded his own party, the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition. He made comprehensive preparations, and established four supply depots on Franz Josef land. On the northeast coast of Greenland he set up three more, to be used upon his return. But in those days Arctic expeditions went into the frozen wastes of the polar regions and became engulfed in silence. There were no radios or planes. Supply ships carrying coal failed to arrive, and facing a six month siege of arctic weather with insufficient supplies and fuel, Baldwin sent aloft many message balloons. The winds were from the south, and carried these messages away from their intended destination. He managed to guide his men back in safety, and brought the first motion pictures ever made in Arctic regions. Baldwin returned and attempted unsuccessfully to obtain financial support for another expedition. After Peary discovered the Pole in 1909 he dropped further efforts. Thereafter Captain Baldwin was employed in the library of the Navy Department until he was retired shortly before his death. In 1907 he also began an intensive research in the genealogy of the descendants of George Baldwin, and for over twenty years spent much time and money in an endeavor to trace the family in England. The present writer has been privileged to work with Captain Baldwin in some of this, and since the latter's death has endeavored to compile his unarranged notes and to edit them. It is to be regretted that Captain Baldwin's conviction that he had found the English ancestry of George Baldwin has not been sustained by our examination of his records; however, there can be no question that descendants of several Baldwin emigrants from England owe him a great obligation for his unselfish interest in all Baldwins. Captain Baldwin never married.

NOTES

Thomas Baldwin of Westbury recorded his earmarks in The Town Records of North and South Hempstead, as edited by Benjamin D. Hicks, vol. II, pp. 126, 234. An abstract of the will has been printed in the Collections of the New York Historical Society, vol. XI of Wills on File in the Office of the Surrogate in New York City, indexed. We think he resided with his father at Westbury, or perhaps it could be stated that his father resided with him.

The late Captain Evelyn Briggs Baldwin identified the widow of Thomas Baldwin as the Elizabeth Baldwin who married in St. George's Episcopal Church at Hempstead, New York, 13 January, 1733 to Charles Doughty junior, widower of Charity Hicks. A further identification was made, stating that she was the Elizabeth who died at Flushing, New York in 1758, aged 90, and sometimes alleged to have been the daughter of Captain John and Elizabeth (Seaman) Jackson of Hempstead. The widow of Thomas Baldwin was not the daughter of Captain John Jackson, for Elizabeth Jackson had married Charles Doughty prior to the date of her father's will, 26 August, 1724, nine years before the marriage of Elizabeth Baldwin to Charles Doughty junior. The Elizabeth Doughty who died at Flushing in 1758 was probably Elizabeth Jackson; she was certainly not the widow of Thomas Baldwin, for she would have been considerably older than her first husband.

It is true, however, that the names of the children of Thomas and Elizabeth Baldwin are strongly reminiscent of those in the Seaman family; and Nathaniel Seaman was a neighbor of Thomas Baldwin. Another neighbor was John Davis, son of William and Mary (Jennings) Davis, and if Elizabeth were a Jennings there would be an indicated explanation for Thomas Baldwin's having the earmark which formerly had belonged to Joseph Jennings; the latter was related to Mary (Jennings) Davis. Nevertheless, the maiden name of the wife of Thomas Baldwin remains unknown.

We have not seen proof of the statement made by the late Evelyn B. Baldwin that Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Baldwin, married Jonathan Seaman; and the connections of Thomas junior, except for the daughter Rachel who married her first cousin Jacob Baldwin, are still uncertain.

The descendants of James and Hannah (Goulding) Baldwin were compiled originally by Noah Baldwin, and his MS was extended by Evelyn B. Baldwin and Charles Candee Baldwin. The genealogical material compiled by Evelyn B. Baldwin was typed by him and copies of it were placed in the library of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society in New York city, New York, and in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. We have not verified the list of descendants ascribed to James and Hannah (Goulding) Baldwin, and assume no responsibility for the correctness of the record of their descendants. An enormous amount of autobiographical and genealogical material will be found in cases in the Library of Congress, all of which pertinent to the present outline has been used as far as practicable. Evelyn B. Baldwin printed certain of these connections in the Long Island Traveler, published at Southold, New York, and under date of 13 March, 1908. Obituary and biographical notices of the late Captain Evelyn B. Baldwin were taken from the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, and from the Washington (D. C.) Post.

Thomas Baldwin was the son of

9. GEORGE BALDWIN alias BENHAM 416
m. MARY ELLISON daughter of Thomas Ellison and Mary Champion

He was born at Gravesend in the New Netherlands, about 1656.

He testified in a suit between Henry Soper and Jonathan Rogers at Huntington, New York, 1 March, 1682/3; at the time he was stated to be about 27 years of age. Before this, on 21 February, 1680/1 he had been in court at Huntington as a party to a dispute with Jonathan Rogers relative to a barrel of cider, and on several occasions appears in the court records as George Baldwin alias Benham. He made his mark to an instrument discharging Jonathan Rogers from debts due to him, 21 February, 1680/1.

He made the same mark, now called merely George Baldwin or Baldin, 21 December, 1681, when he acknowledged that he had received of his brother Joseph Baldwin two oxen, a bed, some furniture, sheep and jades, as full satisfaction of his part of the estate of "my desesed father gorge baldin yt is of my part of ye sd Estate reall and Porsonall" of Hempstead. After this, thenceforth called George Baldwin, he returned to Hempstead, where he registered the earmarks of his cattle, 3 March, 168¾. He contributed towards the patent of 1696, and is listed in the 1698 census of Hempstead, and was one of the larger landholders of the town.

George Baldwin made a very lengthy will 9 January, 1730/1; it was proved at New York city 25 February, 1730/1, and an abstract of it is printed in the Collections of the New York Historical Society, vol. III of Wills, p. 18. He was probably buried at Westbury in the town of Hempstead.

He married about 1678 to Mary Ellison, who was living in 1698, but who had undoubtedly died before the date of his will. She is not, as has been mistakenly asserted, the Mary Demison, wife of George Baldwin who appears in the Town Records of Huntington and Babylon, vol. I, p. 124. The latter was a wife of George Baldwin senior.

NOTES

In the Court Records at Huntington, New York, unpublished, there are several references to George Baldwin alias Benham; these give us a clue to what was undoubtedly a scandal in the seventeenth century, and renders the paternity of George Baldwin alias Benham uncertain.

Folio 407 of the Court Records states that on 1 March, 1682/3, in a suit between Henry Soper and Jonathan Rogers, George Baldwin testified; and that he was then about 27 years of age. This establishes his birth year as approximately 1656. In the same Records, folio 347, the following appears:

After the death of George Baldwin of Hempstead, his putative son George Baldwin alias Benham assumed the name of George Baldwin. He is of frequent reference in the printed Town Records; these are well indexed.

The senior George Baldwin was in 1656 a resident of Gravesend, New York, with wife Abigail and son Joseph, then about six years of age. George Baldwin was a merchant trader and away on the high seas for most of the time, leaving his wife to find such consolation as she could among the sandy dunes of the little settlement. Whatever the circumstances of her environment may have been, a love affair sprung up between Abigail and Enim Benham, who had recently come to Gravesend from Matapanient in Maryland. Benham, who had left Lord Calvert's colony with the reputation of a second-rate Don Juan, lost no time in consoling Abigail during the long absences of her husband. Matters progressed, and in 1656 the little village was rocking with gossip concerning the manner in which George Baldwin was being cuckolded.

The result is still evident in the charred remains of the records of the divorce proceedings now on file at Albany, New York. This divorce is one of the earliest in the New Netherlands, and was granted by Peter Stuyvesant and his Council. The late Evelyn B. Baldwin obtained the following, photostats of which are on file in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C.:

> The Testimony of Hanah Braddish this daye Testifies yt I heard Enom Benam perswad George Baldons wief for to forsake her husband and to goe to Virginia: and the said Enam w.... sell all that he had and followe her and shee should be his wief thar and ye fore said Enom called her wief and sweetthart all .... when Balden was from hom. ffarthermore ye said Enam said yt hee would faine have .....Child by her, and then what was his should be hers and all should be at her Comand. Abigail Baldwin removed to Rhode Island, alone, where she appears further of record (see page 221).

George Baldwin alias Benham was born the year before this divorce was granted, as appears by his own testimony in the Huntington, New York Court Records, and which we have quoted in the preceding documentation. He is undoubtedly the child referred to by the Court at Gravesend, when Enim Benham was required to pay two hundred guilders and costs towards his "feeing". He is also without much doubt, the Joris Benum who was of passing record in New Utrecht in 1693.

Who was the father of George Baldwin alias Benham? It is apparent to us that George Baldwin senior did not know, for, while he gave the child his name and brought him up in his family, he cut him off in his will with no real property and only a few nominal personal items. He gave his step-son Samuel Embree much more. We know this from the receipt signed by George Baldwin alias Benham, and from the codicil to George Baldwin senior's will. The will, which undoubtedly referred to George Baldwin alias Benham in no unequivocal terms, is missing from New York and Connecticut records, a circumstance which is quite understandable.

We are certain that Enim Benham denied the paternity of the child. Afterward he removed to Newtown, married and had issue, but we do not find that ever had anything to do with Abigail's child. The statement made in one of the affidavits "yt hee would faine have.....Child by her" was made after the child was born and to us the sense of it is that he desired to father a child by Abigail just as George had fathered the infant in the crib. Another indication which favors the legitimacy of George Baldwin alias Benham's birth is that, after the death of his legal father, the Baldwin family accepted him unreservedly and one of his daughters married her first cousin, a known grandson of George Baldwin senior. What may be true is that as George Baldwin alias Benham grew older, Baldwin resemblances or characteristics exhibited themselves unmistakeably. ~~A further observation that can be made, although very weak support to this case, is that both George Baldwins were successful merchants, while Enim Benham had very little success in his own vocation, excluding for the moment his capacity for illicit affairs of the heart.~~

One concluding observation needs to be made. George Baldwin alias Benham developed into a respected and successful individual after surviving what must have been a very unhappy childhood. We admire him unreservedly for it. Those of his descendants who may find in the foregoing some unhappy reading, will realize, if honest with themselves, that the primary purpose of genealogy is to tell the truth; and also they will not judge from their own set standards the peccadilloes of another century.

ENIM BENHAM

In the Raskob-Green Record Book, by John Jakob Raskob, it is stated at p. 96 that one of the passengers on The Dove in 1633 for Maryland was Anam Bonam. The Dove arrived in Virginia 27 February, 1633/4, and came to anchor off an island named St. Clement's Island in the upper reaches of Chesapeake Bay, 5 March, 1633/4. It is thus that we find in Maryland, Early Settlers, a mimeographed record compiled by Mrs. Annie (Walker) Burns Bell in 1936, at vol. 1, p. 3, the following references (abridged):

> Liber ABH p. 6
> Thomas Gerrard Esquire, demands 2000 acres for transporting himself and two able menservants. Viz: Thomas Cooper and Anam Benham.

> Thomas Green demands one right for himself and 2 servants: Anain Benom and Thomas Cooper -- Brought in 1633.

In Archives of Maryland, vol. I, (1883), Proceedings and Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, January 1637/8 - September 1664, p. 3, it is recorded that Annum Benum was summoned to appear at St. Mary's the 25th day of January, 1637; he was then called a planter of Mattapanient. On 11 February, 1638 (p. 28) he, as a proprietor at Mattapanient was ordered to make nominations to the house of Burgesses.

After 12 November, 1646 and before 20 December, 1648 he had removed to Gravesend in the New Netherlands, near the site of the present Coney Island, New York. From the Gravesend Town Records he is shown to have received a house and plantation from George Jewell 22 January, 1652/3, and is mentioned in other transactions for about four years prior to this date; Bergen, in his Early Settlers of Kings County, New York, records that he received a plantation lot 20 December, 1648.

He was a sponsor with Joris Joels, Jean Mat and Ellen Morgen, in the Dutch church in New Amsterdam, 25 June, 1651 when Rutgert and Maria, twins of Wouter Wael ware baptised. He is next of record in 1656/7 because of the affair with Abigail Baldwin.

He obtained a patent for 28 morgens of land in Flatlands, New York, 30 August, 1660 and shortly afterward removed to Newtown where he was a freeholder, 4 December, 1666. He was rated at that place 26 February, 1667; and on 29 September 1667, George Pearsall sold Enim Benham his house, barns, outhouses, lot, orchard and yard, with meadows and all other privileges situate before Mespat Kill, bounded by Laurens Pieterszen on the north, John Woolstoncroft on the east, and Thomas Wandell on the south (Town Records of Newtown, vol. 1, pp. 11-13).

He had died before 9 November, 1670 when John Grissell of Mespat and Alice Benham, his widow sold land formerly belonging to Enim Benham, recently deceased, to Mark Dole for 200 guilders seewan. He probably had issue, but they have not been traced.

A contemporary of Enim Benham, and perhaps related to him, was Joseph Benham of New Haven, Connecticut, son of John and Margery Benham of that place. He married 15 January, 1657 to Winifred King; their son John removed to Kings county, New York; the latter has been identified mistakenly as a son of Enim Benham.

George Baldwin alias Benham may have been the son of

10. GEORGE BALDWIN 832
m. ABIGAIL (SWEET) perhaps daughter of John Sweet and Mary

He was born probably in England, and before 1620.

The baptismal record remains undiscovered.*

He is first of record as reported in the Documentary History of Rhode Island when he appears in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, December, 1646. In 1648 he was of Providence and in 1649 was closely associated with Captain Thomas Baldwin of the latter place and his son Thomas Baldwin junior. He had removed to Warwick before 26 May, 1649 as Robert Taylor and Samuel Goodyear stood trial on suspicion of felony because of charges brought by George Baldwin. On 6 April, 1651 he sold land at Warwick adjacent to that of James Sweet.

*The late Evelyn Briggs Baldwin identified this George Baldwin as the one baptised at Great Missenden, Buckinghamshire, 29 March, 1624, son of John and Dorothy Baldwin of that place. After a thorough examination of evidences gathered by Mr. Baldwin during twenty years of research, we regret that we positively do not agree with this identification, and as a consequence the parentage of George Baldwin, for us at any rate, remains unproved. We think him to have been son of a Thomas Baldwin.

He was granted the right to vote as a townsman of Warwick, 8 March, 1652. A month later, on 10 April he transferred to Christopher Unthank his dwelling house and lot with all manner of outhousing, fencing and also a six acre lot. He had another dwelling house and realty when he sold the latter to Peter Buzicott 10 December, 1654.

In the next year he had settled at Gravesend in the New Netherlands as a member of Lady Moody's colony. He tarried some years in this town; it was here that he divorced his wife Abigail in January, 1656/7. In 1662 he is briefly in Flushing, and on 7 February, 1664 had already built and fenced in land on Eaton's neck in the town of Huntington. Thomas Powell, acting as attorney (agent) for Thomas Matthews, sold land at the north and west of Huntington harbor to George Baldwin on 6 March, 1665. He deposed in an action brought by the inhabitants of Huntington contra Robert Seeley, as to who held the rightful title to Eaton's Neck, 27 to 29 September, 1666, The town of Huntington lost, but Baldwin secured his title by a grant from Richard Nicholls, 22 June, 1667, for a consideration to be paid to Robert Seeley.

George Baldwin and his wife Mary, then recently married, sold their Eaton's neck property to Alexander and Richard Bryan of Milford on 11 July, 1668. On 11 January, 1668/9 Baldwin had already removed to Hempstead, New York, when he was a member of companies selected to take up land according to law. He is further recorded 6 July, 1670 with his son Joseph as defendant in an action brought by John Smith junior. He had bought the homestead of John Ellison, 4 August, 1668.

His will is not found. A codicil, dated 15 January, 1680/1, mentions the will and gives his stepson Samuel Embree one half of his right of commonage. He had died before 21 December, 1681, when his putative son George received his share of his father's estate.

George Baldwin married 1, Abigail, perhaps a daughter of John and Mary Sweet, whom he divorced 23 January, 1657. Shortly before 1668 his wife was called Mary Demison; he married and probably third, Mary Embree, widow of Robert Embree of Stamford, Connecticut.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Joseph, born at Warwick or Providence, Rhode Island, about 1650, resided at Hempstead, New York and living there in 1698. He married Ellen or Eleanor, maiden name unknown. Issue:
   i. Mary, not traced further. Statements made that she married William Loines are incorrect.

ii. Sarah.
iii. Martha.
iv. Elizabeth.
v. George, born about 1689, married his cousin Dorothy Baldwin, daughter of George and Mary (Ellison) Baldwin alias Benham. He was of Elizabeth, New Jersey in 1728. Issue not traced.
vi. Dinah.
vii. Joseph, misidentified on occasion with his father; m. 1, Phoebe Hall, daughter of Joseph Hall of Hempstead; 2, Mary, who survived him. His will was dated 16 May, 1728. Issue, presumably by first wife:
A. Mary, baptised in St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead, New York, 30 April, 1728.
B. Ellinor, baptised 30 April, 1728.
C. Jacob, a resident of Rumbout precinct, Dutchess county. His will, dated 22 June, 1781, was proved 18 February, 1789. He married Maria, maiden name unreported. Issue:
a. Joseph.
b. Martha, perhaps married Daniel Rainor, as her father mentions a son-in-law by that name.
c. Elizabeth, married van Vlackeren and had issue.
D. Isaac, a resident of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, made his will 10 October, 1787; it was proved in 1791. Issue, wife's name not reported:
a. Isaac, married and had issue.
b. William, baptised at Hempstead, New York, 2 December, 1756.
c. George.
d. Daniel.
e. Mary, baptised at Hempstead, New York, 30 April, 1749, married Aaron Forman.
f. Susannah, married Clapp.
g. Anne, baptised at Hempstead, New York, 21 January, 1753, married Benjamin de la Vergne and had issue.
h. Sarah, baptised at Hempstead, New York, 30 March, 1758, perhaps died before her father.
viii. Thomas, born after 1698.

Issue, by which wife not determined, but probably Abigail:

2. Mary, who had borne an illegitimate child before 11 October, 1672, and for whom her father provided a £50 bond recorded in the Town Records, that his daughter should not become a public charge. This bond was written off by the order of Robert Jackson; it is possible that the well-known Captain John Jackson was father of the child. See JACKSON.

Issue of Abigail (Sweet), and either of George Baldwin or of Enim Benham:

3. George Baldwin alias Benham, married Mary Ellison. See page 198.

In Rhode Island Court Records, p. 44, at a court held at Warwick, is reported the action against Robert Taylor and Samuel Goodyear, wherein George Baldwin filed a complaint. In Original Records of Warwick, Rhode Island, p. 134, George Baldwin sells land in Quinimicoke neck on 6 April, 1651 to James Green; the witnesses were James Swette and Thomas Thornicraft. ABIGAIL (SWEET), WIFE OF GEORGE BALDWIN

In the Warwick, Rhode Island Town Records as printed, the following entries appear on page 8:

> 1657, December 3. Action of slander (erased) entered by Thomas Bradley against Peter Buzicut, blacksmith.
>
> Abigail Sweete of Warwicke vs Peter Buzicut, blacksmith, trespass.
> An action of slander entered by Abigail Baldwin of Warwick vs Peter Buzicut.

Therefore, when Abigail, the divorced wife of George Baldwin was banished from Gravesend after her affair with Enim Benham, she returned to Warwick, Rhode Island. Her appearance in the locality that George Baldwin had left indicates that she probably had relatives there; this is borne out by investigation. The late Evelyn B. Baldwin held the opinion that Abigail was a member of the Sweet family of Providence and Warwick, and that after her return she probably married Thomas Bradley and returned to England. The interpretation of the foregoing entries in the Warwick Town Records seems to be that Peter Buzicott had discussed Abigail's divorce in uncomplimentary terms; Buzicott had been a neighbor of George Baldwin when the latter was in Warwick, and had bought his house and land. Both Bradley and Abigail brought suit for slander, and Abigail under her maiden name of Sweet sued Buzicott for trespass on property which she held of her own right. There is no other Abigail Sweet in the records.

We agree with Captain Baldwin's interpretation of this situation, although there is no positive proof. Abigail may have been, therefore, the daughter of John and Mary Sweet of Providence, step-daughter of Ezekiel Holliman. In the earliest records of Rhode Island we find that Thomas Baldwin, John and James Sweet and Ezekiel Holliman are frequently closely associated, and later Ezekiel Holliman was obviously known to George Baldwin. This may explain where Ezekiel Baldwin, eldest son of George Baldwin alias Benham, obtained his given name. There may have been, as well, an association of Abigail's maiden name with the term of endearment reported used by Enim Benham in Hannah Bradish's affidavit----"Enom called her wief and sweetthart"---- although this probably more of an amusing speculation than anything else,

Accepting this provisionally then, we include a discussion of the connections of the Sweet family. A number of references have been correlated, not all of which agree. They include the Warwick Town Records, Austin's Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island, p. 194, Recollection of Olden Times by Thomas R. Hazard, and particularly The Ancestry of Frederic Rockwell Gladstone Sanborn, by Frederic Rockwell Sanborn, 1933, vol. 2, p. 17. From these we have compiled the following:

1. John Swete, a resident of Trayne or Traine in Modbury, Devonshire, inherited property there about 1540. The family had been living in that vicinity since 1438. Issue included at least

2. Adrian, who married and had issue:

i. John, an immigrant to Boston, Massachusetts. From a pedigree given in the Visitation of Devon in 1620, it is given that the wife of John was Mary Periam, daughter of John, son of William Periam.

+ 3. Robert, married Johanna

3. Robert Swete or Sweete, son of John Swete, married Johanna
Issue:

+ 4. John, married Mary

4. John Sweete or Sweet, son of Robert and Johanna Sweete, is identified as the immigrant to Rhode Island. He came to America probably in 1630 together with his wife, his two sons John and James and his daughter Meribah (and if Abigail Baldwin was his daughter she was undoubtedly included). They settled at first in Salem, Massachusetts. In Felt's Annals of Salem, vol. 2, p. 456 it is stated that on 6 June, 1637, John Sweet was fined for killing a wolf dog of Governor Endicott's in the yard of the latter. After this incident and perhaps because of it John Sweet removed to Rhode Island, although allegations that he came with Roger Williams are certainly incorrect. John Sweet must have died about about 1638, in which year his widow Mary married Ezekiel Holliman. The land held by John Sweet is said to have been where the present state house of Rhode Island stands. That Mary's husband was named John and not Isaac is proved by a deed of their younger son James given in Kingston, Rhode Island, 8 November, 1686, wherein he speaks of "my father John Sweet deceased, who was one of the first purchasers of Providence." (See The Owl, vol. 2, No. 2).

Austin in his Genealogical Dictionary states that John Sweet died in 1637, the same year in which he had a grant of land, and after his death the widow obtained it. Her will, dated 31 July, 1681, was probated in the same year. It makes no mention of Abigail, but this is not significant, for she may have been either deceased, or cut off for obvious reasons.

Issue:

1. John, born in England about 1620. He appears to have been a law-abiding, respected and frequently honored citizen of the towns of Providence and Warwick, Rhode Island. He and his younger brother James are included among 31 persons who were admitted with the 12 original purchasers of Warwick prior to 5 June, 1648. On 2 June, 1651 and again on 1 June, 1658, he was appointed sergeant. In 1655 at Warwick, he was taxed for having in his possession "an anker" or ten gallons of liquor. In 1655 he was made freeman and on 18 October, 1660, he was Commissioner from Newport. In 1660 he bought land at Narragansett (Kingstown) and in 1671 was living at Acquidnesset (Wickford). He had a gristmill and other works on the Potowomut, and was burnt out by the Indians during King Phillip's war in 1675. He died in 1677, after July 16. He is reported to have married Elizabeth Jeffrey about 1651. She was born in 1629 and died in 1684 as the widow at that time of Samuel Wilson. Issue:
   i. John, married Deborah Reynolds.
   ii. Daniel, married Eleanor Carpenter.
   iii. James, married Jane Browning.
   iv. Henry, born in 1657 at Newport, married Mary Griffin and died at Attleboro, Massachusetts.
   v. Richard, married 1, Mehetable Larkin and 2, Priscilla Carpenter.
   vi. Benjamin, married Susannah
   vii. William, married Thankful Hamilton.
   viii. Jeremiah, married Mary
   ix. Daughter.

   Sanborn gives as his authorities in this connection: Arnold's Vital Records of Rhode Island; New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. IX, p. 53, vol. LI, p. 361; The Owl, vols. 2 and 3; The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, No critical analysis of the English origins has been made.
2. James, born in 1622, a resident of Warwick, Rhode Island. He died in 1695. His wife was Mary Greene, daughter of John and Jona (Tattersall) Greene; issue.
3. Meribah, who later changed her name to Renewed. She married Jan Gereardy, son of Phillip and Marie (Pollet) Gereardy; he was an adventurer, trader and privateer who ranged the whole Atlantic coast. Prior to 5 June, 1648, he had become an inhabitant of Warwick; it may be that he was induced to settle there from an interest in Mrs. Ezekiel Holliman's daughter.

And quite possibly:

4. Abigail, wife of George Baldwin. See the preceding.

Ezekiel Holliman, son of William Holliman of Tring Magna, Hertfordshire, and church warden there, was a resident of Dinton, Buckinghamshire on 26 October, 1624 when John Cocke brought an action against him (Chancery Proceedings, (English), C 3, Bundle 340, No. 63). Ezekiel appears after 1635 as a resident of Dedham, Massachusetts, and removed later to Warwick, Rhode Island, where he became pastor of the First Baptist church. Here he was a neighbor of George Baldwin and witnessed conveyances of land made by the latter.

THE POSSIBLE ENGLISH CONNECTIONS OF GEORGE BALDWIN OF WARWICK, RHODE ISLAND, GRAVESEND IN THE NEW NETHERLANDS, AND HEMPSTEAD, NEW YORK

In the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 39, page 133, under the heading of an article entitled "Early Inhabitants of the Barbados", published by Samuel Briggs of Cleveland, Ohio, is given a list of residents in the Barbados in 1638. These included Thomas and William Baldwin, and Thomas Baldwin disappears from the records there shortly afterwards. In 1646 Captain Thomas Baldwin and his son Thomas junior appear in Providence, Rhode Island in association with John and James Sweet, Ezekiel Holliman and others. They are of record for about two years, being in 1648 of Newport. They were merchant traders as were so many others, including George Baldwin. It is possible that George Baldwin was the son of Captain Thomas Baldwin; and future research conducted with this hypothesis as a basis may be productive.

The late Captain Evelyn Briggs Baldwin once told the writer in the course of a conversation that he had found evidences in London that George Baldwin was a member of one of the Guilds. If so, it would seem that a search in London would be a proper beginning. Captain Baldwin's opinion, however, that George Baldwin necessarily came from Buckinghamshire because of his associations with Alexander Bryan, Ezekiel Holliman and Thomas Whitlock, is a matter for individual acceptance. His case is made out in Gleanings From Early English and Colonial American Sources, Relating to the Baldwin Family, and filed in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. We discuss under RICHARD BALDWIN the descendants of John Baldwin of the Hayle in Wendover parish, Buckinghamshire, from whom George Baldwin was thought to have been descended. However, as the descent of George Baldwin alias Benham is by no means assured from this name, further investigation rests largely upon proving the paternity through George Baldwin senior.

The ancestry of George Baldwin is unknown.

DESCENDED OF GEORGE BALDWIN OF HEMPSTEAD, NEW YORK

SECOND LINE

9. MARY BALDWIN 433
m. (THOMAS)YOUNGS son of Thomas Youngs and

She was born probably at Westbury, town of Hempstead, about ~~1675~~ ca 1685,

She married for her first husband a member of the Youngs family of Oyster Bay, New York, and identified as explained under YOUNGS with a son of Thomas Youngs of Oyster Bay. This husband died about 1705, leaving her with an only son George Youngs, who was mentioned in the will of his grandfather, George Baldwin alias Benham.

She married 2, about 1706 to William Loines of Jamaica and Hempstead, New York, presumed to have been a son of John Loines of Jamaica. She was living in 1713 when with her husband William Loines, they sold property at Jerusalem South (West Neck) in the town of Oyster Bay to Elias Cornelius.

She had died before 29 January, 1730/1, the date of her father's will. No administration of her effects is found.

For descendants by her first husband, see YOUNGS, #432.

Issue (by second husband) (LOINES):

1. William, born about 1707, married Ann Valentine, daughter of Obadiah and Mary (Kirby) Valentine of Hempstead, New York. Issue:
    i. Mary, born 12 February, 1734, married 7 December 1754 to Thomas Townsend, son of John and Phoebe (Carman) Townsend.
    ii. Stephen, born 26th day of 9th month, 1737, died in 1773. He married in 1759 to Phoebe Titus, born 12th of 12th month, 1735, died 25th day of 3rd month 1815, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Seaman) Titus. Issue, at least:
        A. John, married Phoebe Seaman.
        B. Phoebe, married Jacob Valentine.
        C. (perhaps) Stephen.
    iii. William, born 25th day of 5th month, 1746, married in 1767 to Sarah Alsop, daughter of Richard and Sarah (Pearsall) Alsop. Issue:

A. James, married Phoebe Wright.
B. Richard, married Sarah Hopkins.
C. Anne, married Thomas Ross.
D. Sarah, married Edmund Kirby.
Perhaps others.

NOTES

The connection between the Baldwin and Youngs families is proved not only from the will of George Baldwin alias Benham, which mentions his grandsons George Youngs and William Loines, but also from that of Stephen Loines. The latter instrument was dated 15th day of 9th month, 1772, when Stephen Loines of Westbury in the town of Hempstead, names his relatives as his wife Phoebe, children Phoebe (not 18) and John. The executors were his brother William Loines, his brother-in-law John Titus and his uncle George Youngs (who was his grandmother's son by her first husband). A codicil was added to this will on the 20th day of 9th month, 1772, and after having been admitted to probate 19 November, 1772, was filed at Liber 28 of Wills in the office of the Surrogate in New York city, New York, page 355.

DESCENDED OF RICHARD BALDWIN OF DUNDRIDGE, BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

FIRST AND SECOND LINES

11. ANNE BALDWIN 1,373; 1,521
m. ALEXANDER BRYAN son of Thomas Bryan and Frances Bowling

She was born probably at North Church, Hertfordshire, about 1604.

It is stated that she was baptised at that place in March, 1604/5. The registers of Berkhampstead St. Mary for North Church do not begin until about sixty years later, as reported at the present time.

She married before 1632 to Alexander Bryan of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire; in that year she with her son Richard Bryan had a bequest from the will of their uncle Richard Baldwin of a freehold tenement in Wendover in that shire. She came to America before 1639 with her husband, and became one of the earliest settlers in Milford, Connecticut.

She died at Milford, 20 February, 1661/2 and was probably buried at that place. There seems to be no will or administration of her effects.

For descendants see BRYAN, under #1,372 and #1,520.

NOTES

Charles Candee Baldwin of Cleveland, Ohio, published in 1889 a genealogy of the connections of Alexander Bryan under the title of Alexander Bryan of Milford, Connecticut, which is a development of the research undertaken in his famous Baldwin Genealogy. Mr. Baldwin's compilation was assisted also by the work of that famous genealogist of the nineteenth century, Col. Joseph Lemuel Chester. For other references, see the next preceding generations.

Anne Baldwin was the daughter of 12. ROBERT BALDWIN 2,746; 3,042

m. JANE (ROBINSON)

228

He was born probably on a farm held of the Manor of Dundridge in the parish of Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, about 1577.

No baptismal record has been found.

In the next year his father had acquired the Manor from Sir John Pakington, and he was therefore undoubtedly brought up in the Manor house. However, while the family held this property, they are not designated as Lords of the Manor; during these years they called themselves yeomen, and the term gentleman was seldom used until the seventeenth century.

Robert Baldwin resided on lands obtained by inheritance and at North Church in Hertfordshire. He also held lands in Flaunden in the same county.

He died between 22 March, 1605/6, the date he made his will, and 1 April, 1606, when it was proved. He may have been buried either at Berkhampstead St. Mary or at Aston Clinton.

His wife was Jane, and from his will it is indicated that her maiden name was Robinson, and that she was from Henley-on-the Thames, Oxfordshire. She survived him.

Issue:

1. Anne, married Alexander Bryan. See page 227.

NOTES

The original statements relating to these connections were written by Col. Joseph L. Chester and communicated to Charles Candee Baldwin for publication in his Baldwin Genealogy (1881) and the Baldwin Genealogy Supplement (1889). The abstract of the will of Robert Baldwin, however, is regrettably incomplete as hitherto published, and another abstract made for Evelyn B. Baldwin is as follows:

> Robert Balldwin of North churche in the countie of Hertford, yeoman. Dated 22 Marche 3 James (1605). My bodye to be buryed in the churche yarde of North Churche. To the poore of North Churche, xs. To the poor of Barkhampsteade, xs. To the poore of Cholsburie, xs. To the poore of St. Leonards, xs.To Bartholomew Gravener, iis. To my aunt Lettice Foster, of Trynge, xs. To my brother-in-lawe, William Robinson of Henley, xxs. To my sister Buck, of Henley, xxs. To her sonne Izaac Bucke, iiis iiiid. To every brother and sister childe I have, iiis iiiid. To my servante, Agnes Thornton, iis. Residuary legatees: my wife Jane and my daughter Anne. If so it be that my wife be with childe of a man childe I bequeathe my land to him at the age of one and twentie yeares and to his heires for ever. And if it prove to be a woman childe, then the land the other daughter's porcon to be equallie devided between them at the age of eighteen yeares. Sole Executor, my brother, Richard Balldwine. Overseer: my brother Salter.

Witnesses: Willyam Willett, Tymothie Dawbeney, Ralph Axtell. Proved 1 April, 1606 by the sole executor named.

In view of the fact that none of the sisters of Robert Baldwin married members of the Robinson or Buck families so far as is reported, these must have been related through his wife. Of the several possible relationships that could be erected, the most probable is that her name was Robinson.

The registers of Henley-on-the-Thames begin in 1558, but they have not been available to us at this writing. They should be examined and may disclose essential information on the paternal antecedents of Robert Baldwin's wife. In A History of Henley-on-Thames, by John Southerden Burn, church and assessment lists disclose few of the name, but significantly a great many members of the Bryan family are mentioned. In a subsidy made about 1550 Richard Robynson was assessed for £5 in goods, and John Bryan is also in this list.

The foregoing will abstract is noted as taken from official record of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, volume Stafford; Mr. Evelyn B. Baldwin's copy is filed in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. under the classification CS439 B26 1925k.

Robert Baldwin was the son of 13. HENRY BALDWIN 5,492; 6,084

m. ALICE KINGE

He was born about 1530 and probably on lands belonging to the Manor of Dundridge, now Dundridge Farm, in the parish of Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire.

He was the executor of the will of his father in 1552/3, then of Dundridge. On 14 April, 1578 he with his son Richard were purchasers of the Manor of Dundridge from Sir John Pakington; in later years legal actions were instituted which definitely prove these connections (see NOTES following). In an action brought before the Court of Chancery by Thomas Grange of St. Leonard's in the parish of Aston Clinton 27 January, 1592, Henry Baldwin was defendant: the issue was a leasehold in Burres in the same parish.

Henry Baldwin made his will 2 January, 1599/600; it was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury 2 July, 1602 by his son Richard as executor. The original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. He was buried in the parish churchyard at Aston Clinton, 1 June, 1602.

He married about 1555 to Alice Kinge, perhaps Kingym (Kingham) whose will, dated 4 June, 1622 was proved 14 December, 1626 in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. She was buried at Aston Clinton 23 November, 1626. Her ancestry has not been determined.

Issue:

1. Richard, born at Dundridge, Buckinghamshire, about 1556, buried at Aston Clinton 14 October, 1636. He was named in the will of his grandfather Richard Baldwin in 1565/6, and was executor of the wills of both his father and mother. His own will was dated at Dundridge 18 February, 1632 and proved 29 November, 1636; it is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1636, p. 65. He married at Cholesbury, Bucks., 18 October, 1592 to Christian Tokefield, called Touchfield on the registers and also written as Towckfeild and variants; daughter of Richard and Isabella Tokefield. Her will, dated 16 February, 1641, was proved 27 July, 1641. They had no surviving children and the Manor passed to his nephew Henry Baldwin, son of Sylvester and Joane (Wells) Baldwin.
2. Sylvester, born at Dundridge, Buckinghamshire, about 1560, and died at Cholesbury between 4 June, 1622 and 18 February, 1632/3. No will or administration of his estate is reported. He married in the parish church at Cholesbury, 28 September, 1590 to Joan Wells. Issue:
    i. George, who died young, and who was buried at Cholesbury, 21 November, 1596.
    ii. John, living in 1599/600, identified as the one of that name who was buried at Milton Ernest, Bedfordshire, 10 February, 1631/2. No issue; the eldest son of Sylvester Baldwin in the next year was Henry Baldwin.
    iii. Henry, born about 1600, was a barrister-at-law and of Clifford Inn, London, England. His will, dated 11 September, 1661, was proved 20 March, 1661/2; he was buried in in St. Mary's church at Guilford, Surrey. He held the Manor of Dundridge, which descended to his eldest son Edward Baldwin. Henry Baldwin married Mary Hurst, only daughter of Edward Hurst of Kingston-on-Thames, who was baptised 28 July, 1605. Issue:
        A. Edward, holder of the Manor of Dundridge, married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Turfrey of London.

B. Thomas, whose will, dated 16 July, 1676, was proved 21 February, 1676/7; a resident of Guilford, Surrey.

ii. Sylvester, immigrant to New England, died on board the ship Martin in June or July, 1638. His nuncupative will was proved at Boston in the Massachusetts Bay Colony 13 July, 1638; he uttered the will 21 June 1638 and it was presented at the Court of Assistants held in Boston on the 4th day of 7th month, 1638 (4 September, 1638) when the widow Sarah and the son Richard were allowed as executors according to the will. Ralph D. Smyth, the historian of Guilford, Connecticut had stated that the maiden name of the wife of Sylvester Baldwin was Sarah Bryan, but he could not give Charles C. Baldwin proof. Since then it has been alleged that she was a sister of Alexander Bryan of Milford, Connecticut, which is absolutely untrue (see BRYAN). The widow removed to New Haven and was enrolled among the first planters at that place with five in her family and £300 assessed valuation. She married 2, in 1640 to John Astwood of Stanstead Abbey, Hertfordshire, born in 1609, died in 1653; he was an immigrant on the Hopewell, and at Milford, Connecticut in 1639. Sarah in her own will, dated 9 November, 1669, mentions "my beloved brothers Richard Platt and Thomas Wheeler to be the overseers, to see this my will fulfilled" (Baldwin Genealogy, by Charles Candee Baldwin, 1881, vol. I, p. 43). From this statement it has been assumed by some that Richard Platt married Mary Bryan, who would then be a sister of Sylvester Baldwin's wife. We cannot disprove Mr. Ralph D. Smyth's assertion, but it would seem quite possible that he might have confused the marriage of Samuel Baldwin with Amy Bryan, which took place at Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, 17 October, 1623, with the present connection. From a study of the connections of Richard Platt (see PLATT), who is undoubtedly the one who married Mary Grover at Aldenham, Hertfordshire 12 November, 1620, it may be supposed that Sarah was either his sister and a daughter of Richard and Rose (Windsor) Platt; or a sister of his wife, and hence born Sarah Grover. It is improbable that her name was Platt, but she may well have been a member of the Grover family of Chesham, Buckinghamshire. Another interpretation of the statement made in Sarah's will is that Richard Platt and Thomas Wheeler were called brothers in a religious sense, that is, brethren in the church, and as a consequence not necessarily related to her. There is considerable probability that this interpretation is correct. Thomas Wheeler of Milford, Connecticut, who is probably the "brother" of Sarah ( ) (Baldwin) Astwood, made his will 18 November, 1672. Therein he desired "my loving friends, Mr. Robert Treat, brothers Daniel & Samuel Buckingham, to be ye overseers....." This ambiguous phraseology complicates the problem of solving the implied relationships. Daniel Buckingham married Hannah Fowler and was of a later generation than Thomas Wheeler; the word "brothers" we think applies to an objective description of the known relationship between Daniel and Samuel Buckingham. As the descendants of Sylvester and Sarah Baldwin have been of frequent and detailed reference, we omit them here.

iii. Richard, married at Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, in April, 1607 to Philippa Corbman; she was buried at Aston Clinton 30 July, 1641. He was living in 1627 but had died before 1661. Issue:

B. Alice, baptised 22 August, 1613.
C. John, baptised 19 February, 1614/5.
D. Jane, baptised 12 April, 1618.

His will, dated 16 December, 1651, was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury 26 October, 1652, and filed at 154 Bowyer. The abstract says that he was to be buried in the churchyard at Chesham; to his daughter Marie Butterfield, 5 marks. To Richard Butterfield, one house wherein he now dwelleth. To Thomas Beecher, £5. To William Beecher, the brother of them, £20. "To my daughter Anne Didsbery, 20s. To my daughter Didsbery's children, £5 a peece. To my daughter Martha Ward, 12d. And to my daughter Ward's sonne. ii. Martha, baptised at Chesham, 20 October, 1605, married Thomas Ward. Issue.

iii. Richard, baptised 28 February, 1608 at Chesham. His will, as of Richard Baldwin, citizen and girdler of St. Antholin's parish in London, was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury and filed at 70 Seager. Dated 9 June, 1634, the abstract is as follows: Whereas I have in stocke with my partner George Thwaites, the somme of £270 I dispose the same as followeth: To my father and mother £120 and a ringe with a deathes head to my said mother of the value of 20s. Witnesses Thomas Benbowe, Uryan Okes, Richard Preice, Henry Colbren. The will was proved 23 July, 1635. He never married.

iv. John, who has been identified as the one who signed letters of administration on the intestacy of his mother Hannah, 14 October, 1637 at Chesham. He was then a mercer. He is of no further record, and the statements appearing in C. C. Baldwin's Baldwin Genealogy concerning him are probably correct.

vi. A daughter, ~~perhaps Agnes,~~ married Thomas Beecher or Butcher. Probably issue.

4. Robert, married Jane (Robinson). See page 227.
5. Jane, married James Bonus or Bownest. Issue.
6. Mary, who married 30 January, 1598/9, Richard Salter. Issue.

NOTES

We omit the will of Henry Baldwin as given in The Baldwin Genealogy, by Charles C. Baldwin, (1881), vol. I, p. 24, and that of his wife, as this book is readily available. A number of records not printed therein, however, have been made available through the efforts of Evelyn B. Baldwin, and which, somewhat abridged, we reproduce here:

Court of Chancery: Proceedings. Bundle 427, No. 48. 22 May 1661. The answer of Henry Baldwyn defendant to the Bill of Complaint of Edmund Luke, Compltf (abstracted)..... it may be that Isabel Tokefield in the Bill named was heretofore seised to her and her heires and the said Richard Tokefield in the Bill of Complt. her right of and in a messuage or tenement etc., in Great Chesham.....Bucks and of diverse lands tenemts and hereditaments to the said messuage or Tenemt belonging in Chesham great Missenden and Wendover in the said County of Bucks.....The defendant disclaims knowledge or possession of lands described in the bill, excepting one close called Braybush close containing by estimation five acres to which the defendant is entitled as herein set forth: At a trial held by nisi prias at the last Assizes in Aylesbury, the Counsel for plaintiff did give in evidence an indenture and fine as in the said Bill set forth, And did endeavor to prove that some lands in the possession of this defendant or his said tenant lying in Wendover were parcel of the lands contained in the said indenture and fine but did not give in reasonable proof. But it was proved by witnesses produced by the defendant that the lands in question were part of the lands held and enjoyed by Henry Baldwyn father of the said Richard Baldwyn and by the said Richard Baldwyn after the decease of the said Henry all the lifetime of the said Richard Baldwyn who died above 24 years ago and ever since after him by this defendant as cousin and heir of the said Richard Baldwyn before the indentures in question were ever made out: and as parcell of their lands and tenemts called Dynridge (Dundridge) lying in Wendover and Chesham aforesaid. The plaintiff in this trial was non-suited and the defendant denies that the said Richard Baldwyn after the decease of said Richard Tokefeild had or held possession of the premises in the said indenture and fine mentioned, unless it were the said close or parcell of lands called Braybush close which might be parcell thereof the which said Close the said Richard Tokefeild and Richard Baldwyn upon whom the sd lands and tenements.....to be settled did by deed of ffeoffment bearing date the Two and Twentieth day of ffebruary, 42nd Elizabeth, conveyed to Robert ffeld and John Weston and their heirs to the use of the said Richard Baldwyn and Christian his wife daughter of the said Richard Tokefield and of the heires and assigns of the said Richard Baldwyn.....(claims the close as rightful heir from evidence he submits)....., The defendant further denies that the reversion of the premises after the death of Richard Baldwyn ever descended to Robert Tokefield or that after the latter died sine prole* the same descended to Mary Luke named, the complainants mother.

The foregoing abstracts have been taken from the MS of Evelyn B. Baldwin, under the title of Close Rolls Relating to the Baldwin Family of Bucks, and filed in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. under the classification CS439 B26 1925f; and also from Court of Chancery Proceedings relating to the same subject, classed as CS439 B26 1925a.

The Victoria History of the County of Buckingham, vol. II, p. 257 recites substantially the same story as given in the foregoing:

(Aylesbury Hundred: parish of Aston Clinton).

In 1544 the king sold the manor of Dundridge to Sir John Baldwin, who died seized of the manor. It then passed to his grandson Sir Thomas Pakington, and in 1578 it was sold by John Pakington to Henry and Richard Baldwin. Before 1628 (Rec. R. East 3 Charles I) the manor passed to Richard, presumably the son of Henry Baldwin, and he settled it on his wife Christian and his own heirs male, on his brother Sylvester and the four sons of Sylvester. Richard died in 1636 (Chancery Inq. p. m.:Ser. 2, ccccLxxxi, 132) and although his widow survived him, Dundridge seems to have come into the possession of Henry Baldwin, his nephew. Before 1670 it passed to Edward Baldwin, who sold it to Thomas Baldwin. Another Edward Baldwin appears to have succeeded to the manor before 1689, and his family held it unto 1768, when Robert Monteith Baldwin sold it to the father of Edward Darrell.

The ancestry of the wife of Henry Baldwin, usually termed Alice Kinge, is not found. From her will it is evident that she had two brothers and a sister:

1. Thomas, who married and had a son William Kinge.
2. Robert, who married and had issue.
3. Maria, who married a Mountegue, perhaps William Mountegue.

George Austin Morrison junior published records of various King families resident in England in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. II, pp.31-8, 70, 135 and 198; vol. 36, pp. 222, 263; vol. 38, pp. 139, 213; vol. 41, pp. 263; vol. 42, p. 7. These compilations show that the name is frequent in the vicinity of Buckinghamshire, and in the various articles much original research is manifest. However, the seats of the families reported are not in the immediate environment where Alice (Kinge) Baldwin is found, and the names, while strongly reminiscent, justify no assertion that the connections of Alice, other than those given in the foregoing, have been found.

Henry Baldwin was the son of 14. RICHARD BALDWIN 10,984; 12,168

m. ELLEN

He was born probably about 1500 and in the parish of Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire.

He was a yeoman and tenant of the manor of Dundridge at an early date, and died as a resident on that farm in 1552/3. His will, dated 16 January, 6 Edward VI (1552/3) was proved 21 February, 1552/3. It is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1552/3, folio 156. He was buried presumably at Aston Clinton.

His wife Ellen is sometimes called Apuke from the circumstance that he mentions his brother John Apuke in his will. This phraseology does not, however, prove her maiden name. She survived her husband; her will, dated 24 of some month from 24 November, 1565 to 24 October, 1566 (the date is partly obliterated), is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, original.

Issue:

1. Henry, married Alice Kinge. See page 229.
2. John, not 23 in 1552/3, born about 1535. He received from his father land and dwelling at Dungrove in the parish of Chesham, where he resided until shortly after 22 April, 1585. In 1592 he was a resident of Beaconsfield, when he was co-defendant in an action brought by Thomas Grange; he was still living at Beaconsfield in 1599. He married in the parish church at Chesham, 20 October, 1567 to Agnes Dell. Issue:
   i. Isabel, baptised 6 July, 1569, at Chesham.
   ii. Agnes, baptised at Chesham 27 May, 1571.
   iii. Richard, baptised at Chesham, 13 March, 1574/5, a resident of Beaconsfield. Administration on the goods of this Richard Baldwin, called gentleman, were granted to Elizabeth Watkins, wife of John Watkins of Amersham, yeoman, 39 September, 1645; and filed in the Administration Act Book in the Archdeaconry of Bucks., 1633-45, p. 39. John Watkins, son-in-law, and Richard Baldwin of Beaconsfield were bound in £200 to [illegible] Issue:

A. Elizabeth, who married John Watkins of Amersham, and who had issue as recited in the will of her brother (see below).

B. Richard, a resident of Beaconsfield, Bucks. He made his will 1 August, 1661, signed again 12 August, 1661, proved 11 December, 1661, by the executor, Edward Baldwin. It is filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 208 May. The abstract below is given for its interest but we have not endeavored to analyse the relationships:

To be buried in the church yard of Beaconsfield, near the place where his father was buried. To his sister Elizabeth Watkins, £10 yearly and his brewhouse and brewing vessels at Amersham. To John Watkins, eldest son of his sister, £3, also brewhouse, brewing vessels and all lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever in Amersham, during his lifetime and after his decease the same to John Watkins his son, and to his heirs forever, liable to the estate herein before bequeathed to his sister in the brew house and as to the brewing vessels. To the said John Watkins, son of the said John, his sister's son, £300 to be paid to him when 21. "All the children which the said John, my sister's sonne shall have living when the said John his sonne, shall attain the age of 21 years, £300, to be equally divided betweene them." And to be paid to them as they shall attain the age of 21 years. To Henry Watkins, his sister's second son, £5 and the yearly sum of £20. All such children as the said Henry shall have living at the time of his death, or age of 44 years, which shall first happen, £300 equally between them, and to be paid unto them when they shall attain the age of 21 years. To Anne Merridue, his sister's grandchild, £100 when 21. To Elizabeth Baldwin, his sister's daughter, £5, and to all children as she shall have living at the time of her death, or age of 40 years, £200 equally between them, and to be paid when 21. To his son-in-law Edward Baldwin, and Elizabeth his wife, £5 apiece. To Thomas Baldwin, son of Mr. John Baldwin, his uncle, £5. To Richard Baldwin, grandchild of his uncle, £50 to be paid when 21. To his daughter, Elizabeth Lane, £20. To his daughter, Anne Clarke, £10. And to his daughter Margery...(wife of?) Robert Mitchell, £20. To his aunt Baldwin, £10. To his cousin Mistress Isabel Day. £20. To the children of his cousin William Fisher, £50 between them. To his cousin Mary Reynold, £20. To his cousin Rebecca Filpott, £20. To the children of his cousin Anne Roberts, deceased, £20 between them. To his cousin Mr. John Baldwin of Harvill, £50. To his aunt Mistress Rebecca Applebee, £20. To his son-in-law, Mr. George Turfrey, £200. To Elizabeth Stonehill, his servant, £5. To William Brickhill, his servant, 40s. To Elizabeth Hardinge, his servant, £3. To Johan Carter, his daughter's maid, 20s. To said son-in-law Edward Baldwin and his heirs, his capital messuage or tenement and demesne lands thereunto belonging called Whiltons in Beaconsfield, and also lands, grounds, meadows, leaseholds, pastures, feedings, fields, crofts, woods and springs called the Meade, heretofore divided into two parts, the Pond Close, Pond Close Meade, Hazell Field, Pease Croft, the Heath Widefield, Widefield-heath, Widefield-heath spring, Rendall Field, the "Three Leggre Crossin", Great Westfield, Little Westfield, Barne Field, Pooke Field, Redding Field, Redding Field Spring, Little Chiswick, Great Chiswick, Ferney Field, the Birchin Spring, the Birchin Spring pightle, the "Horse Leasowes", and all other lands..... and 10 closes...which he purchased of his uncle William Geary and Rebecca his wife,..(and other lands) situate in Beaconsfield, Chalfont St. Giles and Chalfont St. Peter.....upon condition that he, the said Edward Baldwin pay all legacies (with exceptions noted); in default of payment then the aforesaid gift to be void and all the same to Thomas Waller, Edmund Gosnold and Henry Gould of Iver, co. Bucks, gentlemen, in trust to sell for the best price. Residuary legatees and joint executors, his wife and son-in-law Edward Baldwin.

The wife Susanna had been the widow of Richard Turfrey; by her first husband she had had Elizabeth, wife of Edward Baldwin of Dundridge, son and heir of Henry and Mary (Hurst) Baldwin (see page 230); and also other children. By her husband Richard Baldwin there was apparently no issue. Previously given descents of this Richard Baldwin from the senior John Baldwin of the Hayle are incorrect.

C. A daughter, sister of the above-mentioned Richard Baldwin, who married a Baldwin and had a daughter Elizabeth.

iv. Sarah, baptised at Chesham, 2 February, 1577/8, buried there 3 February, 1577/8.

v. William, baptised at Chesham, 29 November, 1579, a resident of Beaconsfield. Administration on his estate was granted 23 November, 1610 to the widow Rose Baldwin and the record filed in the P. C. C. Administration Act Book, 1610, folio 218b. Descendants not traced.

vi. Thomas, baptised 2 September, 1582, buried 22 April, 1583, all at Chesham.

vii. John, born after 1583, and probably at Beaconsfield; a resident of Chepping Wycombe, Bucks. He calls himself an ironmonger in his will, which was dated 2 March, 1659/60 and proved 12 February, 1660/1. The original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. He married Elizabeth and had issue:

A. Thomas, who married Mary. His will, dated 21 May, 1666, mentions his children

a. Richard.

b. Mary.

B. John, of Harville. Not traced further.

C. Elizabeth, married Lane.

D. Anne, married John Clarke.

E. Margery, married Robert Mitchell.

viii. Rebecca, married Applebee.

Perhaps others.

3. Richard, not 23 in 1552/3, born about 1540, assigned tenements in Cholesbury from the will of his father, with all lands belonging to the same, and likewise a leasehold held of Christopher Ashfield. He is not mentioned in the will of his mother in 1566 and not found further. He probably died without issue, unmarried. The late Evelyn B. Baldwin noted that in twenty years of thorough searching through evidences, not one record was found beyond the will of Richard's father which could be credited to this Richard Baldwin. See also the descendants of John Baldwin of the Hayle.

4. Alice, living in 1552/3, deceased before 1560/1.

5. Agnes, not nineteen in 1552/3, born about 1546, married 18 November, 1566, William Grange. She was buried 10 March, 1567.

6. Cicely, unmarried in 1552/3, mentioned in the will of her mother in 1566. Not traced further.

7. Lettice, probably to be identified as the "Ethel" Baldyn who married in the parish church at Tring, Hertfordshire in May, 1572 to John Foster of Tring. The word "Ethel" (this name is an anachronism in that era) has a question mark after it in the abstracts made from Tring registers, which shows that the transcriber could not read the Christian name except with difficulty. She was buried at Tring in April, 1620. Issue.

NOTES

We have already referred to source material under HENRY BALDWIN (pages 233 and those following; page 244), and elsewhere under the present family heading. The source of the present information, when not readily apparent from the text, will be found in the unorganized collection of Evelyn B. Baldwin, filed in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. This collection consists of numerous abstracts of wills, not only from Buckinghamshire but from all counties in England generally, which were considered relevant; Court of Chancery proceedings; Court rolls and associated records, abstracts from parish registers of Tring in Hertfordshire, Little and Great Missenden, and a large amount of excursive discussion, some of which was irrelevant. The classification of this collection comes under CS71 B19, 1925a, b, c,d, e, f, g, h, i, j; CS439 B26, 1925a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, j,k; and several other units under CS71 B19 for the years 1891, 1922, 1924, 1926, 1928 and 1933. We have endeavored to be specific in referrals, but to classify this information here by its innumerable headings would serve to confuse rather than otherwise.

The printed Buckinghamshire Marriages, published under the supervision of Phillimore and others, together with the printed parish registers of Chesham, have been of service. In the marriage records of Aston Clinton appears that of Henry Baldwin to Mary Kynge, 24 January, 1565. This may be intended for the marriage of Henry, son of Richard and Ellen Baldwin, with Alice Kinge, and the Mary a clerical error. In these same registers on 18 November, 1566, Agnes Baldwin, sister of the latter Henry, married William Grange.

The hitherto untraced John Baldwin, son of Richard and Ellen Baldwin, was established to have been of Amersham and Beaconsfield, and concomitantly the accounts of his children have been correctly set forth. The connections of the third son Richard have been a source of discussion for more than fifty years, but it must be pointed out that Charles C. Baldwin in his Baldwin Genealogy Supplement presumes this connection, admits it to be without proof, and bases his decision upon the circumstance that the two Richard Baldwins were resident of the same small locality. The later Richard of Cholesbury, however, does not seem to have held the same property as that given by the first Richard of Dundridge to his son, and hence the presumptive connection as based on a supposed geographical continuity is left with very little support.

Among the records gathered by Evelyn B. Baldwin there were considerable references to the disposal of property among the descendants of Richard of Beaconsfield, with emphasis upon the connections of Elizabeth Baldwin who married John Watkins at Amersham, 26 April, 1622. These we have not given in any detail, as being beyond the intended scope of this work.

In The Home Counties Magazine, vol. 8 (1906), in an article by M. J. C. Meiklejohn entitled "The Place Names of Northwood and District", page 168, appears the following:

> One of the most widely worshipped deities was Thunor, the god of thunder (the words are identical), and his name is preserved in that of Dundridge Farm near Cholesbury.

This farmhouse, the one-time Manor of Dundridge, and held by the Baldwin family of the present connection, was still standing in 1912. In Royal Commission on Historical Monuments (England): An Inventory of the Historical Monuments in Buckinghamshire, vol. 1, p. 21, is found:

> Dundridge Farm, house and moat, 1/2 mile S. E. of St. Leonard's Church. The House is of two storeys, built in the 17th century, but almost entirely re-faced with brick in the 18th or early in the 19th century. The roofs are tiled. The plan is L-shaped, with the internal angle facing E.; there is a small wing on the N. W., and at the S. angle is a projecting stair-case, which is partly of 17th century brick and timber. The chimney over the S. W. wing is of original brick. Most of the rooms have old chamfered beams in the ceilings, and one room has a wall covered with 17th century panelling, richly moulded, now partly hidden by papered canvas. The S. staircase has two 17th century panelled doors, one having small original ornamental hinges; the stairs, also original, have a central newel. Two other original doors are of plain battens with strap-hinges. A barn, adjoining the S. E. end of the house, has some 17th century brick in one wall; the other walls are weather-boarded.

THE POSSIBLE ANTECEDENTS OF RICHARD BALDWIN OF DUNDRIDGE, AND THE CONNECTIONS OF HIS BROTHER JOHN BALDWIN OF THE HALE. BUCKS

The earliest resident of Dundridge, and apparently the only one of the surname, was Robert Baldwin, who had removed from Aston Clinton to Dundridge in or before 1528. In Abstracts of De Banco Rolls, 1509 to 1544, Relating to the Baldwin Family, and prepared by Evelyn B. Baldwin, the following is given:

> Thomas Wedon and John Tokevyle, by their attorney put themselves on the fourth day against Robert Baldwyn, late of Aston Clynton, senior, husbandman, alias of Dunrigge, parish of Aston Clynton, in a plea of debt of 10 quarters of wheat price £16. Robert Baldwin does not come in answer, and therefore he is to be attached to be here in the Octaves of Hilary.
> (De Banco Rolls, No. 1,059, Michaelmas Term, 20 Henry VIII, 1528, Membrane 219: Buckinghamshire).

This Robert Baldwin with his wife Agnes was settled at Dundridge in 1536:

> John Long, citizen and salter of London, by his attorney puts himself on the fourth day, against Robert Baldwyn late of Aston Clinton in county Bucks, husbandman and Agnes his wife, executrix of the will of William Dolte of Rickmansworth, yeoman, county Herts., in a plea of debt of £50 which they unjustly detain. The Sheriff is ordered to summon them, says they have nothing. Therefore they are to be taken and had here from St. Martin's day in 15 Days. On which day Jdn came and Robert and Agnes did not and the Sheriff notifies they cannot be found. Therefore here in the Octaves of Hilary.
> (De Banco Rolls, No. 1,091, Michaelmas Term, 28 Henry VIII, 1536, Membrane 479d, Hertfordshire).

Robert Baldwin is believed to have been the father of Thomas Bawdewyn, so-called, of the Foreign of Wendover (a now obsolete term, much misunderstood by abstractors of record), in the parish of that name. The abstract is as follows:

> The will of Thomas Bawdewyn of the Forenyce (sic) of Wendover, dated 7 May, 1522, filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Case I, 42. My bodie to be buried in the churcheyarde of Our Lady of Wendover. To the high Awter there 2d. To each of the viii lights ther 2d. To the reperation of the belles ther 6d. To the sustenacon of the torches ther 6d. To the chapell of Seynt Johns in the borowe, 2d. To Our Lady Churche of Lincoln, 2d. To each of my godchildren 2d. To John, my son £6 when he cometh to the age of 16 years. And in the mean tyme I will that Jone my wiff shall have the keping gyding and rule thereof as long as she kepeth sole onmaryde. And when she entendith to mary then Robert Bawdewyn my fader and John Gynger her father shall have delivered unto them the said sum of £6 to the behoff of my said son John. To Agnes my daughter £4, when she comyth to the age of 16 years and her mother to have the keping in like manner. John my son shall have, after his mothers decease, all my indenture holde and copyhold during the years of the same. Residuary legatee and sole executrix: my wife Jone. Supervisors, Robert Bawdewyn, my father, and John Gynger, my wyffes father. Witnesses: John Bawdewyn of the Hale, John Chappyn, John Tracher, the younger, Robert Hyll. Detts that I owe: to John Gynger 16s. To Thomas Jakman 10s. To John Hull of the borough of Wendover, vii quarters whete. Proved in May, 1522 by the executor named.

Other entries which probably refer to Robert Baldwin are:

Robert Baldwyn gives to the King 6s 8d for licence to agree with Thomas Whelpley with Alice his wife in a plea of covenant of one messuage, 80 acres of land and 12 acres of wood, with the appurtenances in Chesham, Bucks., and has a cyrograph by Guy Palmer, the narrator.
(De Banco Roll 1 Henry VIII, 1509, No. 989, Membrane 237, Michaelmas Term: Buckinghamshire).

Memorandum, that the Justices of the King here in Court 12 July of this term delivered to John Halle, deputy of the Sheriff of the said county, a certain writ close of the King directed to said sheriff, as follows:

Henry, etc., to the sheriffe of Bucks, that he summon before the Justices at Westminster in the octaves of Michaelmas or before the Justices of Assize in county Bucks, to be held according to the statute on Monday next before St. Margaret, the Virgin, at Little Brikhill, co. Bucks, the bodies of.....(among others)...Robert Baldwin...to be sworn in Court before the Justices, at Westminster - between John Illyng, plaintiffe and William Cochin, late of Weston Turvile, co. Bucks, husbandman, als of Weston in a plea of debt to give judgment there 16 June, 10 Henry VIII.

(De Banco Plea Roll, Trinity Term, 10 Henry VIII, 1518, No. 1,021, Membrane 363, Buckinghamshire).

This Robert Baldwin of Wendover, later of Aston Clinton and finally of Dundridge, was stated by loose notes of the late Evelyn B. Baldwin to have removed to Dundridge in 1523. He was still living in 1536, but had died before 1552/3, when Richard Baldwin was the leaseholder on the Dundridge Farm, at the time the latter made his will. As he was of record as early as 1509, a grandfather in 1522, he was probably born about 1475. His wife Agnes was without doubt the daughter of one William Dolte of Rickmansworth in Hertfordshire; both of these died without wills of discovered record, and therefore at the present time we cannot state positively that the following were his children. Yet it will be observed that no other Baldwins of Dundridge of this generation are found; that a witness of the will of his son Thomas was John Baldwin of the Hale; that Robert is a prominent name among the descendants, and therefore we are convinced, after reviewing all the information available, that Robert and Agnes (Dolte) Baldwin were the parents of

1. Robert, from the fact that his father is called Robert senior. Not found otherwise. Perhaps died young.
2. Richard, who married Ellen, perhaps Apuke. See page 245.
+ 3. John, married.
+ 4. Thomas, married Jone Gynger.
+ 5. (perhaps) Hugh.

3. John Baldwin, believed son of Robert and Agnes (Dolte) Baldwin, was born in Buckinghamshire about 1500, and was the founder of the family which arose in the locality of The Hale, approximately one mile west of Dundridge. He was of age in 1523, as the following De Banco Roll proves:

> John Baldwyn of la Hale, in the parish of Wendover in his own person, claims against John Baldwyn of Chollesbury, a messuage, 80 acres of land, 10 acres of pasture, 10 acres of wood, with appurtenances in Belyngdon, Assherigge and Chartrigge, as his right and heritage and in which John Baldwyn of Chollsbury has not ingress except by a disseisin unjustly made by Roger Hunt. John Baldwyn of Chollesbury comes in own person and defends, etc. and calls to warranty Thomas Fysshe, and John Baldwyn of la Hale claims against him. Adjournment given after John Baldwyn of la Hale returns into court and Thomas Fysshe does not and makes default. Therefore judgment is given that John Baldwyn of la Hale recover his seisin against John Baldwyn of Chollesbury, of the said premises and Thomas Fysshe in mercy, etc.
> (De Banco Rolls, Plea Roll, Michaelmas Term, 15 Henry VIII, 1523, No. 1,041, Membrane 145d, Buckinghamshire).

The circumstances which caused this suit are not known to us. The will of John Baldwin of the Hale was dated 12 March, 1564/5 and the original is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. His eldest son George was executor; it was proved 2 March, 1565/6. His wife was then dead, and her name has not been found. Issue:

+ 6. George, married Avelyn
+ 7. Nicholas, married Agnes Fisher, widow.
+ 8. Sylvester, married 1, Agnes ; 2, Agnes Bachelor, widow.
+ 9. Richard, married
+10. Robert, married Agnes +11. Thomas, married Joane, perhaps Tyndall.

4. Thomas Baldwin, son of Robert and Agnes (Dolte) Baldwin, was born about 1500 in Buckinghamshire. He was a resident of the Foreign of Wendover, and died young. His will, dated 7 May, 1522, was proved in the same month; for an abstract see page 251. He married Jone Gynger, daughter of John Gynger. Issue:

+12. John, married Alice

13. Agnes, under age in 1522; not traced further.

5. Hugh Baldwin, possibly a son of Robert and Agnes (Dolte) Baldwin, was a resident of Prestwood in Great Missenden, Bucks. He appears frequently as both plaintiff and defendant in suits. He sued Henry Benning, Robert Woodward and Drew Gardener, all of Great Missenden for trespass in 1528; he instituted another suit in the same year against John Gardener, Henry Benning and Robert Woodward for cutting grass on his close at Prestwood. In 1533 he summoned John Gynger and John Golder to answer his plea that they took his beasts and detained them against the peace, etc.; moreover the defendants at Chalfonte took 11 of his pigs, 25 May, 1533. Hugh seems to have had a quarrelsome time of it. Also in 1533 Thomas Saunders of Agmondesham (Amersham), dyer and Rowland Hudson, of Great Hampden, husbandman, were attached to answer Edmond Smythe, Esq., John Naughan (perhaps Vaughan), gent., Hugh Baldewyn and John More in a plea that they broke with violence into closes of the said John, Edmond, Hugh and John at Great Hampden, Little Hampden, Missenden and Wendover and took herbage to the value of 10 marks, by pasturing their cattle there and plowing the ground. Hugh Baldweyn of Prestwood with Robert Smith of the same, laborer, William Knight of the same, husbandman, Nicholas Wylkyns of Martens Eng, Great Missenden, husbandman, Thomas Bradeley of the same, tailor and William Anlowe of the same, husbandman, were attached to answer Robert Hyll in a plea that they had with violence broken into his closes at Great Missenden and Hughenden, knocked down his newly erected hedges, used his herbage. In the next year (1534) Hugh Baldwyn was attached to answer Thomas Bukmaster for pasturing his cattle upon Bukmaster's property. Likewise John Gardener retaliated against Hugh by attaching him in the same sort of suit. These suits suffered various postponements; there are others of a similar nature, but no genealogical information. It is possible that the Hugh Baldwin mentioned in the will of Richard Baldwin of Dundridge in 1552/3 as his brother's son, was son of the foregoing. This last Hugh Baldwin, sometimes supposed a son of John Baldwin of the Hale, was definitely not a son of the latter.

6. George Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, termed eldest son and executor of the will of his father. His own will, as of The Hale, was dated 10 February, 1576/7, and proved 20 March, 1576/7. The original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. His wife was named Avelyn and as he mentions his brother William Aystell (or Ayskell) it is probable that his wife was the sister of the latter. Issue:

+14. Ralph, married

15. James, of no further record.

+16. Edmund, married 1, Isabell ; 2, Cicely Chapman.

17. John; further record inconclusive.

18. Henry; of no further record.

19. Michael, perhaps the one of that name buried at Tring, Hertfordshire, in January of 1632.

7. Nicholas Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, was born about 1530, and became a resident of Edlesborowe (Ellesborough)in Buckinghamshire. His will, dated 2 July, 1577, was proved 23 April, 1581, and the original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. It is reported to be partly missing and therefore defective. The descendants of this man, as a consequence, have been incorrectly given, but fortunately there are Chancery Proceedings to assist in completing the record. We quote certain abstracts:

Chancery Proceedings, Class 8, Mitford Division, Bundle 1,No. 42, not dated, but about 1581. To the right Honourable Sir Thomas Bromley, Knight, Lord Chancellor of England.Complaint by John Baldwin of Edlesborough, co. Bucks, yeoman,that John Baldwin, grandfather of complainant, now deceased, was seised in demesne, as of fee, of and in one Messuage in Great Missenden, co. Bucks, and lands thereunto belonging and of and in a messuage in Wendover and three closes called Hamonds, Bushee Close and Lidleys in Wendover, and he entailed the same on his son Nicholas, and his lawful issue by his then wife Agnes. Nicholas Baldwin died February last seised thereof and the same descended to complainant as son and heir of Nicholas by said Agnes, but the deeds concerning the same having come to the hands of Triamor Smith, of Edlesborough, yeoman, and Agnes his wife and of Silvester Baldwin, brother of Nicholas and uncle of complainant, the latter is in danger of losing his inheritance. One Ralph Baldwin of the Hale, Wendover, pretending title to the same and knowing the deeds of the same are in the hands of the said persons and having entered into the premisses. A little before the death of Nicholas, Agnes Smith showed complainant the said deeds in a coffer in Triamor Smith's house. Having refused to give up these deeds, when asked to do so, complainant desired the said Triamor and Agnes Smith and Silvester Baldwin may be subpoenaed to appear to answer the same. N: Polk:

Answer of Triamore Smith, Anneyes, his wife and Silvester Baldwin. They deny complainant's statements and Annys Smythe says that about twelve years ago her brother-in-law, Nicholas Balden, came to her and asked her to keep certain deeds, which she at first refused to do, but afterwards gave him a small casket, wherein he put the same and locked the said deeds therein, and kept the key, he telling her the deeds concerned land which Nicholas and Annys his wife had conveyed to their younger son Triamor Baldwin. About two years after, having need of the casket, she gave Nicholas space in a cupboard in Triamore Smith's house to put the deeds and Nicholas kept the key to that cupboard for eight years. About two years ago, Nicholas, growing suspicious of those about him to whom the lands would descend, if no conveyance had been made, asked her to keep the key and it was kept by Mary Wynne, her (Annys Smith's) servant, now her daughter-in-law. A little while before the death of Nicholas, Robert Saywell, Silvester Balden and John Balden, the complainant, brought some money and it was locked up in the same cupboard. Shortly after Nicholas Baldwin died at Edlesborough, co. Bucks, and Silvester and John Balden were executors of his last will, and Silvester came and demanded the money and the deeds and she, knowing the confidence Nicholas Baldwin had always reposed in him gave them to him, and Silvester Balden for himself acknowledges having received the said money and deed, and denies that Ralph Balden ever by reason of such deeds pretended any right to the premisses. :Molyneux:

Close Roll No. 2,778. This Indenture made 26 Septr. 1629 between Thomas Baldwyn of Edlesborough, in co. Bucks, yeoman, of the one part and Bartholomew Baldwin of the Strand in co. Middlesex, gent., of the other part. Witnesseth that the said Thomas Baldwin in consideration of £450 to him paid by the said Bartholomew Baldwyn, hath granted unto him, his heires and assigns for ever, all those two messuages situate and lying together in Edlesborough in co. Bucks, whereof one of the said "messuage farmes" is called Russetts place wherein the said Thomas Baldwyn now dwelleth, and the other "messuage farme" is called Lawrence, late in the occupation of one William Turner, and now in the occupation of the said Thomas Baldwyn and doe lye between the lands late called Foxydaies now Thomas Lathwell's on the East part and the lands of John Church on the West part.....To have and to hold the said premises with their appurtenances unto the said Bartholomew Baldwyn, his heirs and assignes for ever of the said Thomas Baldwyn against all persons whatsoever claiminge by, from or under him the said Thomas Baldwyn, or Triamore Baldwyn deceased, his father.

From this it is evident that Col. Joseph L. Chester's account of these connections had omitted one generation. It is also stated that further Chancery proceedings (which we have not seen) give the name of the wife of Nicholas Baldwin as Agnes, widow of William Fisher. She survived her husband. Issue:

+20. John, married Elizabeth Quaryndon.
+21. Triamor, married Jane Hyll.
22. (probably) Mary, who married 18 January, 1572, Richard Quaryndon.

There were perhaps other children; but Nicholas was definitely not the father of Francis, Bartholomew, Thomas, Triamor and Winifred Baldwin, children of the Triamor given above (No. 21).

8. Sylvester Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, was a resident of St. Leonard's in the parish of Aston Clinton. His will, dated 25 June, 1592, was proved 5 October, 1592 and the original will was filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. He was buried at Aston Clinton, 3 July, 1592. His first wife was Agnes, maiden name not found, who was buried at Aston Clinton 31 December, 1568. He married 2, Agnes Bachelor, probably the widow of Sylvester Bachelor, the last named having been buried at Aston Clinton 10 December, 1554. The second wife made her will 24 January, 1593/4, and the latter was proved by her son William Bachelor. Issue, by 1st wife:

23. John, mentioned in the will of his grandfather, but not in that of his father. No further record; probably died young.
24. Avelyn, who married Triamor Harvey by a license filed in the Registry of the Bishop of London, dated 20 June, 1575, and wherein both are called of St. Mary-at-Hill London. Issue.
+25. Thomas, married 1, Rebecca ; 2, Jane Hayle.

9. Richard Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, was a resident of Belendon in the parish of Chesham. He is undoubtedly the Richard Baldwin who was witness to the will of Ellen Baldwin of Dundridge, and who mentioned in her will no son Richard. The witnessing of this will has been misinterpreted to indicate that the son of Richard Baldwin of Dundridge was still living at that time, but had he been the witness and then living, it becomes very difficult to explain why he had not been mentioned in the will of his mother as the rest of the children then living were. The present Richard Baldwin of Belendon was buried at Chesham 6 January, 1591; his widow Amy was buried at the same place 16 February, 1594. No will or administration is reported. Issue:

26. Thomas, born before 1568, mentioned in the will of his grandfather, John Baldwin of The Hale. Not traced further.
27. George, baptised at Chesham, 16 April, 1568. Not identified.
28. Avelyn, baptised 16 September, 1571 at Chesham, married there 28 November, 1595 to Robert Hayley of Great

29. Agnes, buried 20 February, 1574.
30. Joan, baptised at Chesham, 1 January, 1574/5; married 31 July, 1598, Henry Pilgrim.
31. Triamor, baptised 27 February, 1576.
32. Isabel, baptised 28 May, 1577, married at Hawridge, 15 December, 1597 to James Dell, son of Henry Dell of Botley.
33. Agnes, baptised 17 July, 1580.
34. Stephen, baptised 30 July, 1570, buried 29 October, 1570.

10. Robert Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, was a resident of Great Missenden, Bucks, where he was a shovelmaker. His will definitely identifies him as of this connection. The latter was dated 8 February, 1584 and proved at Missenden 22 July, 1585; it was filed in Lincoln Wills, Consistory Court, 1585, ii, f. 63. His wife Agnes was executrix and the supervisors were Thomas Langley, Gent., his brother Sylvester Baldwin of St. Leonards, Giles Randall and William Fox. The maiden name of his wife is not reported. Issue:

+35. Thomas, married 1, Mary Gybbens and 2, Jane
+36. John, married
37. Robert. Not traced further.
38. Joan, married Feltes.
39. Elizabeth.
40. Em.
41. Avelyn.

11. Thomas Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of The Hale, was a resident of Pypers or Pippers in the parish of Chesham, Bucks. His will, dated 11 October, 1570, was proved 16 December, 1570 by his widow Joane, and it was filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1568-1572, folio 184. It is useful to quote the abstract made:

Thomas Baldwin married Jane, perhaps Tyndall, as he calls John Tyndall his brother. Issue:

+42. John, married Mary

43. Joan, or Jane, identified as having married at Amersham, 5 November, 1588 to Henry Harding.

44. Amie, not traced further.
+45. Richard; married Isabella Harding.

12. John Baldwin, son of Thomas and Jone (Gynger) Baldwin, was very probably John Baldwin of Sanderton, Bucks. His will, dated 3 April, 1573, was proved 15 January, 1573/4 by the widow Alice. The original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, and mentions no issue, but that of the widow fortunately does. Her will was made 21 December, 1579, and proved 11 February, 1579/80. She was to be buried in the churchyard at Sanderton. Issue:
+46. Augustine, married Ellinor.
47. Margery.
48. Elline.
49. Ane.
50. Joane, married William Bowler.
+51. Thomas, married Anne
52. Mawde.
53. John, a resident of Sanderton in 1612.

14. Ralph Baldwin, son of George and Avelyn Baldwin, is of record as proving the nuncupative will of his daughter Rebecca, who died unmarried in the May prior to 27 September, 1611. Her will described her as of Wendover, and bequeathed to her father £100 that he had promised, and which was to be paid to her by her brother Henry Baldwin; and prayed him to be kind to her poor brother (probably another). Ralph Baldwin married and had issue:
54. Henry, probably the one of that name who married at Wendover, 28 April, 1602 to Mary Crane. Issue not determined.
55. Rebecca, who died in May, 1611; her will, already mentioned, was filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1611/2, f. 34b. No issue.
56. A son, perhaps named George.

16. Edmund Baldwin, son of George and Avelyn Baldwin, a resident and tanner in Wendover as late as 1585; he was not of age in 1576/7, and therefore born after 1556; he was furthermore not Edmund Baldwin of Holmer in the parish of Little Missenden, who married Agnes Honer 18 June, 1571. In Chancery proceedings in 1586/7 he transferred his property in Wendover, and seems definitely to have been the one of that name who was a churchwarden at Chalfont St. Peter in 1601/2. He was buried at the latter place as an old man, 6 July, 1621. His will, dated 6 January, 1620/1, was proved 2 October, 1620/21 by his second wife, and filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1620-1622, f. 128. He married 1, Isabell who was buried at Chalfont St. Peter 9 October, 1615; married 2, Cecily Chapman in the same church, 13 June, 1616, and who survived him. Issue, by first wife:
+57. Thomas, married 1, ; 2, Joan Smith, widow.

+58. Edmund, married 1, Josuanna Bedle; 2, Amey Redding.
59. Elizabeth, married Hodson.
60. Anne, married at Uxbridge, 15 February, 1612 to Robert Tybbe.
+61. Ralph, married Hannah Redwood.

20. John Baldwin, son of Nicholas and Agnes Baldwin, was born at Ellesborough about 1552. His will, dated 9 January, 1629/30, was proved 5 April, 1630; the original will is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. He married at Ellesborough, 14 November, 1575 to Elizabeth Quaryndon. Issue:
62. Ralph, executor of the will of his father. Not positively identified.
63. Elizabeth, wife of Beaker, so-called.

21. Triamor Baldwin, son of Nicholas and Agnes Baldwin, was born at Ellesborough about 1555-1560, and was deceased before 26 September, 1629, according to a Close Roll to which reference has been made. He seems to have left no will of record. His wife was Jane Hyll, whom he married at Ellesborough, 26 October, 1584. Issue:
+64. Bartholomew, married Mary
+65. Thomas, married Hannah
+66. Francis, married Elizabeth, probably Hills.
+67. Triamor, married Hannah Melward.
68. Winifred, who married Everard Johnson; both were living in 1655.

25. Thomas Baldwin, son of Sylvester and Agnes Baldwin, a resident of Aston Clinton. He was the executor of the will of his father in 1592. His will, calling him of St. Leonard's in Aston Clinton, yeoman, was dated 25 February, 1618/9, and proved 27 January 1619-1620. It is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1618-1619, f. 125. He was buried at Aston Clinton 9 January, 1619/20. He married 1, Rebecca, maiden name unreported, the mother of most of his children, who was buried at Aston Clinton 15 April, 1590, evidently dying in childbirth of her sixth child and fifth son Sylvester. He married 2, at Aston Clinton, 6 July, 1590 to Jane Hayle, less than three months after the death of his first wife. She was buried at Aston Clinton, 2 August, 1628. Issue, by first wife:

+70. George, married Ruth
71. Agnes, baptised at Aston Clinton, 29 December, 15[illegible] married Bowler.
72. Richard, born about 1585, probably the one of the name whose administration was granted to his son Thos. 16 November, 1660, and filed in the Administration Act Book for 1660 in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, f. 166. He was a resident of Aston Clinton, Bucks.

73. John, of no further record that can be proved. He may be one of the following: A John Baldwin, late of Cheynes (Chenies) in Bucks, had deceased before 31 October, 1628, and administration of the estate was granted to the widow Venus Baldwin (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, Administration Act Book, 1628, f. 52). A John Baldin, of Wickham, Bucks, died before 26 November, 1649, when administration of the estate was granted to Mary Baldin, the widow (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, Administration Act Book, 1649, f. 146). It is also possible that this John Baldwin was one of the early emigrants to America. He was not John Baldwin of Chepping Wycombe.

74. Sylvester, baptised at Aston Clinton, 14 April, 1590, perhaps the one of that name who married at Great Kimble, 28 September, 1612 to Alice Bell, a widow.

Issue, by second wife:

75. Robert; not traced further.
76. Jane; not traced further.

35. Thomas Baldwin, son of Robert and Agnes Baldwin, was born at Great Missenden, Bucks., about 1554. His will, dated 10 December, 1611 was proved 6 February, 1611/2. He married first, at Great Missenden, 24 October, 1575 to Mary Gybbens; and 2, before his death, Jane, who was sole executrix of his estate and residuary legatee; she was buried 9 December, 1632. Thomas Baldwin was buried at Great Missenden, 20 January, 1611/2. Issue, by first wife:

77. Robert, baptised at Great Missenden 18 August, 1576.
78. Joyce.
79. Thomas, perhaps the one buried at Great Missenden, 15 June, 1612.

36. John Baldwin, son of Robert and Agnes Baldwin, was born at Great Missenden, Bucks, about 1560, and is considered to have been the John Baldwin buried at Great Missenden (Bishop's Transcripts) 11 May, 1612. We have not discovered any record of his will or administration, nor the name of his wife. According to Evelyn B. Baldwin the children of John Baldwin included

+80. John, married Dorothy +81. George, married Hannah
+82. Thomas, married

42. John Baldwin, son of Thomas and Jane (?Tyndall) Baldwin, was born at Pypers, Bucks, about 1565, and was a resident there as late as 1602. No will or administration of his effects is reported, and the record of his burial remains to be discovered. He married Mary, surname unknown. Issue:

83. Elizabeth, baptised at Hawridge, 11 January, 1589/90, recorded at Chesham.
84. Thomas, baptised at Chesham, 16 January, 1591/2, not traced further.

86. Henry, baptised 20 July, 1595, of no further record in England. Perhaps an emigrant to America.
87. John, baptised 23 February, 1597, very probably an emigrant to America.
88. Martha, baptised at Hawridge, 24 November, 1602.

45. Richard Baldwin, son of Thomas and Jane (?Tyndall) Baldwin, was born probably at Pypers in the parish of Chesham, about 1575, was a resident of Cholesbury, Buckinghamshire. His will, dated 23 May, 1630 was probed 16 May, 1633, and filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1633, f. 119. The property that he had as mentioned in his will was evidently part of no inheritance granted to any previous Richard Baldwin of Cholesbury:

> To Isabell my wife, one third parte of all my goods, chattells and cattell and the like. To Nathaniell my sonne, tenn pounds. To my sonne Joseph, one meade plott called by the name of Huntes Wicke by estimacon halfe an acre more or lesse lyinge and adjoyninge to my cottage that John Danell nowe dwells in for him to take possession of at his age of 21 yeares. 97. Sybil.
98. Ellyn.
99. John; not traced further.

51. Thomas Baldwin, son of John and Alice Baldwin, a resident of Balinger in the parish of Great Missenden, Bucks. His will, dated 8 July, 1612, was proved 24 June, 1612 and filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1611/2, f. 127. His wife Anne made her will as of Feeldend, so called, 23 November, 1614; it was proved 23 February, 1614/5. It is filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1613-14, f. 113b. Issue:

+100. Richard, married Agnes, probably Shepherd.
101. Austine or Augustine, who had married and had a daughter Anne, under age in 1614
102. Margery, married William Treacher of The Lee. Issue.

57. Thomas Baldwin, son of Edmund and Isabell Baldwin of Chalfont St. Peter, was a resident of Langley Marish, Bucks. His will, dated 15 August, 1640, was proved 3 October, 1640, and filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks, Reg. 1640, f. 148. The name of his first wife, probably mother of his children, is not known to us. He married 2, at Great Missenden, 18 February, 1639/40 to Jone Smith of Langley Marish, widow of Edward Smith. Issue:

103. Mary, baptised at Chalfont St. Peter 3 April, 160(9), m. at Denham, 18 November, 1630 to Robert Aldridge.
104. Susanna, baptised at Chalfont St. Peter, 3 March 1609/1610, married Gabriel Putnam 22 June, 1631, at Wendover.
105. Sarah, married at Wendover to Daniel Lake.
106. Elizabeth, married at Denham, 27 February, 1621, William Eggleston. Issue.
107. George, baptised at Chalfont St. Peter, 22 February, 1611/2. Not traced further. (We do not believe this George Baldwin to have been the emigrant to Providence and Warwick, Rhode Island).

58. Edmund Baldwin, son of Edmund and Isabell Baldwin of Chalfont St. Peter, is probably to be identified as the one of that name who was buried at Chalfont St. Peter, 26 June, 1662. He married 1, at Chalfont St. Peter, 8 September, 1617 to Josuanna Bedle or Biddle, who was buried at that latter place 24 December, 1624. He married 2, 6 November, 1627 to Amey Redding. Issue, by first wife:

108. Agnes, baptised 28 July, 1623.

Issue, by second wife:

109. Mary, baptised 14 October, 1638.

Issue, by which wife not determined:

110. Edmund of Colebrook, Bucks. His will, dated 19 November, 1642, was proved 31 May, 1643 and filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 38 Crane. No issue.

111. Elizabeth.

61. Ralph Baldwin, son of Edmund and Isabell Baldwin, was a resident of Chalfont St. Peter, Bucks. His will, dated 26 March, 1619/20, was proved 13 October, 1620; it was filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 105 Soame. He is probably the "Raphael" Baldwin buried at Chalfont St. Peter, 2 April, 1620. His wife was Hannah Redwood whom he married at the latter place 8 May, 1611. Issue:

112. Edmund, baptised at Chalfont St. Peter, 15 March, 1612-1613. Not traced further.

113. Hannah, baptised 23 October, 1614.

114. Ralph, baptised 2 February, 1616/7. He is mentioned in Chancery Proceedings in 1654/5: Bundle 410, No.135. On 8 February, 1654/5, John Russell the elder of Chalfont St. Peter, stated that he offered Ralph Baldwin a legacy which had come from the estate of the latter's father. Ralph had been a Quartermaster in Colonel Fleetwood's Regiment. On the 16th of the same month Ralph Baldwin answered that among other things he was three years old when his father died. Hannah (Redwood) Baldwin had married John Russell.

115. Mary, baptised 18 July, 1619, buried the next day.

116. Child, probably posthumous, mentioned indicatively in the will of the father.

64. Bartholomew Baldwin, son of Triamor and Jane (Hyll) Baldwin, was a clerk of the Faculties in the Court of Chancery and held lands at Mayfield, Chalgrove and elsewhere in Bedford. His will, dated 10 May, 1655, was proved 20 July, 1655 and filed in the Prerogative Court of Carterbury at 297 Aylett. He married Mary. Issue:

+117. Robert, married Alice

118. A daughter, wife of Robert Abdy.

119. Bartholomew.

120. John.

121. Thomas.

122. Margery, buried at Weston Turville, 13 January, 162[illegible]

123. William, buried at Weston Turville, 10 December, 162[illegible]

65. Thomas Baldwin, son of Triamor and Jane (Hyll) Baldwin, was living in 1639 when his brother Francis made his will, but had died apparently by 1655, when his brother Bartholomew speaks of him as deceased. His wife is called Hannah. He may have been, however, the Thomas Baldwin who married at Ellesborough 9 June, 1615 to Elizabeth Young. Issue, at least:

124. Thomas. Not traced further.

66. Francis Baldwin, son of Triamor and Jane (Hyll) Baldwin, was a resident of London; it is probable that he was connected with one of the law courts or public offices, as he described himself as a "gentleman." His will, dated 25 May, 1639, states that he was a resident of the parish of St. Mary-le-Strand; mentions his children, brothers and other connections. His mother-in-law was Elizabeth Hills and a brother-in-law was Thomas Reynolds. The will was proved 12 June, 1639, in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. The will of his widow Elizabeth Baldwin, dated 23 January, 1641/2, was proved in the next July by her mother Elizabeth Hills. Issue:

125. John. Not traced further.
126. Elizabeth, born after 23 May, 1639.

67. Triamor Baldwin, son of Triamor and Jane (Hyll) Baldwin, was an executor of the wills of his brothers Francis and Bartholomew in 1639 and 1655, respectively. He is presumably the Triamor Baldwin who married by license, 4 November, 1624 to Hannah Melward at St. Saviour's, Southwark, Surrey. Issue included probably:

127. Triamor, provisionally identified as the one of that name who was in 1670 a resident of London, and who had by wife Elizabeth a son Triamor, baptised at St. James Clerkenwell, 22 May, 1670. The latter may well be the Triamor Baldwin of London whose will was made and proved in 1729. The latter styled himself gentleman; left a legitimate child, and provided for two illegitimate children called by his surname. He also bequeathed legacies to his brother William Baldwin, then living in or near New York, and to nephews Triamor and William, sons of the said William. The illegitimate son was named Thomas, who was devised property involving land on the site of the old Marshalsea Prison, immortalized by Dickens.

69. Samuel Baldwin, son of Thomas and Rebecca Baldwin, was a resident of St. Leonard's in the parish of Aston Clinton. His will, dated 8 February, 1629/30, was proved 22 November, 1630, and is filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 103 Scroope. He married at Aston Clinton, 17 October, 1623 to Amy Bryan, perhaps a daughter of Thomas and Frances (Bowling) Bryan of Aylesbury. Issue:

128. Frances. Not traced further.

70. George Baldwin, son of Thomas and Rebecca Baldwin, was a resident of Amersham, Bucks. His will, dated 13 February, 1655/6, was proved 25 September, 1656 and filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 335 Berkeley. He married Ruth, maiden name not reported. Issue:

129. Thomas.
130. Ruth.
131. George.
132. Elizabeth.
133. Marie.
134. Sarah.
135. Hannah.
136. John.

80. John Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of Great Missenden, was born at the latter place about 1590, and was churchwarden there in 1629/30. He married Dorothy, maiden name not found. Issue:

137. Marie, baptised at Great Missenden 30 March, 1619.
138. Anne, baptised 20 January, 1621/2.
139. George, baptised 29 March, 1624; this was believed by Evelyn B. Baldwin to have been the baptism of George Baldwin, immigrant to Providence and Warwick, Rhode Island, and Hempstead, New York. We regret that we do not accept the supposed connection as correct.
140. Ann, baptised 26 September, 1628.
141. Daniel, baptised in December, 1630.
142. William, baptised 26 April, 1635.

81. George Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of Great Missenden, was churchwarden at that place in 1624 and 1625. He was buried at Great Missenden, 9 June, 1636 and his widow Hannah was buried there 10 July, 1643. The administration of the estate of George Baldwin of The Hyde was granted to the widow Hannah 3 December 1636, and she was bound with Zacheus Gould of Potter Rowe in the Parish of Great Missenden to have composition of £46/15/3. Issue:

143. Mary, baptised 6 March, 1624/5.
144. Dorothy, baptised 18 March, 1626/7.
145. Sara, baptised 1 February, 1628/9.
146. Samuel, baptised 10 January, 1632/3.
Possibly others.

82. Thomas Baldwin, son of John Baldwin of Great Missenden, was born about 1600 at the latter place. The name of his wife is unknown, but the following children are credited to him on the parish registers of Great Missenden:

147. Elizabeth, baptised 18 April, 1624.
148. Sara, baptised 19 November, 1626.
149. Susanna, baptised 3 May, 1629.

100. Richard Baldwin, son of Thomas and Anne Baldwin, was a resident of The Lee. His will, dated 6 November, 1621, was proved 31 October, 1622, and was filed in the Archdeaconry of Bucks. Reg. 1620-22, f. 226b. His wife was Agnes, perhaps to be identified with the Annis Shepherd or Shephearde who married in the parish church at Great Missenden to Richard Baldwin, 3 October, 1611. Issue:

150. Thomas; not traced further.

117. Robert Baldwin, son of Bartholomew and Mary Baldwin, was a resident of Whelpley Hill in the parish of Chesham. His will was dated 29 January, 1657/8, and proved 25 May, 1658, and filed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 230 Watton. His wife was Alice; issue:

151. Sarah, buried in 1669 at Bovingdon, Hertfordshire.

EARLIER BALDWINS OF BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

The original report of the late Col. Joseph L. Chester concerning the early English connections of the present Baldwin family was published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 38, page 160, and among other statements the following appears:

> I ... find in a Subsidy Roll of the Reign of King Henry VIII but the date of which is unfortunately gone, a Robert Baldwin of Aston Clinton, assessed at £13, from £8 of which he was relieved on account of the marriage of his son, and also a Richard Baldwin of the same place, assessed at 40 shillings. If we could but be certain that these two assessments applied to father and son, I think we might be pretty safe in carrying our pedigree a generation farther back. But this Robert Baldwin left no will, and I can discover nothing more of him.....

The additional information found since Col. Chester wrote the above reinforces the probability that Robert Baldwin was the father of Richard Baldwin of Dundridge.

The relationship of the present family of Baldwin to those of the name resident in Padbury, Aylesbury and elsewhere in the vicinity remains to be established. It should be emphasized, however, that the critical development of the foregoing connections is far from being complete; there is undoubtedly, much more information to be gained from English records. The family invested heavily in the American colonization. Francis Baldwin was a member of the Virginia company; and Sylvester Baldwin (perhaps our No. 74) was in 1622 in an attempted colonization of Virginia (Minutes of the Council and General Court of Virginia, 1622-1624, in The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography, XIX, p. 138).

10. ANNA BARKER 829
m. JOHN PRATT son of Phineas Pratt and Mary Priest

She was born about 1643, and probably at Marshfield, Massachusetts. No baptism is found of record.

She married about 1664 to John Pratt, then of Charlestown, Massachusetts; they were later of Kingston, Rhode Island and Oyster Bay, New York. Anna Barker was living 27 April, 1695, as evidenced by deeds filed at Oyster Bay, but further record of her is not definitely found.

She was certainly deceased before 1715, although no will or administration is of record.

For descendants see PRATT, #828.

NOTES

The research of Rodney McDonough is responsible for the completeness of the records of this family; see The MacDonough-Hackstaff Genealogy. Other references are quoted further.

Anna Barker was the daughter of 11. JOHN BARKER 1,658

m. HANNAH or ANNA WILLIAMS daughter of John Williams and Anna

He was born about 1610-1613, and probably in the south-eastern part of England. There is some reason to believe that the family was resident near London.

John Barker is first definitely of record in the Plymouth colony in 1638, when on 5 November of that year he was granted forty acres of upland adjacent to Joseph Rogers, in Duxbury. On the same date he was granted the ferry priveleges at James River, and the ferry service was to begin one week later, continuing until the erection of a bridge.

On 10 January, 1638/9 Thomas Boardman transferred the apprenticeship of William Barden to John Barker, and the latter agreed to teach Barden the trade of brick-laying; likewise at the end of his apprenticeship to give him twenty bushels of corn, two suits of clothes and an ewe lamb.

On 12 January, 164½ Jonathan Brewster sold to Robert Barker, John Barker, Thomas Howell and Ralph Chapman his farm of 100 acres on North river with the meadow on North river and South river, ferry boat and house and the priveleges of the ferry, at Marshfield. He was fined five shillings for some misdemeanor, 7 March, 1642/3; and in 1643 was listed with others able to bear arms. On 28 October, 1645 Roger Cooke and William Latham brought an action for damages to the extent of twenty pounds against John Barker and his wife Anna on the grounds that Anna Barker had accidently set fire to their house. The jury disagreed and the case was compromised by twenty shillings given the plaintiff by Anna's husband.

Robert Chapman agreed with Robert Barker, 20 January, 1645/6 to extend the ferry at New Harbor in Marshfield, under certain conditions, one of which was that Chapman was to give free transportation to Thomas Howell, John and Robert Barker and their families forever, or as long as the ferry was operated. John Barker was a juryman at the General Court held in Plymouth, Massachusetts 7 June, 1648. At the same Court he sued to recover a debt, and likewise at that time Myles Standish, John Alden and Joshua Pratt were appointed by the Court to settle certain differences between John Barker and William Sherman. On 19 June, 1648, John and Robert Barker and Ralph Chapman agreed with John Phillips that John Barker's brook should be the boundary line for a certain portion of Phillips' property.

John Barker was a grand juryman at the General Court, 4 October, 1648. On 9 June, 1650 he bought about 50 acres of land in Marshfield from Edmund Weston, administrator of the estate of Thomas Howell, and was a witness to the deed of Nicholas Simpkins to John Williams junior, 1 March, 1648/9. He was admitted freeman in 1651.

His life was abruptly terminated by drowning, 14 December of 1652; and the jury appointed to perform the inquest reported that he died "by the casualty of the sea, and by noe otherway." Letters of administration were granted to the widow Anna, 9 June, 1653; she bound herself to give her daughters Anna, Deborah and Mary ten pounds apiece when they were 21, or six months after marriage. The estate amounted to one hundred and thirty one pounds. The widow subsequently married Abraham Blush of Barnstable (see WILLIAMS).

The date of John Barker's marriage to Anna or Hannah Williams is unauthoritatively stated to have been 1632; there is reason to believe that it occurred at a later date.

Issue:

1. Deborah, born about 1639, married the 11th day of 7th month, 1660, to William Barden of Barnstable, later of Middleborough, Massachusetts.
2. Anna, married John Pratt. See page 269.
3. Mary, born at Marshfield, Massachusetts about 1647, living in 1711, married 1, Samuel Pratt, son of Phineas and Mary(Priest) Pratt (see PRATT); 2, Francis Coombs, son of John and Sarah (Priest) Coombs; 3, 5 March, 1684/5 to David Wood of Middleborough, Massachusetts, son of Henry and Abigail Wood, and born there 17 October, 1651. David Wood died 31 December, 1712. Issue, by all three husbands.
4. John, born about 1650, died the first day of 12th month, 1729. He was a resident of Barnstable, Massachusetts, from 1676 to 1683, subsequently of Marshfield and finally of Scituate. He was a sergeant in King Philip's war and was severely wounded; as a recompense he was freed from bearing arms on account of his services. As a young man he prosecuted his uncle John Williams for alleged misuse of his guardianship, and seems to have been somewhat litigious. He was deputy from Marshfield to the General court in 1689; and held the same responsibility in 1706, 1712 and 1719 from Scituate. He also served as a justice of the peace. He married 18 January, 1676/7 to his first wife Desire Annable, daughter of Anthony and Ann (Clark) Annable; she was born 16 October, 1658 and died 24 July, 1706. He married 2, 22 January, 1707 to Hannah (Loring) Cushing, widow of the Rev. Jeremiah Cushing and daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Jacob) Loring; and 3,(according to James Savage) Sarah,maiden name unascertained, born in 1660, died 7 September, 1730. Issue, by first wife:
    i. John, born 4 May, 1678, a resident of Marshfield; married in 1702 to Hannah, maiden name not given, and who died 30 January, 1713/4; married 2, 5 January, 1715 to Bethiah Ford, born 16 March,1688, died 6 December, 1770, daughter of Deacon William Ford. Issue.
    ii. Desire, born 22 December, 1680, died 12 January of 1710; married 20 November, 1700 to Samuel Turner.
    iii. Anna, born 26 August, 1682, died 22 November, 1682.
    iv. Anna, born 1 November, 1683, married 11 March,1714, Robert Thompson.
    v. Samuel William, born 23 April, 1686, died 6 August, 1754, a resident of Scituate, Massachusetts. He married 25 December, 1706, Hannah Cushing, daughter of the Rev. Jeremiah and Hannah (Loring) Cushing. Issue.
    vi. Barnabas, who died in 1763; married 3 April, 1719, Hannah Turner, born 15 June, 1697, died in 1735,dau. of Thomas and Hannah (Jenkins) Turner; married 2, 4 May, 1736 to Mary Greene, born 8 March, 1710,dau. of [illegible] (Bacon) Greene. Issue.

vii. Mary, married 6 January, 1714, Ensign Otis.

NOTES

Elizabeth Frye Barker published in 1927 The Barker Genealogy, a compilation which enumerates the descendants of John Barker and his brother Robert to a considerable extent, and to which the reader is referred. The MacDonough-Hackstaff Genealogy as compiled by Rodney McDonough is, in our opinion, one of the best sources of information relative to John Barker.

These two brothers, John and Robert Barker, both apparently yeomen, and certainly not called gentlemen in the older meaning of that term on the early records, have been made sons of a Sir Robert and Catharine (Ackworth) Barker by Jesse J. Barker in The Colonial Barker Families of the United States, published in 1899:

> (18) Robert Barker (second son of George and Margaret Stevenson Barker) m. Catharine, d. of George Ackworth of Kent, and by her had three sons, Robert Barker, John Barker and William Barker, whose dates of birth are not known positively, but who were probably born about the beginning of or early in the 17th century (probably 1600 to 1612), as they had cousins born as early as 1608, and as late as 1631.
> (19) These sons Robert and John Barker are doubtless (sic) the Robert Barker and John Barker (also called Francis), brothers, who came to Plymouth, Mass., about 1628, settling in what is now Pembroke. Robert Barker married Lucy Williams and died about 1689. His sons were Robert, Francis and Isaac, from whom many descendants arenow living in New England and Pennsylvania. John Barker settled in Scituate, Mass. and has also left many descendants in New England, etc.

The 1927 Barker Genealogy accepts this ancestry, and it has been quoted in History and Genealogy of the Briggs Family, by L. Vernon Briggs, vol. I, p. 276. Raymon Meyers Tingley likewise in his Some Ancestral Lines, published in 1935, recites the same pedigree at p. 37. While Mr. Briggs in his text makes the categorical statement that John Barker was son of Sir Robert, he is obviously reporting Elizabeth Frye Barker's statement. The pedigree was further analysed by Barker Newhall, Ph. D., in his The Barker Family of Plymouth Colony and County, 1900. He writes:

> The Barkers of Co. Salop commence their pedigree in the year 1200 with Randulph de Coverall, whose descendant William changed his name to William le Barker about a century later, and Mr. Jesse J. Barker of Philadelphia in a valuable essay has endeavored to connect the Rhode Island, Delaware and Plymouth families with this ancient English stock.

But the link consists simply in the existence of a James, Robert, John and Samuel in Shropshire at about the same time that these names appear in America, and it is quite probable that a Robert and a John Barker might be found in several other counties at this period. At any rate, Robert and Francis are common names among the Barkers of Suffolk (Reg. Vols. 49-51) and Robert Barker of London (d. 1645), the King's printer, belonged to a Yorkshire family. It would be interesting to connect our Plymouth line with this Robert Barker, who issued the first edition of King James' Bible and is supposed to be the grand-nephew of Sir Christopher Barker, K. B., Garter King of Arms, but there is no more definite evidence here than in Shropshire. It is possible that, as Gov. Edw. Winslow was a printer by trade, his wife, whom Leyden records show to have been Elizabeth Barker of Chetsum (perhaps Chesham, Co. Berks*) may have belonged to this London family, but we find no indication that Gov. Winslow was in any way connected with the Barkers in his colony.

It would seem that the only guide to an English origin for the Plymouth family is the coat-of-arms that they bore. The evidence for these arms is unusually clear and satisfactory. Some fifteen years ago Mrs. Richard J. Barker of Tiverton, R. I., State Historian of the D. A. R. found in a Providence junk shop a deed signed by Samuel and Francis Barker of Scituate in 1694, with a seal bearing the arms .....A careful drawing, made at the time of the discovery, remains in Mrs. Barker's possession, though the deed has since been destroyed by fire. Now these arms are assigned by Burke to Kent, Middlesex and Surrey, and we know that the early settlers of Scituate were called "the men of Kent" so this coincidence points to Kent as the probable home of Robert and John Barker before their emigration to the new world.

We have not been able to understand why it is that descendants assume connections with English families on the bases of impressions made by seals on 17th &18th century American documents. The circumstances as related by Mrs. Richard J. Barker are somewhat reminiscent of those upon which A. B. Carpenter based his assumption of the Carpenter lineage (see CARPENTER), and similar situations have been examined by the writer in other families. Even admitting the truth of the junk-shop episode, it must not be forgotten that it was possible two hundred years ago, as it is today, to obtain a copy of a coat-of-arms of a family of similar name. The copies of Burke on file in public libraries at the present time are worn out by the upholstered vanity of the social pedigree-seeker. While the seal impressions of 1694 provide a clue for further research, they prove nothing.

Otherwise Mr. Newhall's critical comments are very much in order. In order to support his case, Mr. Jesse J. Barker states that the pedigree which he had reference to was according to George Morris' MSS and the Visitation of Shropshire. He develops the continuity that Robert (No. 18 in his list as quoted) was son of George Barker of Colchurst who married first Margaret Stevenson, called also Ann Steventon of Rowton; and second, Catharine, daughter of Thomas Bulkeley of Buntingdale. He makes this Robert the son of George by the first wife. This George was in turn the son of a John Barker who married Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh Sandford of Sandford, county Salop (Shropshire); and this last John was son of William Barker who married Joan, daughter of William Horne of Child Ercall in the same county. And lastly this William Barker was held to have been the son of William Horne of Aston, parish of Claverly, and his wife Margaret Goulston.

This pedigree of Mr. Barker's is not supported by the references which he states are his authorities. A Pedigree of the Family of Barker of Salop, privately printed in 1877 at London (the author is not given) not only sets up another coat of arms for this family than the one quoted, but records the connections in question differently. William Barker (called alias Coverall) of Aston in the parish of Claverly, and who married Margaret Goulston, had a son William of Aston, gent., who married ---------- Colclough and whose son John is not identified with the one who married Elizabeth Sandford.

Again, William Barker of Colchurst who married Joane, daughter of William Horne, is stated to have been the son of a John Barker and his wife Elizabeth Sandford (evidently another, and not the Elizabeth Sandford mentioned above). It is manifest that the compiler of the pedigree was in difficulties at this point. In his cross-reference to this particular John Barker, he says that there was a John Barker alias Calverhall of Colchurst near Market Drayton, and who was a son of William and Margaret (Goulston) Barker; but this John Barker married Joyce, daughter of Edward Burton of Longnor. In a footnote to this he qualifies it as follows:

> So in Joseph Morris' MSS, but in the MSS of George Morris the wife of this John Barker is called Elizabeth Sandford. In the Visitations she is omitted altogether.

Further investigation does not clear up this impasse and the author becomes defensively vague. If John Barker who married Elizabeth Sandford was the son of William Barker by his wife Margaret Goulston (also called Goulhurst), according to George Morris' MSS and the Visitations of Shropshire (a connection which is by no means clearly demonstrated) he was father of William Barker of Colchurst, who married Joane, daughter of William Horne of Child Ercall. From this point the pedigree agrees with the one listed by Jesse J. Barker until the connections are given of the Robert Barker who married Catharine Ackworth.

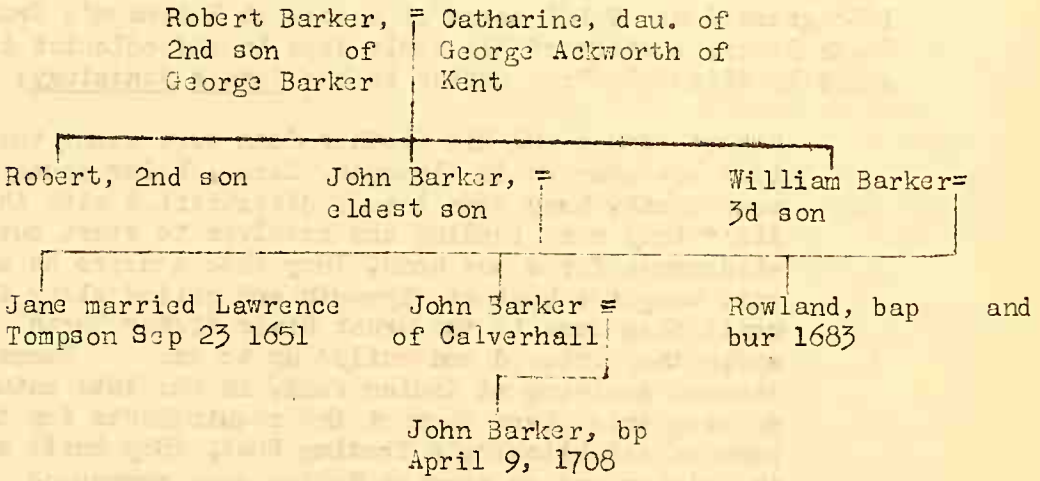
Here is found, very certainly, that this Robert Barker had sons Robert, John and William. Unfortunately, however, the printed pedigree is not clear, as is shown:



The attention of the reader is called to the double descent stem leading to Jane, John and Rowland Barker, showing that from this pedigree as printed, it is not possible to determine who were their parents. If it were John, very clearly the emigrants are excluded as being descended from this line. Furthermore the outline above gives dates which raise grave difficulties. It alleges that a sister of Rowland Barker was married thirty-two years before he was baptised and fifty-seven years before her nephew John Barker, junior or third, was born.

In the last analysis, however, it must be asked why it should be necessary to refer the emigrants to a connection as uncertain as this seems to be. We are convinced that this alleged connection of the emigrants John and Robert Barker with the English family in question is absolutely without foundation.

ROBERT BARKER

Robert Barker first appears as the servant of John Thorpe, when on 20 January, 1632 he complained of his master for want of clothing, which was found to be a just complaint. Like his brother John he was a brick-mason. In 1640 he bought forty acres of upland in Marshfield in the Massachusetts Colony and in 1641 was a part-owner in the ferry run by his brother. Later he held more than a hundred acres in Marshfield. He was a member of the Marshfield military company under Lieutenant Nathaniel Thomas in 1643, and surveyor of Marshfield in 1645 and 1648. He was surveyor of Duxbury, 1654, 1672 and 1679. In Marshfield he was also constable in 1646 and a grand juryman in 1669.

He was admitted a freeman of the colony 6 June, 1654 and took the oath of fidelity in 1659. He had been licensed 7 July, 1646 to keep an inn at Marshfield and to retail wine; he cancelled this license 5 June, 1666. The court at Plymouth on 5 March, 1668 granted him 9-1/2 acres of meadow at Robinson's Creek, the North River. A story of his early days in the colonies is vouchsafed by Elizabeth Frye Barker in her Barker Genealogy:

> Robert Barker and his brother John were among the earliest adventurers in Plymouth, Mass., being young men of some means, they soon became dissatisfied with the dual life* they were leading and resolved to start out into the wilderness for a new home. They took a negro as an assistant, bought a boat at Plymouth and sailed along the coast until they came to the Great River (later North River) which they entered and sailed up to the Namassakeeset stream. Arriving at Indian Pond, in the late autumn and deeming this place to meet the requirements for their purpose of establishing a Trading Post, they built a hut for the winter and as soon as Spring came commenced their house in what is now the town of Pembroke, Mass. . . This house was built of flat stones, laid in clay mortar and covered with shed roof. It was fifteen feet square, six feet high, and contained but one room with a huge fireplace, later a frame addition was made and the home was used by descendants of the family until after 1683. It was adapted for defense as well as trading, the strength of the building its central position, the existence of a well within its walls, caused it to be made a Garrison-House during King Philip's war in 1679, the old holes existed until the house was taken down a few years ago.....

L. Vernon Briggs comments upon this:

> The tradition of an early expedition to the vicinity of the Namasakeeset seems to be verified, for in 1651 Capt. Myles Standish conveyed 51 acres to Robert Barker, and on August 2, 1653 Robert petitioned for the laying out of lands there. The section was then a part of the town of Duxbury, set off from Plymouth in 1637, but now in Pembroke. Tradition says that Robert, with two companions, ascended the Indian Head River, and at the fork of the Nam> assakeeset until they found a suitable camping place. Before winter arrived they had built a rude dwelling, in which they are said to have passed the winter. It was built of flat stones laid in a clay mortar, materials that were found in the locality, which Robert, being a brickmason, knew how to utilize. It consisted of a single room about 15 to 20 feet square, with a huge fireplace, which took up a good part of one wall.....

After his residences and services in Duxbury and Marshfield, Robert returned to Mattakeeset, where according to Mr. Briggs

> .....he added a wooden structure to his early building of stone, building it substantially, and enclosing a well within its walls. It was loopholed for defence in case of trouble with the Indians, which precaution, as it happened, was not necessary, as his friendly relations with them saved his family and property from being molested throughout King Philip's war. The house later became a sort of inn, and was a frequent stopping place for travelers between Boston and Plymouth. Judge Sewall, in his diary, mentions stopping there on his way to Plymouth to hold Court. It was generally spoken of as the "Old Garrison." There were many Indians living around the beautiful Indian Ponds (so called), their summer camping grounds, and in 1681 Robert Barker's wife was fined for selling cider to them. Two skeletons were dug up in front of the house about 1880.

Robert Barker died in 1691, leaving an estate valued at £142 1s 11d. His wife was Lucy Williams, daughter of John and Anna Williams, sister of the wife of his brother John. She died between 7 March, 1681/2 and 18 February, 1689. Issue:

1. Isaac, born in 1640, a surveyor of Duxbury in 1674, constable in 1687, a farmer. He married 28 December, 1665, Judith Prence, daughter of Governor Thomas and Mary (Collier) Prence. Issue.
2. Rebecca, died in 1697. She married William Snow of West Bridgewater, Massachusetts.
3. Francis, a selectman of Duxbury in 1685/6, constable in 1689, deputy to the General Court at Plymouth in 1686, 1694, 1701, 1703; ensign, 2 December, 1689. He built and operated the first iron furnace in America in 1702. His wife was Mary Lincoln, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Langer) Lincoln, whom he married 5 January, 1675; she was born 10 February, 1648. Issue.

ported, at Scituate on 1 April, 1697/8. Issue.

We have made a superficial examination of available records of Kent, including the indexes of Archaeologia Cantiana, and in vol. 18 of the latter at page 26, there is listed under Kentish Administrations, 1581 to 1583, fol. 23, the administration of Richard Barker of North Craye. It was granted to the son Robert 1 July, 1587. This is, to the present date, the only Barker of Kent of which we have discovered record. In Genealogical Gleanings in England, by Henry Fitzgilbert Waters, there are wills which refer to a Barker family of East Bergholt and Nayland in Suffolk. These of themselves give no clues which are apparently useful in the present connection. In the parish registers of western Yorkshire the surname is frequent and the names Robert and John are ubiquitous; in any thorough search these records should be examined.

The only suggestion which may be of use in starting a search is that the proof of this ancestry may be found in investigating the ancestry of several Barker associates in New England. As Robert Barker had been the servant and apprentice of John Thorpe, it may be that the latter was related. In land transactions, John and Robert Barker appear repeatedly with Thomas Howell and Ralph Chapman. Howell was of Marshfield and died shortly before October of 1647, as his nephew Job Lane was executor of his will made about that time. Lane was of Buckinghamshire, in London at that time.

Ralph Chapman came in the Elizabeth in 1635 and from London. He was called a ship-carpenter from Southwark in Surrey. There have been genealogies compiled of his descendants, but so far as we have been able to ascertain, his English ancestry has not been determined.

In view of the fact that two of John Barker's closest friends and associates came from London or its vicinity, we are inclined to believe that he was in London with them, at least for a time. The family may well have been from Kent; but we doubt that the ancestry reported for him is correct.

The ancestry of John Barker is not proved.

12. JOANNA BARNES 4,057
m. ISAAC HEDGES son of William Hedges and Rose

She was born either at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts, or at Yarmouth on Cape Cod, and in 1646. No baptismal record has been found.

She had married shortly before 1666 to Isaac Hedges of Easthampton, New York, for in that year John Winthrop said that she was subject to "hysterical fits like her sister" and was then twenty years of age. Nothing else is known of her.

It is believed that she died relatively young. No death record is found, and no will or administration of her effects was filed. She was presumably buried at Easthampton, New York.

For descendants see HEDGES, under #4,056.

NOTES

Henry P. Hedges in A History of the Town of East Hampton, New York makes the statement on page 293 that Isaac Hedges married Joanna, daughter of Joshua Barnes; the proof of this we have not seen, although there is nothing which leads us to believe the connection incorrect. The other reference to her comes from Winthrop's Medical Journal, a transcript of which will be found in the Banks' MSS in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.

Joanna Barnes was the daughter of 13. JOSHUA BARNES 8,114

m. (PRUDENCE)

He was born about 1616, perhaps in County Norfolk, England.

He was bound an apprentice to Mr. William Paine of Boston in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, 4 September, 1632, for four pounds per annum for five years from his landing; he was also to receive five founds at the end of his term. From this it is probable that he had just arrived in New England.

Upon the expiration of his service he removed, probably immediately to Yarmouth on Cape Cod, for he was named on a committee 5 March, 1639 with Philip Tabor, to divide the planting lands in that settlement, and on 1 June, 1641 he applied for citizenship. He resided in the region around what was in 1640 called Stony Cove, the present Mill Pond, and his neighbors were Andrew Hallet, Thomas Starr, William Chase, Robert Dennis and Gyles Hopkins. He was proposed to the General Court on 1 June, 1645 for admission at the next Court as a freeman.

At the end of that year and early in the next year he is reported to have been "in some irregular courses, as to wrecked goods and disorderly conduct at religious services" and to have scoffed at the religious practices of the locality. He was fined for the latter offense, and as a consequence he left Yarmouth. He had been in Edgartown before 1649, and perhaps moved there in 1646. Here he is supposed by Charles E. Banks to have held a harbor lot on Starbuck's Neck, later in the possession of Thomas Dagget in 1660, this being land formerly that of Joshua Barnes'.

Barnes' emigration from Yarmouth seems to have followed a rather straight line to the southeast, for he is recorded in Southampton, New York on 6 October, 1649. At this time the town made a settlement with him for the hire of his boat, and it is reasonable to suppose that his removal from Yarmouth to Edgartown and thence to Southampton was in his own vessel.

Joshua Barnes seems to have found Southampton the haven he was seeking, for it was here that he spent the rest of his days. He is found in the Town Records as selling various properties and serving as a town official. He was to take the rate, with others, 29 May, 1661; was a deputy to the General Court at Hartford 1 May, 1663 and Overseer, 4 April, 1665. He was repeatedly called for jury service until 1664. He is listed in land allotments in 1673 and in 1677, and the last record which definitely can be stated to refer to him was in a land allotment of 19 April, 1683. He had deeded his son Samuel the northern half of his home lot and additions, with other property, 15 January 1683 (1682/3).

In a list of inhabitants concerned in Acquebogue meadows, 18 September, 1686, only Samuel Barnes is mentioned; and Joshua was certainly deceased 4 April, 1693 when Joshua Barnes entered the earmark for cattle which had been his grandfather Joshua Barnes'. Other statements to the contrary notwithstanding, the senior Joshua Barnes probably had deceased at Southampton before 18 September, 1686. As there is no will or administration of record, no more precise information is obtainable. He was buried presumably at Southampton, New York.

Joshua Barnes lived on the east side of Main street in Southampton, and north of the road to Bridge Hampton. The site of his homestead was owned in the nineteenth century by the indefatigable genealogist of eastern Long Island, William Smith Pelletreau, who mentions Barnes frequently in his references on that account. The neighbors of Joshua Barnes were James Hampton and John Bishop.

The mother of Barnes' children is stated to have been named Prudence, and in some accounts he is said to have had a second wife Amy.

Issue:

1. William, born probably at Yarmouth, Massachusetts, about 1640, who has been frequently confused with contemporaries of the same name. He was at first a resident of Sagg (Sagaponack) and in 1683 bought land of his father. He was a resident of the town of Westchester, Westchester county, shortly afterward; is recorded as Captain William Barnes. In Book I of Deeds, Southampton, p. 188, William Barnes of Westchester, formerly an inhabitant of Southampton, L. I., sold to Henry Pierson land in Southampton, recorded as of 12 June, 1684. He sold his home lot at Sagaponack to Robert Norris, 12 June, 1687. He died at Westchester town about 1712. He married 1, Martha, whose surname may have been Horton, and about 1670; 2, before 1692, to Hannah, daughter of Humphrey Underhill. Issue, by first wife:
   i. Joshua, who entered at Southampton on 4 April, 1693, the earmark that had been his grandfather's. No further record, and probably died young.
   ii. William, who was of Rumbout Precinct, Dutchess county. His will, dated 29 October, 1751, was proved 4 June, 1752, and is filed in Liber 18, page 144 of New York Wills at New York city. By a wife whose name is not reported he had issue:
      A. Anthony.
      B. William.
      C. James.
      D. Sarah.
      E. Margaret.

   Issue, by second wife:
   iii. Sarah, born at Westchester, New York, 4 August, 1692.
   iv. Underhill, born at Westchester, New York, 14 March, 1694/5. He married Miriam and by a will dated 1750 was father of the following children:
      A. William.
      B. Jane.
      C. Rebecca.
      D. Phoebe.

E. John.
F. Isaac.
G. Gilbert.

v. Thomas, born 3 October, 1697 at Westchester.
Perhaps others.

2. Joanna, married Isaac Hedges. See page 279.

3. Samuel, born probably at Southampton, New York, about 1650, married 9 November, 1676 to Patience Williams of Hempstead, New York, daughter of Robert and Sarah (Washburne) Williams. He is mentioned in the Town Records of Southampton when with his father and other inhabitants he quitclaimed parsonage land, 12 April, 1675. He held interests in the Acquebogue meadows, 18 September, 1686, and was the only one of the name in Southampton 1 June, 1687 when under item 23 he drew for lots. Samuel Barnes was trustee of Southampton 5 April, 1687 and again, 5 April, 1692. He died at Southampton 21 February, 1692/3, and administration of the intestate estate was granted to the widow Patience 25 August, 1693. The son Joshua with his mother sold the homestead at Southampton to Jacomiah Scott, 22 March, 1705/6 and subsequently removed to Hempstead, New York; the widow was in 1716 a resident of Cohansey, New Jersey when she made her will, 27 December, 1716. It was proved 12 January, 1716/7. Issue:

i. Patience, born at Southampton, New York, 31 August, 1677; died 11 October, 1708, first wife of Anthony Ludlam of Southampton, son of Anthony and Sarah Ludlam. See LUDLAM.

ii. Temperance, born 16 January, 1679, married John Wick of Southampton and Bridgehampton, New York; he was born in 1661 and died at the latter place 16 January, 1719. He was a Magistrate, and at one time Sheriff of Suffolk county Issue. This name is not identical with, and should not be confused with, Wickes or Wicks.

iii. Joshua, born at Southampton, New York 8 April, 1683, died at Rye, New York, about 1763. On 23 June, 1704, being then just of age, he sold to Anthony Ludlam a £100 lot of land and meadow in Hog Neck, drawn by his grandfather Joshua Barnes, in lot No. 40, Daniel Sayre having the other one-third of said lot. Other property held formerly in descent is also mentioned. He is recorded in the Deed Books of Southampton as selling other lands on 22 March, 1705/6; 11 April, 1706 and 9 December, 1709, when he is called a resident of Hempstead. He married about 1705 or 1706 to Sarah Jackson, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Seaman) Jackson of Hempstead and moved to Westchester county. His will, dated at Rye 30 September, 1756, was proved 26 August, 1763. The will mentions his wife Sarah, land in Harrison on which he lived at this time, property in the Oblong

The first record of Joshua Barnes appears in The Records of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, I, p. 99, when he was apprenticed to William Paine; and further references will be found in The History of Cape Cod, by Frederick Freeman (1858) vol. I, pp. 142, 144, 166; II, pp. 17, 29, 36 and 41. The location of his land in Yarmouth is given in the History of Old Yarmouth, by Charles F. Swift, p. 23; and a summary record of his earlier years in this country was given by Charles E. Banks in The History of Martha's Vineyard, vol. II, p. 123.

Richard Wynkoop in The Barnes Family of Easthampton, Long Island (1906) gives some record of the connections of the present family, and supposes Joshua to have been possibly the son of of William Barnes of East Winch, Norfolk, and therefore a brother of Charles Barnes of Easthampton. A similar account is recorded in The Barnes Family Year Book, vol. I (1907), and here the ancestry of Joshua passes as positive fact. In Barnes Genealogies by the Rev. George N. Barnes there occur several statements which are inaccurate, and others which are probably untrue. At page 4 the Rev. Mr. Barnes states that Joshua Barnes came from Yarmouth, England, presumably meaning Great Yarmouth in Norfolk (there is another Yarmouth in England); however we suspect strongly that Great Yarmouth has been confused with the Yarmouth on Cape Cod and where Joshua Barnes was a transient settler. The frequently made statement that Joshua was a resident also of Easthampton, New York is not sustained; he does appear in the Town Records of the latter place, but so far as we have found, always as an agent for and resident of Southampton. This observation is born out by our examination of the printed Records of the Town of Southampton, New York.

In his comments on this family in The Early History of Southampton, New York, George Rogers Howell at page 202, wrote the opinion that Joshua Barnes was the son of William Barnes, a very early planter of Southampton who was there in 1644, five years before Joshua Barnes arrived. Concerning this man Wynkoop says, in his work on this family:

> There was a William Barnes of Southampton, L. I. 1644-1652. In the year named last, May 15, he sold his house and three acres of land to James Hampton of Salem....and disappears from our view. He was a rover, and it is incredible that he > was identical with either of the William Barnes of East Winch, father and brother of Charles.....This William of Southampton....on March 7, 1644,....was chosen one of the men at Southampton, to dispose of cast-up whales. The sale of his place at Southampton, to a Salem man, leads to a research in the place named last; and we find a William Barnes, from Gloucester, Eng., admitted as a freeman, June 2, 1641. In 1644 he was involved in legal proceedings in the Court at Salem, and William Addis became surety for him. Barnes' wife, Sarah, petitioned for delay "till her husband return again into the country." The fine was at length remitted. Mrs. Barnes obtained a divorce, April 6, 1648, and remarried John Tinker, and died about October 13, 1648, leaving two young daughters (surnamed Barnes) the elder of whom was cared for by Richard Cooke, and the younger, by John Tinker. This William has not been traced further. He should not be confounded with William of Salisbury, Mass., whose wife was Rachel.

Trescott C. Barnes in The Barnes Family Year Book, vol. I (1907) says among other things

> A tradition handed down by descendants is that three of the boys and two girls came to America, and settled at East and South Hampton (sic) Long Island.

We have the distinct impression that Joshua Barnes was not closely related to his contemporaries and neighbors on Long Island. In spite of many loose statements, obvious afterthoughts and so-called traditions, there has not been found one single record to support any such assumptions that is, that he was related to William Barnes of Southampton, or to Charles and the later William Barnes of Easthampton. There is one suggestive entry found in the Southampton Town Records: on 25 April, 1660 Mr. James Hampton and Thomas Pope exchanged land with Joshua Barnes in the rear of the latter's home lot; Joshua Barnes was a next-door neighbor of James Hampton, and it will be recalled that William Barnes of Southampton sold his properties to Hampton. This association may have been coincidental, but on the other hand, there may have been some relationship between William and Joshua Barnes which prompted the latter to come to Southampton, particularly if he held any of William Barnes' property. As William Barnes is said to have come from Gloucestershire, search in that county may be productive.

The supposition that Joshua Barnes was a brother of Charles of Easthampton, New York, has led to statements that the former was a son of William and Thomasina (Shepard) Barnes of East Winch in Norfolk, and descended of a family mainly settled in Soham, county Cambridge. The Norfolk Record Society in vol. IV of their publications has issued The Visitation of Norfolk Anno Domini 1664

Made by Sir Edward Bysshe, Kt. Clarenceux King of Arms, edited and annotated by A. W. Hughes Clarke, F. S. A., and Arthur Campling. At p. 13 is given the pedigree descended of Edward Barnes of Soham through his son William, who married twice; first to Thomasina, daughter of Richard Hovell of Hillingdon in Norfolk, and second to Thomasina, daughter of Owen Shepard of Kirby Bedon in the same county. There were issue by both wives, and three of the five sons are listed, viz., William, Owen and Charles. Of these Charles is positively the immigrant to Easthampton, New York, but who had probably returned to England in 1663. The other two sons are not named, and because of this Joshua has been assigned as one of them.

In the second volume of The Barnes Family Year Book (1908), under a section entitled "Review", Mr. Trescott C. Barnes states:

> We are pleased to announce that a very complete investigation, made at the instigation of Byron Barnes Horton of Sheffield, Penn., regarding the ancestry of the Long Island Barnses, shows conclusively that only Charles was a son of William of Eastwinch (sic), England. Our readers will therefore note that William Barnes....and Joshua....are not longer to be considered as brothers of Charles, nor even related to each other. The five sons of William of Eastwinch, are shown to be William who died soon after his father in England, Charles, Owen, Thomas and Edward, all of which excepting Charles are accounted for in England.....

We have already referred to the Records of the Town of Southampton as listing the activities of Joshua Barnes while resident there. The exceedingly numerous instances where he is mentioned are for the most part indexed. In volumes V and VI are printed the first and second books of Deeds of the town, which have assisted in tracing the movements of the succeeding generations as they sold their property and moved elsewhere. Mr. William Smith Pelletreau records the intestacy and administration of Samuel Barnes in Early Long Island Wills of Suffolk County, 1691-1703, p. 82, and includes a note on the identity of Samuel; and for much of the record of the descendants we are indebted to Arthur S. Wardwell of Brooklyn, New York.

The ancestry of Joshua Barnes is unknown.

NOTES

The Batchelder, Batcheller Genealogy published in 1898 by Frederick Clifton Pierce, at p. 39 gives the following:

> William Bachelder, born Berks Co., England, 1597; married in Standford Dingley, Berks Co., England, in October, 1632 Jane Cowper; married 2, Rachel -------, born 1603, died May 28, 1676.

The authorities for his statements are not disclosed. He quotes an original record:

> Henry Arthur, late of Standford Dingley, in County Berks, gent., complains that about August, 1630, he took into his service Jane Cowper, spinster, agreeing to pay her 40s a year although she was so sickly that the other servants were compelled to do almost all her work. Afterwards her aunt, Katharine Smith, who then lived in the house where plt. dwells, left her a legacy of £20. After a great deal of trouble plaintiff got the money for her and in return she lent it to him for a year, and plt. returned it to her and her husband, William Bacheler, except a small sum, which plt. kept back for her food "as she was something fyne in her dyett", when she was living at her own request in plts. house after she received the said legacy.

The answers of William Bachelor and Jane, his wife. The said Jane says that the plaintiff borrowed £4 of her, and that she in her turn borrowed 40s of Margery Pryne, dau. of Mrs. Prine. She was persuaded by plts. landlord, Richard Smith, to lend the said £20 to plt. The said William Batchelor says that he married the said Jane in October, 1632, and afterwards demanded the sd money of plt., who only repaid part of it.

Thomas Bellows Wyman in his The Genealogies and Estates of Charlestown, Mass., 1629-1818, summarizes considerably of the information available relative to William Batchelder; James Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary mentions the family in vol. I, pp. 87-89. William Batchelder's connections are also given in Ye Atte Wode Annals, part 2, Edition F, by Elijah Francis Atwood of South Dakota. In the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 48, p. 57, is a map of old Charlestown showing the lot owned by William Batchelder.

That the second wife of William Batchelder was probably a daughter of James and Mary (Martin) Bate of Lydd, Kent, is a reasonable assumption from researches currently made. In Genealogical Gleanings in England, by Henry Fitzgilbert Waters, vol. I, at p. 21 is given the abstract of the will of Smalehope Bigg of Cranbrook, dated 3 May, 1638, proved 3 October, 1638. He mentions among his kin the wife of William Batchelder. While the will of Ellen Bigge of Cranbrooke, dated 24 November and proved 12 February, 1638 (1638/9) does not mention either William or Rachel Batchelder, that of John Bigg of Maidstone, Kent, in his will of 17 August, 1640, gives William Batchelder a bequest. John Bigg was the brother of Smalehope Bigg; the former's widow Rachel emigrated to New England, and in her will of 1646 m mentions many suggestive connections. She was a daughter of James and Joan (Adam) Martin, and therefore evidently a relative of Rachel (Bate) Batchelder, whose mother was likewise a daughter of James and Joan (Adam) Martin. Refer also to The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, V, 300; XXIX, 253; XCII, 296 and 395.

The case for assuming that Rachel Batchelder was born Bate has been ably stated by John I. Coddington of Cambridge, Mass., in a communication to the writer:

> It is to be noticed that Smalehope Bigge bequeathed "to Thomas Bate of Lydd, James Bate, Clement Bate, and the wife of William Batchelor" in that order; and that Smalehope's brother John Bigge bequeathed to "Clement Bate and William Batchelor". ..... The Bigge brothers seem to have been systematic men, and their bequests to their numerous relatives appear to have been arranged according to categories of relationships. This leads one to suspect that Rachel, wife of William Batchelder, may have been closely related to the Bate family of Lydd, co. Kent.
>
> As you undoubtedly know, the emigrants James and Clement Bate, who came from Lydd to Dorchester, Mass., were first cousins of the testators Smalehope and John Bigge. Mary Martin, eldest daughter of James and Joan (Adam) Martin, and elder sister of Rachel (Martin) Bigge, was bapt. at Lydd, 10 April, 1563, and m. there 6 June 1580, James Bate, of Lydd, yeoman, who d. at Lydd 2 March 1614 (sic-1614/5?). Information about the Bate family, and in particular about the thirteen children of James and Mary (Martin) Bate, will be found in Waters' Genealogical Gleanings, vol. 2, pp. 1302 et seq.
>
> James and Mary (Martin) Bate had a daughter Rachel, their twelfth and youngest surviving child, doubtless named for her aunt Rachel (Martin) Bigge. This child was bapt. at Lydd 5 Feb. 1604 (sic - apparently 1603/4). Pope's Pioneers of Massachusetts says (p. 26) that Rachel, widow of William Batchelder of Charlestown d. 28 May, 1676, aged 73. This is just about right, and so I strongly suspect that your Rachel was born Rachel Bate.
> But I am sorry to say that this is really only conjecture. I have no proofs whatever.....

The foregoing comments will be of interest to those descendants who are from the second wife. While it is admitted, as Mr. Coddington says, that there are no proofs of this connection at this writing, we are of the opinion that it will undoubtedly be found correct.

Pope's Pioneers (see above) assigns a son Benjamin in the family of William Batchelder. We have not found him, and think that this may have been a misidentification of the grandson Benjamin Cromwell.

The most recent reference in other works to William Batchelder will be found in A Register of the Ancestors of Dorr Eugene Felt and Agnes McNulty Felt, 1921, pp. 26+. The will and codicil of the first settler is given in full, mentions the grandchildren and among other matters establishes the Cromwell connection without any question.

We know of no investigations which are now being made to establish the English ancestry of William Batchelder or Bachelor. The parish registers of Standford Dingley, Faircross Hundred, Berkshire begin in 1538, and should be searched, as well as the usual sources of wills.

The ancestry of William Batchelder is unknown to us.

FIRST, SECOND, THIRD, FOURTH AND FIFTH LINES

9, 10 & 11. MARY BAYLEY 389; 429; 965; 1,981; 2,045
m. PHILIP UDALL daughter of Philip Udall and Mary

She was born in St. Phillip's parish, Bristol, Gloucestershire, 13 October, 1653, it "being Thursday betweene two & three of the Clock". The baptismal record has not been found.

She had come to America with her father and his family before 20 January, 1663, when Joseph Bayley was recorder of the town of Huntington, or town clerk. In this town she married after 4 August, 1673 (when she is last of record under her maiden name) to Phillip Udall of Huntington and Flushing, New York. They were definitely residents of Huntington until 1687, and held property in the latter town for which they were assessed through 1698.

Subsequently she was probably a resident of Flushing; and had died, presumably at that place, before her husband made his will on 2 December, 1711. No will or administration of her effects has been found of record.

For descendants, see UDALL, #388, 428, 964, 1,980 and 2,044.

NOTES

For detailed description of source material see under the next generation. The bible record of Philip Udall, from which the birth entry of Mary Bayley is taken, is quoted in detail under UDALL, which see.

Mary Bayley was the daughter of

10, 11 & 12. JOSEPH BAYLEY 778, 858, 1,930, 3,962, 4,090
m. ALICE

He was born probably in England, perhaps in Bristol, Gloucestershire, about 1630.

He had come to Huntington, New York before 20 January, 1663 at which time he was recorder or town clerk for that place. He relinquished this position to Thomas Powell who held it

8 December, 1663. Joseph Bayley was made freeman of the Connecticut Colony 12 May, 1664, and again was recorder for Huntington, 6 March, 1665, an office which he held successively for the next eight years thereafter.

He received a gift of land from the town 27 May, 1666, upon which he built his home. This lot was on a hill overlooking the Huntington Mill Pond, a little north of the site of the present St. John's Episcopal church on Main street in Huntington village. The lot was laid out by Jonas Wood and Thomas Wilkes senior, two of the first settlers of the town and surveyors. The next year, 24 December, 1667, he was allowed to extend the fence at the west end of his home lot to the Mill Pond; however he was to provide a gate sufficient "for a horse with a sack it being the townes gift to Joseph bailey." On the same date he was allowed to take up what remained of good planting land on the left side of the path leading to the farther side of Stony Brook, provided he permitted cattle access to water. Apparently he did not extend this fence, or perhaps objection arose at the time, for the same record of this privelege is given again under date of 1 April, 1668.

With Samuel Wood, Nathaniel Foster, John Tedd and Jonathan Harned he was owner of farm #6 in the so-called Ten Farms, which Huntington attempted to settle 16/17 April, 1672, in a dispute over property rights with Smithtown. He was called Captain Bayley in 1673, and was in charge of the Train Band, and hence the military leader of the settlement. He called himself yeoman in a deed to Nicholas Smith on 10 November of 1682, and was a surveyor in 1683. From the deeds extant it is evident that he dealt extensively in real estate and trading.

On 16 December, 1681 he made over half his farm at Fresh Pond to his daughter Mary, who had then married Philip Udall some time before. Eight years later on 5 November, 1689 he gave to his young grandson Joseph Udall house and land which Joseph Bayley had bought of Jonas Wood on 16 July, 1668; and Philip and Mary (Bayley) Udall committed the "whole tuission & goverment of our son Joseph udall in to y^{e} hands of our father and Mother Joseph and alles Baile to be at thear Command and sarvise untell he accomplish y^{e} age of on and twenty years if he chance so Long to life".

He was one of the Patentees of the Dongan charter, issued 2 August, 1688, and likewise the first Patentee named among others in the Fletcher Patent of 5 October, 1694. Joseph Bayley was one of the first Trustees of the town of Huntington. 9 April, 1694, and was re-elected to this office 5 May, 1695; and on 5 May, 1696 he was elected President of the Trustees, the highest political position in the township.

On 10 August, 1703 Joseph Bayley made over his house, home-lot, orchards, barns and other properties to his grandson Joseph Udall. The deed was acknowledged before John Marston, judge for Queens, 8 December, 1708. It is evident that shortly after 1700 and before 24 February, 1702/3 he had removed to Queens county and was probably living at Hempstead; for he subscribed to an affidavit before John Smith, justice, to the effect that Jonathan Whitehead criticized the current attitude towards the Sabbath by saying that if Thursday or any other day of the week were appointed the Sabbath, the people would observe it as much.

Joseph Bayley died shortly after 8 December, 1708. The deed dated 10 August, 1703 was undoubtedly in lieu of a will, for none is found; although the property holdings were very considerable. It has not been determined where he was buried.

His wife was named Alice, maiden name unreported, and whom he married before 1653, perhaps in Bristol, Gloucestershire. She was living as late as 29 November, 1689 when she signed with an X mark as a witness, but probably had deceased before Captain Bayley removed to Hempstead. She was the mother of the daughter, and without doubt also of his son.

Issue:

1. Mary, married Philip Udall. See page 293.
2. (probably) Richard of Huntington, treated by John Winthrop, junior in 1667, probably deceased by 1673.

Joseph and Alice Bayley brought up three apparently unrelated children named Stephen, Daniel and Sarah Barnes. We have not ascertained their connections.

NOTES

It has been stated that Joseph Bayley came to Huntington by way of Southold. That he was related to John or Stephen Bayley of the latter place seems thoroughly improbable from the circumstances recited by the late Mrs. DeWitt van Buren of Riverhead, New York, who published an article in The American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 46, entitled "Joseph Bayley of Huntington, N. Y." In The Huntington Town Records, Including Babylon, Joseph Bayley is of very frequent reference, appearing first as recorder 20 January, 1663 (vol. I, page 44); his penmanship was good for the time. The record of the land grant dated 27 May 1666 appears at vol. I, p. 86 of the same Records; further references will be found in the same volume, page 110 (record of land on the farther side of Stony Brook); page 117

> The tenth of June 1677

Evidently Captain Bayley could be heard without any difficulty.

Continuing further with references in the printed Town Records, the next is at vol. I, p. 281 (deed from Joseph Bayley to Robert Kellum, dated 24 January, 1681); p. 329 (record of land given by Joseph Bayley to his son-in-law Philip Udall, 16 December, 1681); p. 345 (deed of Joseph Bayley to Nicholas Smith or Seversmith, 10 November, 1682); p. 347 (bond of Nicholas Smith to pay Joseph Bayley for a farm bought, 13 November, 1682); p. 349(deed of Nicholas Ellis to Joseph Bayley, 15 November, 1682); p. 509 (deed from Joseph Bayley to John Green, 18 December, 1687);p.511 (deed from Joseph Bayley to Jonathan Lewis, 23 January, 1688);p. 513 (deed of Edward Higbee to Joseph Bayley, 4 February, 1688); p. 535 (Patentee under the Dongan Charter of 2 August, 1688); p. 3 of vol. In the Town Records as printed, vol. 2, the next record is found at p. 51 (deed of Joseph Bayley to John Sammis, 29 November, 1689) p. 142 (Patentee under the Fletcher Patent of 5 October, 1694); p. 153 (when Captain Bayley paid £1/3/3 towards the cost of the new patent); p. 170 (president of the trustees); p. 174 (elected a trustee of the town, 7 May, 1695); p. 228 (rates fixed for Baiting Place Purchase, 4 October, 1698).

The record of his being made a freeman will be found in The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, vol. I, p. 425; and the last known record of him appears in Liber I of unpublished Deeds in the office of the Town Clerk at Huntington, p. 617; we have referred to these under our own name in an article on the Udall family of Long Island as published in The American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 202. In The Documentary History of the State of New York, vol. III, p. 125, appears the following:

8. SARAH BERGEN 199
m. JOHN HAVILAND son of William Haviland and Hannah Hicks

She was born about 1675, certainly after 1672 and before 1677, at Brooklyn, New York. Her baptism is not found; during this time the records of the Reformed Dutch church of Brooklyn are defective.

When she was very young her father removed to Jamaica, New York, and there she probably lived until the date of her marriage. This took place either in Jamaica or Flushing, presumably, and about 1696. Thenceforth she was a resident of Flushing until 1712, when her husband settled in Hempstead. She was still living at Hempstead 11 October, 1740, at the time the will of her deceased husband was proved.

The date of her death is unknown; and no will or administration of her effects is found. It is supposed that she was buried at Hempstead.

For descendants see HAVILAND, #198.

NOTES

In The Bergen Family, by Teunis G. Bergen, in the second edition published in 1876, Sarah is noted as having married Jan Hebbelem, which was the Dutch phonetization of John Haviland's name. In the typescript Dutch Church Records of Jamaica, New York, as copied by Mrs. Josephine C. Frost, the sponsors to the baptisms of the children of John and Sarah Haviland include members of this Bergen family, and this is strong assurance that Hebbelem and Haviland are one and the same. No other adequate explanation of this former name is found.

Sarah Bergen was the daughter of

9. JAN HANSZEN BERGEN 398
m. JANNETJE THEUNIS DE NYSE daughter of Theunis De Nyse and Phoebe (Scales) Felix

He was born at New Amsterdam, New Netherlands, and probably at the residence of his father on Pearl street adjacent to the Fort, in 1644. He was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church at New Amsterdam, 17 April 1644, the sponsors being Jan Montfoort, Jan Snyderkin and Anneken Bogardus.

When he was three years of age his father removed with the family to a plantation on the site of the present Wallabout in Brooklyn. Here he is first of record at the Dutch legal age of 18 on 18 March, 1662, when with others he requested land from the Governor-General and Council, and which was between land of Joris Janszen Rapalje and the path which led to the Wallabout bay. The request was granted, provided the settlers built their homes closely enough together to form a protective unit which could defend itself against Indian depredations. A patent for his property was granted by the Dutch government 15 May, 1664, and covered the northern half of his farm at Bedford. This ground was listed on Butts' map of Brooklyn, 16 April, 1697 as that of the widow Lott.

On 14 March, 1675 he conveyed to Claes Pieterszen Wyckoff approximately 12 morgens of land in Flatlands, and also conveyed to Dirck Janszen (probably Ammerman) six morgens at the same place. He was assessed in Brooklyn, 20 August, 1675 for one poll, 2 horses, 4 cows, 2 cows 3 years old, 2 cows 2 years old, one of 1 year, 4 hogs, 10 morgens of land valued at twenty pounds, and personal estate valued at eighty pounds ten shillings. In 1676 he with his wife were members of the Dutch Reformed church in Brooklyn; but he is entered on the records in 1677 as having removed to Jamaica, New York.

At the time the meadows of the farther East Neck were divided among the inhabitants of Jamaica, 12 May, 1679, John Hanszen and Thomas Oakley of Foster's Meadows were allotted twenty acres between them. He was assessed at Jamaica for 8 cows in 1683, and sundry other items.

On 17 March, 1684/5, John Hanson (so-called) and Benjamin Coe had liberty from Jamaica to set up a corn and fulling mill on Foster's river. On 12 March, 1689, Benjamin Jones of Jamaica conveyed to him a tract of land at Jamaica consisting of thirteen acres. On a town list of Jamaica in 1692 he is recorded as owning thirty five acres of land. John Bergen sold the land patented to him at Bedford to Lucas Coeverts, 26 April, 1697.

His holdings in Jamaica were augmented by the purchase of the property of John Garretsen, 29 April, 1710, and at this time he was considered a prosperous farmer and landed proprietor of Jamaica. His attitude towards the various Christian churches seems to have been unusually liberal, for he could contribute twelve shillings towards the salary of Thomas Poyer, the Presbyterian minister in 1710, and on 29 April, 1715 he subscribed three pounds towards the building of the Dutch church at Jamaica. He was at this time a signer of the Articles of this church, and therefore can be considered one of the original founders.

At this time he was seventy-one years of age, and he disappears from record shortly thereafter; this indicates that he had probably died within the next few years. On 21 November 1735 his widow, then very aged, sold his seat in the Dutch church at Jamaica to Isaac van Hoeck. There seems to be no will or administration of his estate of discovered record.

He had married Jannetje Theunis Denyse before 1676 as she is listed as his wife in a membership list of the Dutch church in Brooklyn in that year. We are of the opinion that the marriage took place shortly after the burial of her mother, 13 December, 1666, and at about the time Jan Hanszen Bergen was settled upon his new farm at Bedford. She survived him.

Issue:

1. Sarah, married John Haviland. See page 299.
2. Hans, born either at Brooklyn or Jamaica, New York about 1677, was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church at New York city, 14 February, 1677, the sponsors being Theunis Janszen, Aeltje Theunis; he was resident in Jamaica, New York in 1734. Hans Bergen married Antje or Annetje Elderts, daughter of Eldert Lucaszen van Voorhees and Styntje Harmans Swearingh. She was baptised 24 February, 1684, and still living in 1735. Issue, baptised at Jamaica in the Dutch church:
   - i. Jannetje, baptised 10 March, 1702, sponsors Jan and Jannetje Bergen. She probably married Thomas Stringham of Hempstead, New York. Issue.
   - ii. Eldert, baptised 3 January, 1705, sponsors Eldert and Hyltje Eldertsen; probably died young.
   - iii. Jan, baptised 21 March, 1710, sponsors Johannes Mayerick and Jannetje Bergen. He died apparently without issue, in March of 1780.

NOTES

The Bergen Genealogy, the second edition of which was published in 1876 under the authorship of Teunis G. Bergen, is almost completely the source of our information. As Frank Allaben found when he compiled The Ancestors and Descendants of Leander H. Crall, Mr. Bergen had edited his information so accurately that very little could be added. If the reader is interested in rechecking the records at their sources, however, he will find the following of assistance: The Records of the Reformed Dutch Church of the City of New York, published as volumes 1, 2 and 3 of the Collections of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and also in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, continuously beginning with vol. 5 through 32, indexed; the records of the Dutch churches of Flatbush and Brooklyn, New York, respectively, and published in the Year Books for 1897 and 1898, of the Holland Society of the City of New York; Henry P. Stile's History of the City of Brooklyn, New York (1867); the Dutch church Records of Jamaica, N. Y., a typescript of Mrs. Josephine C. Frost's, and copies of which may be seen in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C., the Library of the Long Island Historical Society and the Queensborough Public Library, the second named at Brooklyn and the last at Jamaica. Other sources are the Court Records of New Amsterdam, edited by Berthold Fernow, and the Documentary History of the State of New York, which represents material collected or transcribed by O'Callahan and Fernow. The Jamaica Town Records as printed, have also been referred to. The foregoing are all indexed.

Very little of the Bergen genealogy has been included, as Mr. Bergen's work is readily available in most of the larger libraries.

Jan Hanszen Bergen was the son of

10. HANS HANSSEN (BERGEN) 796
m. SARA JORIS RAPALJE daughter of Joris Janszen Rapalje and Catalyntje Tricou

He was born about 1610, and probably at Bergen in Norway, as he is designated as having come from that place. Church records of Bergen have not been searched, to our knowledge.

He removed from Bergen to the Netherlands shortly before 1633, and embarked in de Zoutberg (The Salt Mountain) in April of 1633 for New Amsterdam in the New Netherlands. The second Director General of the New Netherlands, Wouter van Twiller, arrived in the same fleet.

Hans Hanssen resided for some years in New Amsterdam, where he owned and probably occupied a lot on the present Pearl street, abutting against the Fort. His land was located between that of Jan Snedeker and Joris Janszen Rapalje, and it was patented in his name 13 March, 1647. In 1638 he is recorded as attempting to cultivate tobacco on the land of Andries Hudde. A deed dated 19 February, 1639 states that a house and land "heretofore in the occupation of Master Fiscox and Hans Hansen (Bergen) situated on the North river of New Netherland, near the plantation heretofore occupied by Tonis Nyssen" was sold by Cornelis Claeszen Swits to Maryn Adriensen for 400 guilders, and from this it is assumed that Hanssen had possessed part of this land and had cultivated it before patents were granted, and before he attempted to cultivate tobacco. Fiscox and Hanssen probably sold out to Swits, although the deed seems to be of no record.

Hanssen was a shipwright, and from agreements in 1642 and in 1643 he seems to have been active at this trade. Perhaps a desire for excellent docking facilities caused him to decide to remove to the Wallabout in Brooklyn, and therefore on 23 January, 1643 he sold property in New Amsterdam for 1,000 Carolus guilders, and removed across the East river. This brought him into the center of the difficulties which the Dutch had with the Indians in that year.

It was the year in which Director General Kieft had caused to be murdered those helpless Indian refugees who had fled from the Mohawks; this senseless butchery arising from the prejudices of a bigoted man caused no end of trouble. Some of the settlers in Brooklyn and the vicinity, and living on the Long Island side of the East river, wished to extend this unreasonable quarrel. It must be admitted that Hans Hanssen, with others, petitioned Governor Kieft to be allowed to lead an expedition against the Mareckawick tribe, but Kieft, sensing that the Mareckawicks were more formidable adversaries, forbade the attack. He did say, however, that if the Indians showed any sign of hostility, then the colonists might adopt such measures of defence as they saw fit. Construing their occasions accordingly, a secret expedition was organized by the Brooklyn settlers, and plundered two wagon-loads of corn, killed three Indians. From the Raritan to the Hackensack and the shores of Jamaica bay, the Indians rose as one against the now terrified Dutch. Hanssen and his family, with the others who had settled on Long Island, fled to the protection of the Fort at New Amsterdam while their houses were pillaged and burned to to the ground.

In these straits Kieft was induced to call together the commonality of the Manhattans, and these leaders of the people met in the Fort in October of 1643 to consider measures for the general good. The petition for calling the meeting was signed, among others, by Hans Hanssen, who made his mark "H". Thus he was still living in New Amsterdam.

Upon the efforts of Captain de Vries, whom the Indians trusted, relationships with the Dutch were adjusted and on 23 April, 1644 Hans Hanssen and his father-in-law Joris Rapalje hired from William Smith of Stamford, Connecticut, some cattle. Bergen had then returned to Long Island, and he and Rapalje were rebuilding their farms and restocking their lands. On 29 November, 1644 he gave Cornelis Maeszen of Rensselaerwyck a note for 250 guilders of wheat bought of him.

Governor Kieft granted him a patent on 30 March, 1647 for a tract of land on Long Island, "in the kil of Jorse Rapalie, it extends from his house north by east till to Lambert Huybertsen's (Mol) plantation, further on the kil of Jan the Swede, according to the division line of Derick Volkertsen's land, which he purchased from Wilcock, and the division of Henry Satley, containing 200 morgens" (400 acres). This patent, as near as can be ascertained, covered the farms of Abraham Boerum, Jeremiah A. and Abraham A. Remsen on the Wallabout bay, marked Schols, Remsen, and Boerum on Butt's map of Brooklyn. It extended back beyond these farms to the old Bushwick cross roads, and to the meadows adjoining Newtown; the land of Lambert Huybertszen Mol being on the north side.

Hans Hanssen resided on this property the rest of his life. Teunis G. Bergen states that he died in the latter part of 1653 or early in 1654. No will or administration of his esseems to have been preserved; he was presumably buried on his farm at the Wallabout. His lot in New York was sold after his decease, 30 May, 1654 to Claes Claeszen Bording.

The wife of Hans Hanssen (Bergen) was Sarah Rapalje, who was married to him probably in New Amsterdam about 1639. She remarried after his death to Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert (see BOGAERT).

He was assessed in Brooklyn in 1675 for one poll, 2 horses, 7 cows and the abovesaid land, totalling £114. In 1680 he with Symon Aerssen were Overseers of Brooklyn, and was a Patentee of Brooklyn in Dongan's Patent of 13 May, 1686. Michiel Bergen was commissioned as a Captain of the Brooklyn company of militia, 22 October, 1688. He supported Jacob Leisler and appears among the thirty who were Leisler's most obnoxious adherents. He was therefore not to be pardoned, but seems to have suffered no serious consequences. On 11 October, 1698 he was appointed a justice of the peace, and later became also one of the Justices of the Sessions, an office he held until 1703. He purchased a house, orchard and house lot at the Ferry of Gerrit Middagh on 20 April, 1709, and 14 June, 1710 he transferred this property to his son Hans. NOTES

We have given much of the source material under the NOTES on p. 303, and but few other comments are to be made. A Jan Bergen was captain of the ship St. Jan Baptist on 31 December, 1661;he seems to have been the same man who was skipper of the Bontekoe 31 December, 1663. Colonial records show further that this man carried a cargo of emigrants in May of 1661 to New Amsterdam in the St. Jan Baptist. There are other references to this Jan Bergen, or Jan van Bergen as he is also called. The author of the Bergen genealogy was inclined to identify this man with the Jan Hanszen Bergen whom we have recorded on page 299, but if so he was master of a merchant vessel at 19 and already bringing emigrants to this country. We doubt very seriously if a youth of such tender years would have such responsibilities, and therefore question the connection.

Mr. Frank Allaben in his The Ancestors and Descendants of Leander H. Crall has noted a few other minor corrections, which we have made. Another record of Hans Hanssen (Bergen) was published by John O. Evjen in his Scandinavian Immigrants in New York, pp. 56 to 69 inclusive, but it differs in no essentials from the foregoing.

Teunis G. Bergen relates an incident about Hans Hanssen, which is no less amusing for being purely traditional:

> "....there is a tradition in the family which probably has some foundation, that Hansen, while engaged in the cultivation of his plantation, was chased by the Indians, when for safety he took refuge in a tree, where they soon discovered him.
> Supposing his end to be near, he commenced singing in a melodious voice, with which he was blessed, the hymn which commences with 'In Myn Grootste Nood, o' Heere'(In my Greatest Need, O Lord). His singing so charmed his pursuers, that after listening for some time in delight, they left him unmolested and free to go on his way rejoicing....."

It is to be hoped that these were not the Mareckawick Indians that Hans Hanssen was so eager to have at. He might not have fared so well.

In a list of denizations entitled Bergens Borgerbog 1550--1751, between 1618 and 1631 there are several Hanssens and Jensens, some of whom may have been related to Hans Hanssen.

The ancestry of Hans Hanssen is unknown.

m. MOSES WICKES son of Elnathan Wickes and Miriam Whitman

She was born at Upper Dix Hills, town of Huntington,New York in 1746 and baptised in the First church at that place 11 September, 1764, then an adult.

She married 1, 17 May, 1764 to Samuel Smith junior of Huntington, the marriage having been recorded in the records of the First church. They resided at Long Swamp in Huntington, where he died shortly before 31 October, 1770, when his father Samuel Smith was granted administration of the estate.She married 2, in the First Presbyterian church at Smithtown,New York, 3 February, 1774 to Moses Wickes. They resided on a farm about two miles southeast of Commack and in the town of Islip, New York.

She died at Commack, 27 April, 1815 and was buried in the Wickes cemetery near the old farm. Her gravestone is still standing. No will or administration of her effects has been found.

For descendants by her second husband, see WICKES-WICKS,#112.

Issue (SMITH):

1. Joshua, presumably the one of that name baptised in the First Presbyterian church at Huntington, 19 October, 1766.

There may have been other children. A descendant,Selah Smith, was proprietor at one time of a hotel at Babylon, New York, and was known as a distant cousin of the late Augustus C Wicks of Babylon. Further connections have not been traced.

NOTES

In the Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723-1779, and edited by Moses L. Scudder, the baptism of Sarah Blachley is given on p. 54, her first marriage on p. 100. Her first husband was distantly related to her second, as he was son of Samuel and Esther (Wickes) Smith. The marriage to the second husband was printed in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 42, p. 13. The administration of the estate of Samuel Smith junior was printed in The Collections of the New York Historical Society for 1898, Abstracts of Wills, vol. VII, p. 469. We have visited the graveyard and personally seen the gravestone. A transcript of the death date has been filed in Cemetery Inscriptions on file in the Queensborough Public Library at Jamaica, New York and in the Long Island Collection.

This surname at the present time is spelled Blachly on Long Island, and at the time Sarah was baptised it was written as Blachley, and contemporaneous record gives it also as Black(s)ly and Blatchley. Therefore the heading of this pedigree has been given by the two variations of the name which are the extremes of the most frequent spellings.

Sarah Blachley was the daughter of

8. DANIEL BLACHLEY 226
m. PRUDENCE WEISER daughter of Georg Friedrich Weiser and Scudder

He was born in 1721 in the town of Huntington, New York; no baptism is of record.

Daniel Blachley was a farmer whose homestead stood in Upper Dix Hills, on land facing the road which now runs from the Jericho turnpike to the deserted church building at the latter place. It was later owned by the Duryea family, was on the west side of this road and now the location is an open field. It may have been the farm of his father before him.

Daniel Blachley was overseer of highways in his part of the town, 1 May, 1753 and again 5 May, 1765. He contributed 18s 1d towards a town lawsuit to determine property rights, 27 June, 1763. He seems to have been of a quiet nature and is seldom of record, although very evidently was a prosperous inhabitant of Huntington. Both he and a son were signers of the Associations in support of the Revolutionary government, 8 May, 1775; and this support seems to have been consistent and genuine.

His assessed valuation in 1763 was almost eight hundred pounds, reduced inexplicably in 1765 to 112 pounds. The widow was assessed at over 1000 pounds after 1781.

He died in Upper Dix Hills, town of Huntington, 15 October, 1781. He was buried on his own farm, and the gravestone marking the site is still standing. His will, dated 21 February, 1781, was proved 19 October, 1781 and is filed in liber 34 of New York Wills, p. 312. His wife survived him.

Daniel Blachley married in the First church in Huntington to Prudence Weiser, 23 November, 1742.

Issue:

1. Mary, born at Dix Hills, Huntington, New York, 8 October, 1744, died at Commack, New York, 8 or 9 October, 1805, and buried in the cemetery of the First church there. She married 13 February, 1767 to Jacobus Nagel Hubbs, later called James Hubbs, son of Charles and Jane (Nagel) Hubbs of Hempstead, New York. James Hubbs was born at Hempstead 24 July, 1741 and died at Commack 17 April, 1809. He was a corporal in Colonel Josiah Smith's regiment during the war of the American Revolution, and was a refugee to Norwalk, Connecticut. NOTES

The birth year of Daniel Blachley or Blachly is known from the inscription on his gravestone, and the location and other details concerning this have been recorded in the National Genealogical Society Quarterly, vol. XXV, No. 1, pp. 36+ (March, 1937); and also in the Long Island Forum, vol. III, No. 1, (January, 1940), page 11. Transcripts of the record are on file in the collections made by the Huntington Historical Society of Huntington, New York, and also in the Long Island Collection in the Queensborough Library at Jamaica, New York. Reference has been had also to the Huntington Town Records, vol. II, pp. 417 and 484. The Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick G. Mather, refer to the revolutionary activities of members of the family, although not without some misidentifications. See pp. 272, 1062.

Daniel Blachley, as Daniel Blackle, took the oath of allegiance to the king of Great Britain in 1778 (Huntington Town Records, vol. III, p. 37), and his last days were overshadowed by the necessary services which he performed for the British army. The losses so sustained were filed as claims against the State of New York, and we quote from the Huntington Town Records, volume III, Appendix, p. 42:

DANIEL BLADSLEY'S ESTATE (sic)	£	s.	d.
1778 August--10 Days with an Ox team to South hold Carting Bagage und'r Com'd of Governor Tryon at 16s	8

There is not much doubt, however that Daniel Blachley's political sympathies were with the Colonial government; he had two sons and at least one son-in-law actively participating in the war against the British.

The bible of Jacobus Nagel and Mary (Blachley) Hubbs is said to be owned by Mrs. Henry Holmes of Central Islip, New York, and a transcript is filed in Bible Records (New York), III, 86, in the library of the National Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Washington, D. C. Other references to members of the Hubbs family descended of this union will be found in A History of Hauppauge, Long Island, by Simeon Wood, p. 21; and also in The Burr Genealogy, by Charles Burr Todd. Marriages and baptisms of descendants will be found in Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723 - 1779, (indexed), and likewise in those of Smithtown as published in vols. 42 and 44 of The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record. For record of Moses Blachly we are indebted to Mrs. Irving S. Sammis of Huntington, whose article on Dr. Blachly has already been referred to as published in the Long Island Forum for January, 1940.

The descendants of Ebenezer and Sarah (Jarvis) Blachly were given by Mrs. Raymond E. Baldwin, of 8663 109th St., Richmond Hill, New York. See also Records of the Inscriptions in the Old Cemetery at Huntington, New York, published in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 31, pp. 114+, 142+; The Pearsall Family, vol. III, p. 1,350.

In the lists of names of persons for whom marriage licenses were granted, and published by the Secretary of State of New York, a license is quoted that Rhody Blassly, so-called, was to marry Zebulun Rogers; this was issued 8 November, 1781. However the First Presybterian church of Smithtown registers show that he was Zachariah Rogers and that this marriage took place 25 November, 1781. It is true that the wife of Zebulun Rogers was Rhoda, but her maiden name is given as Lefferts. See also ROGERS.

We wish to correct an error made by ourselves in The National Genealogical Society Quarterly, vol. XXV, p. 44, wherein we listed Frances Blachley as the youngest child of Daniel Blachley. She was not his daughter, and we were misinformed concerning her connections. See under the next and preceding generation for further discussion.

Daniel Blachley or Blachly was the son of

9. EBENEZER BLACHLEY or BLACKLY
m. JANE

He was born at Guilford, Connecticut, in 1677. The date of his baptism remains unreported.

He had removed to Huntington, New York before 2 July, 1700, when he was witness to a deed of land at Santapeague.He purchased the house, barn, orchard, home lot, fences, etc. of Ephraim Kellum 10 December, 1701, and which had been the farmstead of his father Robert Kellum; however Robert Kellum leased back a tenement in his erstwhile home for services to be rendered,on the 18th of the same month. In these deeds Ebenezer's surname is given as Blacksely and Blacly.

He was a witness again 29 October, 1705, and on the 25th of either January or February, 1709/10, the trustees of the town of Huntington met to grant lands to "Eb. Blacly."He was a husbandman and smith, but held no civic offices in Huntington. In 1712 Ebenezer Blackly was resident within the confines of Queens Village, for on 2 and 3 February of 1712 Henry Lloyd anticipates his village and county rate by listing him for it.

He died either at Queens Village or Huntington, New York in 1729/30. His will, dated 10 January, 1729/30, was proved 17 February, 1729/30. It is filed in the Hall of Records in New York city, unrecorded will original.

It is evident from the will that Ebenezer Blachley married twice. The name of his first wife is unknown; his second, who was named Jane, survived him. After his death she married in the First church at Huntington, 24 May, 1733 to Joseph Platt senior, widower. The date of her death is not found, and her maiden name remains unproved.

Issue, by first wife:

1. Ebenezer, born probably at Huntington, New York, 9 October, 1709, died at The Ponds, near Pompton, New Jersey; married 1, in the First church at Easthampton, New York, 9 February, 1730-1731 to Hannah Miller of that place. He is said to have married 2, Mary Miller; 3, Francis; 4, Estill; 5, Nichols. He was a general practitioner and M. D. Issue, presumably by the first wife, although this is not certain:
   i. Miller, who married and had issue.
   ii. Ebenezer, a physician, born 13 February, 1735, surgeon in the war of the American revolution. He married 19 June, 1758 to Mary, daughter of Henry Wick and had issue, among others:
      A. William, M. D., married Sarah van Sickle.
      B. Mary, married Hezekiah Stites Woodruff.

   There were probably other children.
2. Elizabeth, married 1, in the First church at Huntington, New York, 14 December, 1727 to Timothy Titus, son of Abiel and Esther Titus; married 2, as his widow, 2 October, 1738, Ephraim Kellum. See KELLUM.
3. Ann. She ordered from Henry Lloyd in 1731 under the account of Thomas Rogers. No further record.

Issue, by second wife:

4. Daniel, married Prudence Weiser. See page 312.
5. Benjamin, living at the time his father made his will; no further record.
6. (probably) Frances, who married in the First church at Huntington, New York, 25 October, 1756 to John Wood, widower, of Huntington South. Further connections not traced.

NOTES

In The Town Records of Huntington, Including Babylon, as edited by Charles R. Street, II, p. 270, is recorded the name of Ebenezer Blachly, so-called, for the first time. There are other but infrequent references to him in this volume (p. 291, 302). In the books of Deeds on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Huntington, and not printed, indentures are recorded from Ephraim Kellum and his father to Ebenezer Blacksely, 10 December, 1701 (I, 413); between Ebenezer Blacly and Robert Kellum, 18 December, 1701 (I, 417); from Thomas Wickes junior to Ebenezer Blackley, 1 May, 1712, for a valuable sum land adjoining that of Joseph Udall in the East Neck (II, 315); from Joseph Wood, weaver of Huntington, to Ebenezer Blatchley, blacksmith, 5 May, 1719 (II, 317); from William Jarvis to Ebenezer Blachly, 15 December, 1710 (II, 319); and from Jonas Higbie to Ebenezer Blachly, 24 November, 1719, for a sum (II, p. 327).

The executors of the will of Ebenezer Blackly were Edward Burling (Quaker) and Daniel Lewis. One of the executors of the will of his son Daniel was Joseph Lewis, and from this and other records of associations of this kind we are of the opinion that the descendants of Jonathan and Jemima (Whitehead) Lewis were of some relationship to Ebenezer Blachley. It is suggested that Jane, the second wife of Ebenezer Blachley, was a daughter of John and Jane (?Skidmore) (Whitehead) Ingersoll, as there was such a daughter and of the proper age. Jane Ingersoll was born 9 June, 1676 at Huntington, New York. This, however, is without proof at this writing. See also LEWIS, and WHITEHEAD OF HUNTINGTON.

The abstract of the will of Ebenezer Blackly was published in The Collections of The New York Historical Society, vol. 11 of Abstracts of Wills, pp. 136/7.

Francis E. Woodruff in his Woodruffs of New Jersey discusses the connections in some part of Ebenezer Blachly junior; and for other references The Account Books of Henry Lloyd, in the library of the Long Island Historical Society, have been used. See also the references under Daniel Blachley. We have assigned to Ebenezer Blachley another child, Frances, although she is not mentioned in his will; from the date of her marriage it is difficult to assign her connection to this family in any other manner.

Ebenezer Blachley or Blackly was the son of

10. AARON BLACHLEY or BLACKSLY 904
m. MARY DODD daughter of Daniel Dodd and Mary

He was born in 1644 at New Haven, Connecticut, and baptised at that place 1 July, 1651.

His early residences are traced with some difficulty, as his father is variously reported as of East Hartford, New Haven and Branford, and also of Newark, New Jersey in the next several years. He signed the covenant to remove to New Jersey, & is stated to have been one of the founders of that town. In Newark he was appointed to make and maintain gates and to announce (warn) town meetings, but he was transient there. He had returned to Connecticut before 9 January, 1675, when his son Daniel was recorded as born at Guilford.

His home was on the present Whitfield street in Guilford, and he also held two acres west of Dirty Swamp in Branford, in 1686. Aaron Blatchly and his wife Sarai, so spelled, were embodied in the church covenant at Branford as "adjoined", 7 March, 1687/8, and it would seem from this that he was then at Branford. There is good reason to believe however, that he resided for the most part at Guilford and had returned there (if he had removed) before 20 December, 1692.

Aaron Blachly of Guilford died 3 August, 1699 and was presumably buried at that place. His will or administration has not been reported.

He married 1, in February 1664/5 and probably at Branford, to Mary Dodd, who had died before 1686. He married 2, Sarah (Potter) Foote, widow of Robert Foote, born in 1639, baptised at New Haven, Connecticut 22 August, 1641, daughter of William and Frances Potter.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Thomas, born in 1665/6, died at Guilford, Connecticut, 20 December, 1692, unmarried.
2. Susannah, born in 1667, died 19 January, 1728; married at Guilford, 8 October, 1684 to Ebenezer French. He died 3 May, 1706.
3. Mary, born in 1668, married Nathaniel Allis.

NOTES

Ralph D. Smyth published an outline of this family in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 58, pp. 357+. One serious error made in this compilation is that Ebenezer Blachley is credited with a son Joseph, born in 1713, died 19 January, 1798. This Joseph Blachley married Esther Collins; she died 5 May, 1802, aged 86. It is possible that this Joseph was son of Joseph and Mehitabel (Kealer) Blachley (which see); however very certainly he was no son of Ebenezer Blachley of Huntington, New York from the references available to us. In Memorials of Roderick White and his wife Lucy Blakeslee, by Andrew C. White, he states on page 9 among other things that Aaron Blachley was properly Blakeslee; this identity of two surnames has not been proved. He cites further the connections of Ebenezer Blachley of the third generation incorrectly by saying that the latter removed to New Hampshire. This Ebenezer Blakeslee of whom he writes is probably not even related to the present family in any immediate sense.

In a MS Biographical Sketches of the Founders of Newark, New Jersey, by Mrs. William Archibald Sayre (Katharine Schuyler Harrison), librarian of the Nova Caesarea chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is a summary record of the activities of Aaron Blachley while in Newark. Vital records have been published in the American Genealogist, vol. IX, p. 31 (the joining in the covenant at Branford of Aaron and Sarah Blachley);vol. X, p. 178 (records of connections of Samuel and Abigail (Finch) Blachley); vol. XIII, under Guilford Vital Statistics in Town Records, Book A, (indexed as published); and the same, vol. XV.

Aaron Blachley or Blacksley was the son of 11. THOMAS BLATCHLEY or BLACKSLEY 1,808; 1,840

m. SUSANNA

He was born probably in Hertfordshire, England, about 1615.

He sailed from London in The Hopewell in 1635 for New England, then aged 20; and in the family of Thomas and Mary Tredwell. These emigrants had certificates from the minister of St. Giles, Cripplegate in London, that they were conformable to the church of England, but their names do not appear on the registers of this parish.

Thomas Blacksley, as he is usually first recorded, is next reported in Hartford, Connecticut four years later in 1639. He was in Connecticut, however in 1637 when he served in the Pequot war, although from what locality is not stated. He held land on the east side of the Connecticut river at Hocks anum. He was transient at Hartford, however and had removed to New Haven before 4 January, 164$\frac{3}{4}$, where he was engaged in marine haulage. On that date at a Court held in New Haven he was charged with having allowed a sack with three bushels of meal belonging to Benjamin Ling and similarly a bushel of meal belonging to Francis Newman to be carried to Long Island. He was required to give satisfaction, and went forth from the judgment of the Court bitterly criticising its alleged injustice to him; whereupon they fined him further 20s and he was "comitted during the magistrates pleasure". Nevertheless on 8 February, 164$\frac{3}{4}$ the Court ordered Thomas French to bear half the loss charged against "Blackley" as he was the cause of the mistake in the sacks.

At this last Court Blatchley was granted an attachment against Francis Smyth; and on 1 July, 1644 he took the oath of fidelity. During this time he seems not to have prospered too well, for on 2 January, 1644/5 the Court remitted part of his fine on account of his poverty. Two years later he cleared himself with the quaint confession acknowledging the local theocracy: "Thomas Blatchley haveing formerly giuen the court some offence, & neglecting the imadge of God in magistrates, & goeing away soe irreverently and sayeing he would have justice in another place if he had it not here, w^{ch} now lyeing on his conscience, desirs to cleare himselfe, wherewth the court was satisfied".

In the next year, perhaps because of this incident, he had removed to Branford as a proprietor and founder; he was definitely recorded there 1 December, 1645. He shared in a division of meadow at that place 7 July, 1646 and generally improved his circumstances; in 1653 his business included also the transport of cattle and other livestock for hire.

Thomas Blatchley or Blacksley was one of a committee of eleven chosen at the first meeting at Newark, New Jersey 21 May 1666, to organize this settlement, but was at Branford when on 30 October, 1666 he signed the Fundamental Agreement relating to the Newark settlement. He was elected a deputy to the General Court of Connecticut 9 May, 1667, and was reelected in October, 1668; October, 1669; May, 1670; May and October, 1671 and May and October, 1672. In 1668 and 1669 he was absent from the Court, perhaps because he may have lived with one of his sons at Guilford. On 23 April, 1668 he was to be admitted as an inhabitant of Guilford "if he can provide himself a place to dwell in." How it was possible for him to be elected a deputy from Branford if a resident in Guilford we do not know, but he may have held his homestead in Branford while sojourning with either of his sons. In May, 1670 he was granted 60 acres of land for his services in the Pequot war.

He sold his property at Branford, 16 April, 1673 to William Maltby and seems to have removed to Boston, Massachusetts, unless he was there on business shortly before his death. He died within the next year for the nuncupative will was presented by the testimony of John and Martha Mellowes, 30 January, 167$\frac{3}{4}$. The widow Susanna, then called aged, was made administratrix of the estate, of which she received two thirds. The administration was confirmed at New Haven 12 June, 1674, the inventory having been made on the 1st of the same month.

Susanna married 2, Richard Bristow, who died in December, 1677. Her own nuncupative will was made at Guilford, Connecticut 7 September, 1680; it mentions only children by her first husband. She probably died shortly after this date. It is not known where she was buried. For a discussion of her antecedents see the NOTES below.

Issue:

1. Aaron, married 1, Mary Dodd; 2, Sarah (Potter) Foote. See page 323.

His wife was Susannah Bishop, daughter of John Bishop, whom he married in 1675; she died at East Guilford in October, 1729. Issue:

   - viii. Joshua, born at Guilford, 14 June 1692, died 31 March, 1742; a resident of East Guilford, Connecticut. He married 15 November, 1721 to Mary Field, daughter of Ebenezer Field; she died 9 February, 1793. Issue.

ix. Abiel, born 7 February, 1694; died unmarried 15 January, 1763.

3. Abigail, born probably at Branford, Connecticut, and probably older than her brother Moses. She married about 1660 or 1665 to Edward Ball of Branford; and Newark, New Jersey. He was still living at Newark, 2 June, 1724. Issue.

4. Miriam, born at Branford, Connecticut, 1 March, 165-, perhaps 1652/3. She married at Branford 3 February, 1669/70 to Samuel Pond of Windsor, son of Samuel and Sarah Pond, born at Windsor 4 March, 1648, died 30 January, 1718. Issue.

NOTES

Hotten's Emigrants to America (p. 110), paraphrasing Samuel F. Drake's Founders of New England, (p. 41) gives the record of the emigration of Thomas Blatchley. We have already referred to Ralph D. Smyth's article on the Blatchley-Blachly family in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 58; see also the same publication, vol. 3, p. 153, and vol. 89, p. 174. In A Catalog of the Puritan Settlers of Connecticut, by Hinman, is given one of the earlier published summaries of the connections of Thomas Blatchley at p. 240; and since the foregoing, references to the family have been published in The Woodruffs of New Jersey, by Francis E. Woodruff and in the Ancestry of Thomas Jefferson Wood, by Charles Carroll Gardner. The last gives also further sources, including The Collections of the Connecticut Historical Society, vol. 14, p. 324; the American Genealogist, vol. XII, pp. 112-114; Newark Town Records, pp. 1, 2; Connecticut Colony Records, vol. II, p. 59, 184; New Haven Probate Records, vol. 1, part 2, p. 77.

Pope in his Pioneers of Massachusetts mentions the nuncupative will of Thomas Blatchley, p. 52; his legal difficulties are recorded in Records of the Colony and Plantation of New Haven from 1638 to 1649 by Charles J. Hoadley, pp. 123, 124, 138, 152, 271; and in the Ancient Town Records of New Haven as published by the New Haven Colony Historical Society, and edited by Franklin Bowditch Dexter, vol. I, (1649 - 1662) he is indexed to pp. 190, 201, 262, 308, 332, 420, 512, 518, 524 and 525. The descendants of his daughter Miriam have been given in A Genealogical Record of Samuel Pond and his Descendants, by Daniel Stree-tor Pond, brought up to date in the New Haven Genealogical Ma-gazine, p. 1454.

It has been supposed that Samuel Blakeslee, a pioneer who settled at New Haven, was a brother of Thomas Blatchley or Blacksley. While this may be correct, contemporary record gives no support to this presumed connection. Samuel Blakeslee was apparently not associated with Thomas Blatchley, and did not emigrate with him; he was a resident of New Haven where he died 17 May, 1672. Blakeslee married 3 December 1650 at New Haven to Hannah Potter, daughter of John and Elizabeth Potter, and a list of certain of their descendants will be found in The New Haven Genealogical Magazine, vol. I, under Blakeslee. There has been some misidentification of members of the Blakeslee family with those descended of Thomas Blatchley.

The late Nathan G. Pond of Milford in his MSS on the genealogical connections of the settlers of Milford, and of associated families, identified the wife of Thomas Blatchley as Susanna Ball. The proof of this assertion has not been found; and the presumption which has appeared in print that she was the daughter of Alling Ball is quite unfounded. At this writing her maiden name remains quite unproved, but there is a clue to her connections, perhaps, in the will of Samuel Roos or Rose of Newark, New Jersey.

In the Archives of New Jersey, First Series, vol. XXI, at p. 145 is given an abstract of the will of Samuel Rose as it was recorded in Liber C of East Jersey Deeds, p. 180. This is as follows:

> 1698 - May 31. Will of Samuel Roos (Rose) of Newark. Wife Mary, cousins Hannah Brant, Sarah Moris, Abigall Ball, Phebie Day, daughters-in-law (probably step-daughters) Abigail Bunell, Hannah Carter. The wife was executrix with George Harrison as assistant. The witnesses were Robert Young, Jonathan Sergint, Jonathan Sergint junior. Proved Nov. 24, 1701.
> 1701 - Dec. 3. Letters of administration on the estate of Samuel Roos dec'd granted to his widow Mary.

Samuel Rose was the son of Robert and Margery Rose of Wethersfield, Stratford and Branford, Connecticut, and was born about 1625, presumably at Ipswich, Suffolk. The New Haven Genealogical Magazine states at page 1520 that Samuel Rose married Mary Tompkins and resided at Newark, New Jersey; no issue is given, and it is presumed from the will that there were none.

The chief interest this will has for us is that Abigall Ball is called the "cousin" of Samuel Rose. If this is Abigail (Blatchley) Ball, she would have been either the niece or cousin (perhaps somewhat distantly) of Samuel Rose or his wife. We have not been successful in explaining this relationship at this writing, but in order to assist the interested reader, give what is available.

The "cousin" Hannah Brant may have been the wife or daughter of William Brant of Elizabethtown, a cordwainer, who made his will 21 January, 1708/9; it was proved 13 May, 1725 and recorded in Liber A of East Jersey Deeds, p. 343. The children by his wife Hannah were John, William, Samuel, David, Margaret, Hannah, Sarah and Rachel. The executors were the wife and John Cooper of Newark; witnesses were Edward Riggs, Samuel Lamb and Samuel Whitehead.

The "cousin" Phoebe Day is believed to have been the widow of Paul Day, son of George Day of Newark, when on 19 November, 1712 she filed bond as the administratrix of her husband's estate. Nathaniel Ward and John Morris, both of the same place, were fellow bondsmen. This John Morris may have been the husband of the Sarah Morris whom Samuel Rose also calls his cousin; she is otherwise not conclusively found.

The "daughters-in-law", whom we consider the children of Mary (Tompkins) Rose by a previous husband, are provisionally identified as Abigail, wife of Nathaniel Bunnell and Hannah, probably the wife of John, son of Nicholas Carter, the supposed only member of this family to remain in America.

The maiden names of none of these "cousins" except perhaps Abigail Ball have been found, and because of the indefiniteness of the term cousin as applied at the time, we have not been able to explain Samuel Rose's relationship to these families. Rose was an approximate contemporary of Thomas and Susanna Blatchley, as he was born in 1625. If Abigail (Blatchley) Ball were a niece of Samuel Rose, (which is within the meaning of the term cousin as used) it would require that either Rose had married a sister of Thomas Blatchley or of his wife Susanna; or that Susanna Blatchley was conversely a sister of Samuel Rose or his wife Mary Tompkins. This is further complicated by the possibility that both or either of these men may have had more than one wife, although this seems relatively remote.

Robert Rose left ten children, as is known from emigrant lists and his will, but he had no daughter Susanna, and no relationship to Thomas Blatchley is yet apparent. Michael or Micah Tompkins of Milford had children born too late to admit that Susannah Blatchley could have been his daughter, although his eldest daughter Mary, born in 1643, was the wife of Samuel Rose. There is an alternative solution possible in this connection, however; that is, that Abigail Ball, cousin of Samuel Rose, may have been a second wife of Edward Ball, and a relative of Michael Tompkins These suggestions prove nothing, but they may be of some help in further research.

Thomas Blatchley has been called a native of Suffolk and also of Wales, although this last is thoroughly improbable. We have not been able to find the basis for the statement that he came from Suffolk. Whenever a detailed research is made in England, however for his antecedents, the following clues should not be overlooked:

In The Herts Genealogist and Antiquary, vol. I, p. 336, is given the abstract of the will of Thomas Blakesley of Buntingford in Hertfordshire, > Register Raymond, f. 160. Thomas Blakesley of Buntyngforde in the parish of Widiall. (Dat. 22 March 1570). Legacies to the poor of Widiall, Laiston and Aspeden; Eldest son Thos. (under 21); Lands in Eppinge and Little Parndon, co. Essex; wife Johane; son William; house in Buntingford in the parish of Aspedon (sic) now in tenure of John Lillie; land in Downeall felde alias Rowdall Felde, Stonyfelde, barns bought of William Sparke deed; daus. Susaña, Marie, Joane and Eliz.; Thomas son of my brother John Blakesley, deceased; Two closes in Aspenden, one at Howegrene and the other at the brewaie by a close late Thomas Cowper alias Wheler; my mother Elizabeth Blakeslie; godch^{n} Thos. Ferrisse, Edw. Water, Thomas Hemingway, Edw. Battesforde and John Goodman; wife executrix; Nich^{s} Awgar and Tho. Haggar overseers. Wits., Hughe Bowman curate, Robt. Aire, Nich. Awgar. (Pr. at Ware ult May 1571).

This family of Blakesley were at Aspenden or Aspeden in the hundred of Edwinstree in 1545 when Thomas Blakesley was listed in a subsidy roll "pro anticipacione" for "g vs". In a Feet of Fines for Michaelmas Term, 5 and 6 Philip and Mary (1558) Thomas Blakesley appears against Robert Chadwyck, gent., in an action relating to a messuage and garden in Buntyngford. The inference is that Blakesley of this generation removed from Aspenden to Buntingford in this year. As the parish registers of this locality have not been available to us, and have not been searched, nothing more can be offered at this writing.

It would be very helpful in completing the connections of this family if the bible records of members of the earlier generations could be published or reported to us. Especially desirable would be the bible records of Daniel Blachley who married Prudence Weiser, and of Ebenezer Blachley or Blacksly, his father.

The ancestry of Thomas Blatchley or Blacksley is unknown.

7. FREELOVE BLACHLEY 115
m. JAMES HAFF or HUFF son of Simon Haff and Jemima Oakes

She was born at Upper Dix Hills, town of Huntington, New York about 1758/9, and baptised in the First church at that place 11 September, 1764.

She married at a place not found, perhaps at her own home, about 1778 to James Haff of Dix Hills; they lived not far from the homestead of her father. She maintained this farmstead until the death of her husband in 1801, and probably several years after; in later years she lived with her son Daniel Haff at Sayville, New York, but at the time of her death was a resident of Bayshore, New York. Here she resided with her daughter and son-in-law Joshua and Experience (Haff) Wicks. Joshua Wicks was also her nephew.

Freelove Blachley died at Bayshore, New York 12 April, 1826, aged 68. She was buried at Commack, New York. There was probably no will or administration of record.

For descendants, see HAFF, #114.

NOTES

In the Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723-1779, and edited by Moses L. Scudder, the baptism of Freelove Blachley is given on page 54, with others of her sisters and brothers.

Misidentified as Experience Blachley in family record as given to the writer by Mrs. Josiah Preston Smith of Islip, New York, she was more conclusively identified by Mrs. Henry Hand of Bayshore. The latter was born Martha Melissa Wicks, daughter of James Wicks, son in turn of Joshua and Experience (Haff) Wicks, and the name of James Haff was preserved in family record as James Wicks was stated to have been named for his [illegible] grandfather. It was also known that Joshua Wicks and his wife Experience Haff were cousins, although the family was not aware of the degree of relationship.

In stating that Freelove died at Bayshore we must be understood that she died in the locality which later was to become that village. Her son-in-law Joshua Wicks held at one time a great part of his property at that place.

Statements that Freelove was buried at Long Swamp in the town of Huntington are incorrect; likewise the inscription on her gravestone has been repeatedly misread as Freelove Hubbs. There was no such Freelove "Hubbs".

Freelove Blachley was the daughter of Daniel Blachley and his wife Prudence Weiser. See #226 and #230, page 312, First Line.

9. AERTJE THEUNIS BOGAERT 395
m. THEODORUS POLHEMUS son of Johannes Theodorus Polhemus and Catharina van Werven

She was born at the Wallabout, Brooklyn (then Breuckelen) in the New Netherlands in December, 1655, and baptised in the Reformed Dutch church at Manhattan, New Amsterdam, 19 December, 1655; sponsor, Magdaleentje van Swanevelt.

She was married to Theodorus Polhemus in the Reformed Dutch church in Flatbush, Kings county, New York, 14 October, 1677 and where they resided until about 1683. In that year the family removed to Jamaica, New York, where they were among the earliest members of the Dutch congregation.

Aertje Theunis Bogaert was still living at the time the will of her husband was proved, 22 May, 1722, but probably died shortly afterward, as she disappears from church record. No will or administration of her effects is found.

For descendants, see POLHEMUS, #394.

NOTES

The baptism of Aertje Theunis Bogaert (that is, Aertje, daughter of Theunis Bogaert) is published in The Collections of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, vols. 1, 2 and 3, the Records of the Reformed Dutch church of New York city, as indexed. The Dutch church records of Flatbush were published in the Year Book of the Holland Society for 1897; for other references see under her father. In his will her husband called her "Hertie". See also The Early Settlers of Kings County, New York, by Tunis G. Bergen, pp. 40+.

Aertje Theunis Bogaert was the daughter of 10. THEUNIS GYSBERTSZEN BOGAERT 79?

m. SARA JORIS (RAPALJE) BERGEN daughter of Joris Janszen Rapalje and Catalyntje Tricou, and widow of Hans Hanssen (Bergen)

He was born about 1625/30 and probably at Heikoop in the province of Utrecht.

From his own testimony in 1687 when he asserted that he had been in the Colony for 35 years, it is indicated that Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert came to the New Netherlands in 1652. He was at first a sailor, and resided in New Amsterdam when on shore. It was during this time that he became acquainted with Sara, the wife of Hans Hanssen (Bergen); and when her husband died shortly before 30 May, 1654, Bogaert lost no time in courting the fairly well-to-do widow.

He married her either in the latter part of 1654 or early in 1655, and forthwith removed to the Wallabout in Brooklyn. He undoubtedly lived on the farm which had been that of Hans Hanssen's; and later claimed this property as his own, although the basis for his title is not evident.

After the English had conquered the New Netherlands, the inhabitants were obliged to accept new patents for their farms. As a consequence Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert took out a new patent on the 200 morgen formerly owned by Hans Hanssen, in his own name and this in spite of the rights of Hanssen's children therein. At least no record has ever been found of their possession of any portion of their father's estate, nor evidence of any compensation made to them by Bogaert. It is possible, however, although not very probable, that compensation may have been made, and that the written evidence has disappeared in the lapse of time. By this confirmatory patent, dated 5 April, 1667, the whole property excepting that tract known as the General Johnson Homestead Farm, remained in Bogaert's possession, and was divided among his heirs.

On 1 March, 1660, Bogaert (then a resident at the Wallabout) with others who were his neighbors, petitioned the Director General of the New Netherlands for permission to form a village "on the margin of the river, between the lands of said Bogaert and Kip, so that," as they expressed it, "we may be in sight of the Manhatans, or Fort Amsterdam." The position selected was probably the elevated point of land which jutted into the river about the foot of South Fourth street in the present Eastern District of Brooklyn, and which was designated in the earliest records as the "Keike" or "lookout". The petition was granted to the extent that a block-house was planned, and the petitioners were directed to settle within its protection.

The settlers were slow to remove to this locality, and on 10 February, 1661 the residents of the Wallabout were notified that they must comply with the previous orders of the Council against isolated dwellings, and that they must remove to the village of Breuckelen erected in the previous year.

To this Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert with Joris Janszen Rapalje, Jan Joriszen Rapalje and others objected, and requested that they be allowed to construct a block-house for their defense on the point of Joris Janszen Rapalje's land, that is, on the easterly side of the Wallabout. On 3 March, 1661 the petitioners "all residents or landholders in or about the Waale-bogt" set forth in their petition that in March, 1660 it had been decreed that a village and block-house "should be laid out on the height at the end of Kip's land" and that they had been ordered to remove there. They found the place wholly unfit for the purpose "partly because the woodland thereabout, being stony, is not suitable for arable land" and "little or no crops can be, apparently, expected from it, as it cannot be ploughed, in consequence of the large number of rocks and hollows thereabouts; wherefore, it is impossible, even by the hardest labor, to obtain a scanty living there. Moreover, in consequence of the uncommon height of the land there, it is impossible to find good and sufficient water to make a well." The streams in the neighborhood were mostly dried up in summer, and during the winter season the roads were often very "hard and pointed by the frost, or deep and muddy with heavy rains, or well-nigh impassable from snow, so that, when people wish to water their cattle, they are obliged to fetch the water in barrels from Theunis Gysbertse well, which is a most fatiguing and injurious business for farmers, both in summer and winter;" a drudgery, in fact, which the petitioners state they "daily see performed by their neighbors with a weeping eye". This with other arguments prevailed with the Director and Council.

On 29 May, 1661 Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert joined the Dutch church at Brooklyn, his wife acting as his sponsor. At the time he stated that he was from Heikoop, which is two miles from Schoonderwoert, the indicated ancestral home of this family. Bogaert was active in the affairs of this church and was elected deacon for the Wallabout district 19 March, 1663; a year later, 27 February, 1664 he was elected an elder. He was still occupying this office in May, 1670.

On 24 April, 1660 one Theunis Gysbertszen was appointed Schepen or magistrate for Amersfoort and Midwout. If this was Bogaert he must have held property in these localities. Less that two years later, 19 March, 1663, Bogaert was definitely appointed a magistrate for Brooklyn; this leads us to think that he was likewise the earlier appointee. He was redesignated to this office 18 August, 1673. In his civic activities he represented Breuckelen (Brooklyn) at the Hempstead convention of 1665, and was also a patentee named in Richard Nicolls' patent to the town. As a magistrate from Brooklyn he was a member of the convention of 26 March, 1674 at Manhattan, convened by Governor Colve to consult with him and his Council concerning the interests of the reconstituted New Netherlands (New Orange).

On 20 August, 1675 Bogaert was listed as a resident of Brooklyn, with 3 polls, 4 horses, 4 yearlings, 2 oxen, 14 cows & other stock; and 40 morgens of land. He seems to have been the equivalent of the squire of the village, and was relatively well off. He is listed in the tax records of 26 September, 1683 and also in the 1698 census. At the latter time he had transferred the larger portion of his property to his son Gysbert. He was then living alone, and it is therefore probable that his second wife had died. Further conclusive record of him has not been found.

Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert married 1, about 1654/5 to Sara Rapaljo, widow of Hans Hanssen (Bergen). After her death he married 2, Geertje Jans, widow of Dirck Dey; she had presumably died before 1698. The date of the second marriage is reported to have been 1687, although there are conflicting allegations as to the day and month.

He took the oath of allegiance at Brooklyn as a native of that place, in 1687; was on the assessment rolls of Brooklyn in 1693 and census of 1698, and a magistrate for Bushwick in 1707. He was probably living in 1717, but deceased shortly afterward. His wife was Jannetje, daughter of Simon van Arsdalen, whom he married 16 April, 1689. Issue:

i. Theunis, married 20 October, 1711 to Catharine, daughter of Joseph Hegeman; he resided from 1718 to 1730 on Staten Island. At the time he made his will, 2 June, 1767, he resided at the Wallabout in Brooklyn. The will was proved 27 April, 1768. Issue:

NOTES

The late Tunis G. Bergen compiled a great deal of the information given herein relative to Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert, found in his Early Settlers of Kings County, New York, at p. 40+; and likewise in The Bergen Genealogy, second edition (1876), p. 53+. We have referred to the Brinckerhoff Genealogy, by Richard Brinckerhoff; The Year Book of the Holland Society for 1898, wherein are printed the Reformed Dutch church records of Brooklyn; to the baptisms of the Reformed Dutch church in New York city, as published in the Collections of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, vols. 1, 2, 3; the Documentary History of the State of New York, vol. IV, p. 95; and also to the 1867 edition of Henry R. Stiles' History of Brooklyn, New York, vol. I, pp. 81,90,91, 94, 113-5, 200-3, 403, 422, 425-6.

In The New Netherlands Register, edited by Dingman Versteeg, there is an article on the connections of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert in vol. 1, nos. 6 and 7, pp. 93 and those following. This gives information which we have used in the foregoing narrative, and also the following statements appear:

> His father (that is, of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert) may have been the Gysbert Cornelissen Bogaerdt (sic) who with his brother Cornelis Cornelissen Boogaerdt had inherited property at Schoonderwaert (sic) from their deceased parents Cornelis Teunissen Bogaert and Beelitie Cornelis. Gysbert, at the time, was located at Catskill while his brother Cornelis had settled near Beverwyck.
>
> .....It would appear that besides being engaged in farming, Teunis Ghysbertsen Boogaerdt (sic) also operated a sawmill, preparing lumber for export. At least, on August 29, 1662, he sued Captain Pieter Jansen Emilius of the Hope for the price of three hundred clapboards, which the Captain and his cooper had contracted for, besides the three hundred which had been delivered on board and paid for. The captain stated that he had purchased the boards on condition that he could ship them. As the Hope already had a full cargo, Captain Emilius consequently refused to accept them. The testimony of the cooper showed that the timber had been bought unconditionally, and Boogaerdt won his suit. The Captain was condemned to receive, and to pay for, the clapboards.

At p. 99:

> Gysbert Bogaert of Catskill.....in 1661 conveyed to Cornelis Bogaert of Fort Orange "a child's just portion" or one quarter of the estate of their deceased father. February 9, 1699, Helmer Janse, stepson of Gysbert Bogaert, petitioned for a part of a tract of land lying on the north side of the Catskill at its entrance into the Hudson river, formerly owned by his stepfather. This would indicate that Gysbert had died about this time, and that, probably, he left no children. The Indian deed for part of the above landwas dated June 26, 1684.

Cornelis Bogaert probably had at least three sons. The oldest, Hendrick Cornelisse Van den Bogaert born at Hypick (?is this meant for Heikoop) in the district of Vianen,and living at Kingston, married in 1679 to Jannetie Martens Esselstyn of Claverack. They had children, and became the ancestors of one Ulster County Bogaert family. His brother Jacob Cornelisz Van den Bogaerd who married Jannetje Quackenbush, appears to have settled near Albany.

Gerrit, another probable son of Cornelis, also had a child baptised at Kingston.

Our examination of the connections of this Gysbert Corneliszen Bogaert leadsto a definite conviction that he died without issue and therefore could not have been the father of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert. Even had he had issue, he was clearly a close contemporary of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert, and was most certainly not old enough to have been the latter's father.

In Genealogical Notes of New York and New England Families, compiled by Sebastian Visscher Talcott (1883) under the name of the Bogert family he mentions this Gysbert Corneliszen Bogaert. Mr. Talcott states that he was born in Holland, married Mary, daughter of Jan Jochems Kalder and was father of the Theunis of the present connection. It is doubtful if more misidentifications are to be found in one sentence. There was no such person as Jan Jochems Kalder; and Magdalena Waele, widow of Jochem Kalder or Kaljer, married as his widow to Gysbert Theuniszen van Barneveldt. We refer to Magdalena Waele because she is the only connection of a Kalder who could possibly have been of an earlier generation than our Theunis Bogaert; and also because the name of her second husband, excluding the surname, might have been confused with that of Gysbert Corneliszen Bogaert. See COLYER.

It will be observed that a witness or sponsor at the baptism of Gysbert Theuniszen Bogaert, son of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert, was Jan Loewen. In our opinion this is Jan Louwe Bogaert, otherwise Jan Laurenszen Bogaert, and we think him a cousin of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert. He is the only Bogaert not obviously connected with the present family who was associated with it. In The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 67, page 56, there is a short article by Dirk P. De Young entitled "Laurens Thonisz Bogaert Maeckt Zyn Testament". Interpreted, this is to the effect that Laurence, the son of Anthony Bogaert, makes his will; and further that he made it in Schoonderwoert, Province of South Holland, 3 May, 1667. The will, according to Mr. De Young, is in the Judicial Archives of Leerdam, deposited with the General State Archives at 'a Gravenhage, Holland, File F, xxvi, fol. 37. It makes bequests to Cornelis Janszen Roscam, son of Jan Roscam, who was his son-in-law; to his eldest son Cornelis Laurenszen Bogaert, his daughter Mary Laurens, and his son Jan Laurens, then residing in De Nieuw Nederlandt (this is Jan Louwe Bogaert); to his son-in-law Cornelius Stam of Boecop. There were other children, but not mentioned by name.

From Notarial Records filed at Albany, New York, it is evidently correct that Gysbert Corneliszen Bogaert and Cornelis Corneliszen Bogaert were sons of one Cornelis Theuniszen Bogaert of the village of Schoonderwoert, and his wife Belitje Cornelis. The latter were deceased in the Netherlands before 1661 as the son Gysbert, then living in Catskill, conveyed to his brother Cornelis, then residing in Albany, a child's just portion; being one quarter of the homestead in Schoonderwoert which came to him by the death of their father who had died at that place and about that time.

As both Laurens Theuniszen Bogaert and Cornelis Theuniszen Bogaert were of Schoonderwoert, and contemporary, it is reasonable to indicate that they were brothers. Further, as Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert came from a settlement but two scant miles removed, a hypothesis that his father was Gysbert Theuniszen Bogaert and brother of Laurens and Cornelis not only explains the repetition of significant names in the family, but likewise allows Jan Louwe Bogaert to have been a first cousin of the present Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert. It must be borne in mind, nevertheless that this is not proved. This sets up, then, that one Theunis Bogaert was presumably of Schoonderwoert in the Netherlands and born say about 1570. He married and had issue:

1. Laurens Theuniszen, referred to above by Mr. De Young.
2. Cornelis Theuniszen, married Belitje Cornelis, and father of Gysbert Corneliszen and Cornelis Corneliszen Bogaert of Catskill and Albany, respectively.
3. Gysbert Theuniszen of Heikoop, born say about 1600, the supposed father of Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert of the Wallabout and Brooklyn, New York.

This will correct the pedigree as given by Mr. Talcott in Genealogical Notes of New York and New England Families, pp. 22 and those following; and likewise the incorrect pedigree given in Some Notes on the History of the Bogaert Family in Canada, by Marshall C. Bogart, pp. 9 and those following.

Theunis Gysbertszen Bogaert was son of Gysbert (?Theuniszen) Bogaert, Nothing further [illegible] present time.

8. CATHARINE BRASS 161
m. AARON FURMAN son of Aaron Furman and Susannah Townsend

She was born about 1702-3 at Jamaica, New York, and baptised in the Dutch church there 29 June, 1703, the sponsors being the paternal grandparents, Pieter Hendrickse (Brass) and his wife Catharine Hendrickse.

She married about 1722 to Aaron Forman or Furman of Oyster Bay, New York, and was resident of Jamaica in 1728. She is of no further record, and probably died about 1730.

She left no will, and no administration was recorded.

For descendants, see FURMAN, #160.

NOTES

The baptism has been transcribed in the typed Dutch Church Records of Jamaica, New York, as copied by Josephine C. Frost. For other references see FURMAN and also under the preceding generations.

Catharine Brass was the daughter of

9. JOHN BRASS 322
m. SARAH LOYSE or LOSEE daughter of Pieter Janszen Loyse and Sarah Colfs

He was born at Flatbush, New York about 1680, and was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church at that place 30 September, 1680; the sponsors were Hendrick Peterszen and Lammetje Vechten. It was noted on the baptismal registers at the time that this baptism took place "on an extraordinary day, that is, Thanksgiving".

His father had removed to Jamaica, New York before 1695, and John Brass was a resident in that locality during his relatively short life. He was on the rate list to contribute to the Presbyterian church at Jamaica, 4 February, 1708/9, but does not seem to ever have been a member of that church. On 15 November, 1715 he promised a contribution towards the support of the Dutch church at Jamaica, and donated to the fund for erection of the Dutch church at Oyster Bay, New York, 15

November, 1715.

He died at Jamaica, New York, shortly before 1 October, 1722, on which date letters of administration were granted to Sarah, the widow. The administration papers were filed in Liber 7 of Wills at New York city, New York, page 335. He was probably buried at Jamaica.

John Brass married about 1701 to Sarah Loyse or Losee who survived him.

Issue:

1. Catharine, married Aaron Furman. See page 343.
2. Peter, baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New York city, 18 April, 1705, sponsors Pieter Loyse and Sara Loyse, his wife. He died young.
3. Adam, born probably at Jamaica and about 1707, known to have been of this connection from the will of his uncle, Hendrick Brass. He married in St. George's Episcopal Church at Hempstead, New York, 6 April, 1731 to Sarah Cornelius. Either he or a relative was the Adam Brass who married in the same church, 19 August, 1754 to Mary Milliken of Hempstead. Issue not traced.
4. Sarah (probably), born about 1710 at Jamaica, New York, married in St. George's Episcopal church, Hempstead, New York and as from Oyster Bay, New York, 9 February, 1731 to George Smith of Hempstead.
5. Pieter, baptised at Jamaica, New York 12 October, 1714, sponsors Jannetje Looyse, He(n)drick Brass. He married in St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead, New York, 2 November, 1735 to Elizabeth Cornelius. He was a resident of Oyster Bay, New York. Issue, probably, but not traced.
6. Jannetje, baptised at Jamaica, New York, 3 March, 1717, sponsors Simon Looyse, Grietje Looyse. No further record.
7. Johannes, baptised at Jamaica, New York, 17 May, 1719, sponsors Jacobus Caljer, Annetje Caljer. Not traced further.
8. Doortie, baptised at Jamaica, New York, 17 June, 1722; sponsor, Doortie van de Water. She married Jacob Wanshaert of Wolver Hollow, Oyster Bay, New York, and had issue (at least) (WANSHAERT):
    i. Sarah.
    ii. Jacob.
    iii. Maria.
    iv. Doortea.

    These four children were all baptised in the Dutch church at Oyster Bay, New York, 12 May, 1751, the sponsors being Frederick Reynhart, Maria van Velsen, Doortje van de Water, Sarah Bres.

Perhaps other children.

NOTES

The baptismal record of John Brass will be found in the Reformed Dutch church records of Flatbush, New York; they have been published in the Holland Society Year Book for 1897. He appears also in the Town Records of Jamaica, L. I., vol. III, as indexed. His contribution towards the Presbyterian church of Jamaica is mentioned in Two Centuries in the History of the Presbyterian Church, Jamaica, L. I., by James Madison Macdonald (1862);in the typescript Records of the Dutch Church of Jamaica, New York as copied by Josephine C. Frost, are given baptisms of most of his children. See also Henry O. Stoutenburgh's History of the Dutch Congregation of Oyster Bay, New York, p. 669; and Adventures For God, by John Sylvanus Haight; beginning with p. 151 are given, and unfortunately rather incorrectly, the registers of St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead. These should be compared with an earlier transcription published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vols. 9 through 15 inclusive.

John Brass was the son of

10. PIETER HENDRICKSZEN BRAS(S) 644
m. CATHARINA JANS (BLOEMENDAEL)

He was born either at Flatlands (New Amersfoort) or at New Amsterdam in the New Netherlands. If he was the Pieter who was baptised in the Reformed Dutch church in New Amsterdam, 7 September, 1640, sponsors Arien Pieterszen, Volkert Evertszen and Vrouwtje Gerrits, he was presumably born in New Amsterdam and about 1640. There is some reason to believe, however that this earlier son died young, and that the present Pieter Hendrickszen was born about 1648.

He was an early resident of Flatlands and on the assessment rolls of that locality in 1675. He became a member of the Reformed Dutch church there in 1677; and was a dealer in whalebone. A Peter Bresse listed in New York city in 1680 and called a cooper may also refer to him. He had removed to Jamaica, New York before 18 May, 1695, as a deed of William Creed to John Okee mentions his homestead as adjacent to property conveyed in the deed as of that date.

Pieter Hendrickszen was still living 8 February, 1718, when he with his wife Catharine conveyed property in Jamaica to their son Hendrick, for two hundred and eighty pounds. They signed the deed with their marks, in the presence of Jonathan Fish and John Gale.

No will or administration of his effects seems to have been recorded. He was certainly deceased in 1735, when the son Henry or Hendrick appears alone.

Pieter Hendrickszen Bras married about 1678 and probably at Flatbush, New York, to Catharina Jans. She apparently appears at one time as a witness under the name of Catharina Bloemendael; her ancestry, however, is not found. She was living in 1718, but is of no further record.

Issue:

1. John, married Sarah Loyse or Losee. See page 343.
2. Hendrick, baptised in the Reformed Dutch church at Flatbush, New York and as from New Utrecht, 23 July, 1682, the sponsors being Harmen Hendrickszen (Bras) and Gertje Rutgers. He was a blacksmith and resident of Jamaica, New York. He signed the articles of the Dutch church at Jamaica, 29 April, 1715 and gave contributions toward the erection of the Dutch church at Oyster Bay, 15 November, 1715. He was also listed on 4 February, 1708-1709 for the rate of the Presbyterian church at Jamaica, with his brother John. He married in the First Presbyterian church at Newtown, New York, 26 December, 1723 to Elizabeth Pettit; no issue. His will, dated at Jamaica, 28 December, 1749, proved 21 August, 1751, mentions his wife, his nephew Adam, eldest son of his brother John, his cousin (nephew) William Pettit and no other heirs. It is filed in Liber 17, p. 418 of New York Wills, New York city, N. Y.
3. Adam, baptised 20 April, 1684 in the Reformed Dutch church at Flatbush, sponsors Gerrit Hendrickszen (Bras), Anna Wynhard. He died young.
4. Janneţje, baptism apparently not of record; married Theunis Laurenszen Haff, son of Laurens and Kniertje Pieters (Meet) Haff. See HAFF.
5. (probably) Sarah, married Thomas Linnington.

NOTES

The registers of the Reformed Dutch church of Flatbush have been quoted as printed in the Year Book of the Holland Society for 1897. Tunis G. Bergen in his Early Settlers of Kings County, New York, states at page 141 that Pieter Hendrickszen was a dealer in whalebone, as per Stoothoff's books. See also the Records of the Town of Jamaica, vol. III, pp. 194+; also History of the First Reformed Church of Jamaica, L. I., by Henry O. Onderdonk junior. (1884), pp. 14-15; Collections of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, vol. 8, Records of the First Presbyterian Church of Newtown, New York; and other references as quoted elsewhere.

If Catharina Jans, wife of Pieter Hendrickszen Bras, was a Bloemendael, she must have been related to some other connection than that of Cornelis Maessen van Buren, some of whose descendants assumed the surname of Bloomingdale. Her ancestry is unknown to us.

Pieter Hendrickszen Bras was the son of 11. HENDRICK PIETERSZEN 1,288

m. GEERTJE EVERTS

He was born about 1615 and probably in the province of Gelderland, the Netherlands.

He was an early immigrant to New Amsterdam, New Netherlands, and had a son baptised in the Reformed Dutch church there in 1640. For the ensuing thirteen years Hendrick Pieterszen was a resident of New Amsterdam; but after 1654, when the Dutch villages in the present Kings county on Long Island were being settled, he removed to New Amersfoort or Flatlands. Here he was a farmer of quiet proclivities, and is infrequently of record.

Hendrick Pieterszen died shortly before 7 April, 1692 and at Flatlands; on this date his sons sold lands which had been their father's. No will or administration is of record.

He married before 1640 to Geertje Everts; she was probably mother of the children. Nothing else is known of her. Issue:

1. Pieter, baptised 7 September, 1640, sponsors Arien Pieterszen, Volkert Evertszen and Vrouwtje Gerrits. Possibly No. 644, page 345; or an elder brother having the same name, and who died young.
2. Adam, baptised at New Amsterdam, 12 February, 1651, sponsors Joris Dirckszen, Styntje Pieterszen. No further record; probably died young.
3. Harman, baptised at New Amsterdam, 17 August, 1653, sponsors Hans Janszen, Janneken Gerrits. As a young man, after the decease of his father, he was a resident of Albany, but after his first wife died, before 5 October, 1695 he removed to Hackensack, New Jersey. He was a resident of Bergen county, New Jersey, and died shortly before 5 June, 1714, when John Bardon filed bond as administrator of the estate, associated with Jo. Terhunen and Paulus van der Beeck as fellow bondsmen (Liber I, p. 511 and Bergen wills; Archives of the State of New Jersey, First Series, vol. 21). On 16 March, 1714/5 Inventory of the estate was made by Paulus van der Beeck and Matys Hoppe. Harman Hendrickszen Bras married 1, about 1675 to Anna Wynhard, who died before 5 October, 1695. On the latter date he married in the Dutch church at Hackensack, New Jersey, Geertje Koemans or Cooymans. She died before 3 May, 1707, on which date he married third, Geertje Egberts, widow of Louwerens Ackerman. Issue, by first wife:

i. Elizabeth, born before 1690 and probably at Albany, married at Hackensack, New Jersey, 12 August, 1709, Andreas Hoppe.

ii. Aertje, married at Hackensack, New Jersey, 11 April, 1713 to John Wright, who came from Flushing, New York. Issue included at least (WRIGHT):

A. Sian (?John), baptised at Hackensack, 27 June, 1714, twin with

B. Hermanus, baptised the same date. Sponsors for both were Johannes van Imburgh, Catrina, his wife; William Provoost, Eefie, his wife.

C. Annatje, baptised 8 July, 1716, sponsors Benjamin Dilict and Annatje his wife, replaced by Gysbert van Imburgh and sister Rachel van Imburgh.

D. Elizabeth, baptised 9 November, 1718, sponsors Andries Hoppe and Elizabeth Bras, his wife.

E. Catterina, baptised 26 December, 1720, sponsors David Williamse and Catrina Provoost.

F. William, baptised 14 August, 1726, sponsors William van Imburgh and Geertje Bras.

Issue, by second wife:

iii. Adriantje, baptised at Hackensack, New Jersey, 15 November, 1696, sponsors Lucas Koemans and Arientje Koemans. She was the wife of Ide Marselis.

iv. Geertje, baptised at Hackensack, New Jersey, 26 November, 1699, sponsors Johannes van -----(obliterated) married 1, Abraham Barsio (Barshow); he died before 17 June, 1721, on which date she married at Hackensack, Abraham Speer of Acquagenonck or Aquackanonck, variously spelled; he died before 3 November, 1727, when she married 3, at Hackensack to Thomas Ager. Issue, by first husband (BARSIO):

A. Cattryna, baptised at Hackensack, 6 March, 1720, sponsors Jan Reyt and Aertje, his wife.

v. Lucas, baptised at Hackensack, 31 October, 1703, sponsors Andries Tibout and Maritje, his wife. He married 5 June, 1727 to Lena Ryke of Aquackanonck. Issue (at least):

Probable issue by third wife:

vii. Hendrick, born about 1710, a resident of Bound Brook, New Jersey; married and had

A. Luke.

B. Henry, of Bound Brook, New Jersey. The descendants of this line spell their surname Bross. He married Sarah Cole, who died in or about 1835, daughter of John Cole of Carpenter's Point, New York. Issue (BROSS):

a. Peter, a resident of Montague, New Jersey, born at Bound Brook in 1768, died in 1835; married about 1785 to Susan Wood, daughter of Jacob Wood. For certain descendants of this line see American Ancestry, vol. 4, p. 71.

b. Abraham, married Maria Johnson.

c. Henry, married Nancy Siddles.

d. Eleanor, married Christopher Burt.

e. Catharine, married Jacob Poole.

f. Mary, married Ira Newman.

C. Peter.

D. Harmanus.

NOTES

Hendrick Pieterszen may have had also a son Andries who as Andries Brasse was listed 5 January, 1680 in New York city in company with Peter Bresse and Walter Bresse as a cooper.

One of the great difficulties in conducting research in this family has been that three other emigrants to the New Netherlands had surnames closely similar to that adopted in the present connection, or whose ordinary appellations as recorded by the Dutch were practically identical. The Hendrick Pieterszen who became the founder of the Brass family presented herein, is not found of record with any surname given him other than his father's given patronymic. The connections of his children are established by a land record in Book 2 of Conveyances at p. 136, Kings county, New York, an abstract of which was published in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 54, p. 250. The spellings of the surnames in this conveyance are as given: (abstract)

> Peter Hendrickse of Flatbush and his brothers William Brimasson, Brinase Hendricksen Brist, Evert Hendricksen, Rutt Brimasson, Harman Hendrickse Brisse, Walter Brimsey, and Harret Hendrickse Brissa, on April 7, 1692, deed Garret Coerte of Flatbush lands bounded by that of John Petersen, Rutt Brimasson and another lot bounded by lands of John Petersen and John Swensye and another lot at Canarsie, formerly occupied by Hendrick Petersen late of Flatlands. All sign excepting Peter Hendrickse, Rutt Brimasson, Garret Brissa and Evert Hendricksen. Witnessed by Samuel Ruscoe and Edward Burrowes. Received 13 May, 1697, by Henry ffilkin. Reg.

This cognomen spelled as Brist, Brimasson, Brisse, Brimsey and Brissa, later to become Brass and Bross, and also Bres, Bresser and Brasser, is in our opinion derived from Bruynszen or Brunoszen. In Dutch the n in such words as Bruyn, Corszen, van Deursen is nasalized and thrust back against the palate, which results in such pronunciations as Bruer, Corser and van Duzer. If this is correct, it may be that Hendrick Pieterszen was son of one Pieter Brunoszen or Bruynszen; and this would explain why the name would appear again in the listing of the children of Hendrick Pieterszen, who had a son variously called Bruno or Bruyn Hendrickszen.

A contemporary of Hendrick Pieterszen in New Amsterdam, and who appears in the Reformed Dutch church records about the same time that he does, was one Hendrick Pieterszen van Hasselt. The latter is also known by the peculiar title of Hendrick kindt-in't-water (child in the water). This Hendrick Pieterszen was a tenant farmer on the farm of Govert Loockermans, and died childless. The widow Grietje Adams was indigent and returned to the Netherlands to the poorhouse.

Another contemporary of the present Hendrick Pieterszen is Henry Brazier of Gravesend, New York, whose surname is spelled exactly on occasion like those given to the members of the Brass family. This exceptional coincidence (because of the relative rareness of this name) has caused considerable confusion. Henry Brazier was an Englishman from Essex, and his descendants spell the surname now for the most part as Brasher. The connections of the Brasher-Brazier family were recorded in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 27, pp. 37+. Henry Brazier married Susanna, widow of William Watkins of Gravesend, and dau. of Thomas Spicer of the latter place. Brazier died in 1691, and his will establishes the names of his children; none of these are compatible with those given to the children of Hendrick Pieterszen. Even here, however, there is is a duplication which is unusual. Henry Brazier had a son who was called Bresor (that is, Brazier Brazier), and Bruno or Bruyn, son of Hendrick Pieterszen, is rarely called by mispelled terms strongly reminiscent of this name. The article on the Brasher family in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record as mentioned, takes note of a number of the connections of the Brass family, but the writer of this article, Mr. Richard Henry Greene, did not discover the circumstances associated with the latter. He plainly did not know what to do with Gerrit and Evert Hendrickszen Bras.

One of the settlers of Albany, New York and living there in 1661 was Hendrick Bries, who had a son called Volkert Hendrickszen Bries. The latter removed to Piscataway, New Jersey, after having been a transient in New York city. His will, calling him Folkeart Bresse, was dated 11 May, 1715 and proved 15 April 1712. Therein by his wife Elizabeth he mentions children as Hendrick, Garbrant, Neeltie, Weintie, Libshe, Grietje and Vnon. (Liber I, p. 347, East Jersey Wills).

It seems to be reasonably assured that none of the foregoing are related to Hendrick Pieterszen of Flatlands. Tunis G. Bergen in his Early Settlers of Kings County, New York, notes on p. 224 that Hendrick Pieterszen appears at Flatbush 7 April, 1664, when he obtained a patent for twenty-five morgens of land. He conveyed 20 October, 1667 27 morgens of land in Flatbush to Cornelis Hendrickszen van Eens, and which was located on the west side of the Highway with plain and meadow land (Liber C of Conveyances, p. 21-1/4, so numbered).

We have referred to other sources of information under the descendants of Hendrick Pieterszen. It seems to be true, and it is truly exceptional, that the latter had at least nine sons, and apparently no daughters. Other relatives of Hendrick Pieterszen and contemporary with him, have not been found; however, the Arien Pieterszen who was a sponsor at the baptism of the son Pieter who was baptised in 1640 in the Reformed Dutch church in New Amsterdam, may have been his brother. Similarly the Volkert Evertszen who was sponsor at the same baptism may have been a brother of his wife.

In The History of the Town of Flatlands, Kings County, New York, by the Rev. Anson Dubois, D. D., members of this family are mentioned, but no genealogical connections are established. Harman Hendrickszen Bras, the third son, must not be confused with Harman Hendrickszen Rosenkranz or Harman Hendrickszen Swearingh, ancestors respectively of the Rosecrans and Hendrickson families. The connections of Harman Hendrickszen Bras are recorded in New Jersey records, and particularly in the records of the Reformed Dutch church of Hackensack; the latter, with the records of the church at Schraalenburgh, have been published by the Holland Society of New York city. The children of Bruyn Hendrickszen will be found listed in Hoes' published Records of the Dutch church at Kingston, New York; there are undoubtedly numerous descendants of this line. There is considerable reason to believe that the descendants of Wouter Hendrickszen assumed the name van Gelder, although we have not established this as a fact. Were it so, the assumption of this name is reasonable, in view of the fact that the family is recorded as having come from Gelderland.

The connections of the Brass family that are better known, however, are the descendants of the younger sons Gerrit Hendrickszen Bras and Evert Hendrickszen Bras. See The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 58, pp. 224+; and vol. 70, under the Hardenbrook ancestry. Of the son Willem Hendrickszen on the other hand, we know very little. Tunis G. Bergen says he was called alias Stommetie, and bought land 28 September, 1685, of Jacob Strycker and Rutger Bruyne. This was meadow lot No. 39 in the Flatbush meadows at Canarsie (Liber A, p. 3 of Flatbush Records). He was in Flatlands and listed in the census of 1698.

It may be that members of this family were the original owners of Vriesie's Hook, so-called, in Flatlands, and if so this would solve a problem for Mr. Frederick van Wyck, author of Keskachauge, or the First White Settlement on Long Island. The latter is a legalistic and historical presentation to defend that New Amersfoort and its vicinity (Flatlands) was the location of the first white settlers on Long Island, antedating the settlements of the Wallabout and Breuckelen. He states at p. 360:

> I the undersigned Jacob Kip made (sic) known and declare by this to have received from the residents of Amersfoort for the present and for the preceding year one hundred and ninety schepels of Buckwheat the same for land of Vriesie sold by Jacob Steendam and that in pursuance of the agreement made with the Inhabitants and Magistrates and for all further claims. In Witness Whereof this is signed this 29th .. .. in 1661 in Amsterdam in N. Netherland
> (Flatlands Road Records, p. 71)

There has been speculation that a member of the de Vries family owned Vriesie's Hook, and thus gave the latter its name. Mr. van Wyck shows that such reasoning is untenable, and our research confirms him. It may well be then, that Vriesie's Hook was the location upon which the first Hendrick Pieterszen was settled.

The ancestry of Hendrick Pieterszen, other than that the given name of his father was Pieter, is unknown. He may have been named Pieter Bruynszen or Brunoszen.

9. DINAH BREWSTER 349
m. JOSEPH TOOKER son of John Tooker and Sarah

She was born probably at Setauket in the town of Brookhaven, New York, about 1666.

She married 6 April, 1685 and probably at Setauket, to Joseph Tooker and resided at Brookhaven the rest of her life. She may be the widow who is listed in the 1741 tax list;very little is found of her otherwise. She was probably the mother of Joseph Tooker's children.

No will or administration of her effects is found.

For descendants, see TOOKER, under #348.

NOTES

The references to Dinah Brewster are two: the marriage record, as given in the Town Records of Brookhaven, Book B, p. 3, as edited by Osborn Shaw; and the recollections of Deborah (Brewster) Roe, as published in The American Genealogist, vol. XII, p. 205. This follows:

Brewster

Joseph B. Roe's notes of what Grandmother Roe informed him.

My Paternal Ancestry, as given me by my aged and beloved grandmother, Deborah Brewster Roe, a few years before her death. Her memory of all the events and circumstances of her early life and all that she read or heard is astonishing.

She told me that the account which she gave me of our earliest ancestors in this country she received from her own grandmother, Mary Hawkins Brewster, when she was twelve years of age. The account is as follows:

The Rev. Nathaniel Brewster, who was a dissenting minister in England, married Hannah Ludlow and some time after they fled from persecution in England, to America for liberty to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. They first landed at the foot of Mt.Misery, a very high peak of land, and climbed to its top in order to view the country: wearied with the toilsome journey Mr. Brewster exclaimed, "What a mountain of misery," thus giving it the name which it still bears. From the top of this hill, they discovered the beautiful bay of Drown Meadows lately called Port Jefferson. On this bay they finally settled, at the head of its south branch in a place called Setauket, a new and thinly peopled country.

The Rev. Nathaniel Brewster formed the first Presbyterian church in the Town of Brookhaven, Suffolk County, State of New York. The date of this event I have not been able to learn, but it must have been early in the history of Long Island where its scenes are located.

The descendants of this minister were for many generations among the most worthy and respectable in the community. Now in 1848 I know very little about them.

The children of the said Nathaniel and Hannah Brewster are, Daniel, Timothy, Dinah and Deborah.

Timothy Brewster married Mary Hawkins. They were grandparents of my grandmother. Their children were Nathaniel, Joseph, Timothy, Mary, Sarah, Abigail and Dinah.

Joseph Brewster married Ruth Briscoe. Their children were Ruth Brewster, who married Ansalem Helm, Joseph married Rebecca Mills, Mary Brewster and Sarah Brewster.* John Roe, Daniel Roe and Zechariah Hawkins. (These are my grandparents.)

This brings grandmother's ancestry down to herself, including four generations. Her only brother, Joseph Brewster, was a wealthy and much respected man, as well as venerable for his age when I visited him, when a child, with my parents. Grandmother outlived her brother, and all her sisters, dying at the advanced age of 90 years 3 months and 23 days, January 3, 1832. She also outlived grandfather several years. She had twelve children of whom my father was the second. She was a woman of good judgment and education. She possessed great fortitude, patience and equanimity of mind, although she was slender and delicate in person.

Donald L. Jacobus, who quotes the foregoing in the article "The Family of Rev. Nathaniel Brewster" makes the following comments thereon:

*Deborah (Brewster) Roe also belongs here in this account, but she seems to have been taken for granted.

It will be noted that this account was written in the first person by the grandson of Deborah (Brewster) Roe. We do not know how much of his grandmother's recollections he wrote down at the time, but presumably he did make a written note of what she told him in the 1820's("a few years before her death"), and then wrote it out more formally many years later ("now in 1848"). The importance of this account cannot be over-estimated, because it is a direct statement of what Mrs. Roe knew of her own knowledge, or had been told by older members of the family, subject only to the imperfections of memory. The family knowledge and traditions had not been "spoiled" by mixture with the results of modern amateur research or speculation.

Mrs. Roe's memory was at fault as to the first name of Nathaniel's wife, which in several contemporary records was Sarah, not Hannah. She did not know that Nathaniel had been in this country before, nor that he was a graduate of Harvard. She did not know of the exalted parentage of Nathaniel's wife; apparently the name Ludlow meant nothing in particular to her, except that it was the name of her great-grandmother. That of course increases the evidential value of the traditional statement. She did not know of Nathaniel's son John, who probably did not come to New England; nor of Nathaniel's daughter Abigail, who married and died at an early age. Strangely enough, she did not include Hannah, the ancestress claimed by the Thompson family.

But she did name two daughters of Nathaniel, Dinah and Deborah, whose names, so far as we are aware, have never appeared in any printed account..... A Dinah Brewster married at Brookhaven so early as 1685 could hardly belong to a later generation, and presumptively must have been a daughter of Rev. Nathaniel. The fact that Mrs. Roe mentioned Dinah among the children of Rev. Nathaniel both confirms this supposition, and sustains the evidential value of Mrs. Roe's account.

Dinah Brewster was the daughter of

10. NATHANIEL BREWSTER
m. SARAH LUDLOW termed daughter of Roger Ludlow and Mary Cogan

He was born probably at Bristol, England and about 1622/3. No baptismal record has been found.

It has not been ascertained where he lived prior to his entry in Harvard College at Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1639. His father had left London in 1638 to reside in New Haven, Connecticut; was in 1642 of Tralee, county Kerry, Ireland, and probably before either of these residences had at some time been of Dublin. Nathaniel Brewster graduated in 1642 from Harvard with the degree of bachelor of theology, and at the time he is recorded as of Dublin.

Not far from the time when Brewster took his degree the laws enforcing uniformity in England were repealed, and others passed, which made the situation of the Episcopal clergy so uncomfortable that many left their parishes, and the vacancies were filled by Presbyterians and Independents. Several persons who had fled to New England to escape oppression, and others who had been educated in the Colonies, among whom were Brewster and some of his classmates, returned to enter the ministry.

There is no certain date fixing Brewster's arrival in England, although it can be reasonably supposed to have occurred before 1648/9; it is probable that he married his first wife, the daughter of John Reymes of Edgefield, Norfolk, about this time. He was of Walberswick, Suffolk in 1649 when his step-father, Dr. Thomas Pell, constituted him his attorney; and on 31 October, 1650 he was proposed in the church at Yarmouth as an assistant for Mr. Bridge, although another was chosen.

In Alby or Aldeby, Norfolk, Richard Plummer, who had been instituted in 1642 as rector of that church, was ejected, and the parish was vacant in the winter of 1650/1. The church was reformed after 4 February, 1650/1 when Nathaniel Brewster, who was with them from the first, wrote a letter to the church at Yarmouth extending a request for fellowship. Brewster was destined to preach from this pulpit, with some interruptions, for the next twelve years. It may be that Brewster was influenced to settle in this county because of the fairly close proximity to the Brewster family of the Manor of Wrentham, Suffolk, who were strong supporters of the Protectorate; and they may have been, moreover, related to him. From an application made by Brewster's church, it appears that the parsonages of both Aldeby and Thwaite in Norfolk had been under sequestration, & were combined and settled on Brewster by order of the Committee for plundered ministers. He preached in both of these localities every Lord's day, but incurred considerable expenses in the reparation of the parsonage houses, which had been allowed by his predecessors to fall into great disrepair. As a consequence he appealed to the Protector for assistance; it is definitely established that he had access to Oliver Cromwell.

In the Milton State Papers are letters addressed to Oliver Cromwell between 1649 and 1658, found among the political collections of John Milton, including several concerning the churches in Norfolk. Among them is a document in regard to the parsonages of Aldeby and Thwaite, presided over by Mr. Brewster, who having constantly preached in both places, cannot raise above fifty pounds per annum out of both. "So as the said Mr. Brewster (hath) a great family, and much employed in the country by preaching freely, when there is great need, is reduced to very great straits, and not like to continue in his function without assistance from the state."Before 1654 this employment in the country had included Neatishead and Irestead as well as Aldeby and Thwaite; as minister at Aldeby, Nathaniel Brewster signed a certificate 11 April, 1654.

On 8 August, 1654, the allowance of thirty-six pounds a year augmentation allowed to Nathaniel Brewster, late minister of Neatishead and Irestead, was to be continued to John Leverington, now minister there; and a certificate attached to an order stated that in pursuance of orders received from the Committee for Reformation of the Universities as of 26 September and 27 November, 1650, thirty four pounds had been granted for increase of maintenance of Nathaniel Brewster, to wit, eleven pounds from Neatishead, reserved to the late Bishop of Norwich; ten pounds from Attlebridge rectory; and thirteen pounds from North Elmham rectory; 31 December, 1651. A further order was issued in Council making Mr. Leverington's allowance retroactive from the time Mr. Brewster left.

During this year and early in 1655 Brewster had addressed himself to Secretary John Thurloe, and in a letter dated 18 June, 1655 from Aldeby, he asked Thurloe if any recommendations had been made to Henry Cromwell relative to financing him. Henry Cromwell had evidently written Brewster, along with others, with a view of sending him to Ireland as a missionary. Matters had progressed to such an extent that 22 June, 1655 Oliver Cromwell wrote to his son-in-law William Fleetwood, saying that his brother Henry Cromwell was going to Ireland, to see "with his own eyes how matters stand there. A reverend godly Mr. Brewster, hardly known to us otherwise,is also proceeding thither; with whom the Lord Protector thinks good to salute his Son-in-law....." On the same date the Lord Protector wrote another communication to Fleetwood, requesting him to use "this bearer, mr. Brewster, kindly...." See also the NOTES following.

Brewster addressed another letter to Thurloe 18 July, 1655, from Dublin. In this he tells the Secretary that he had a safe but wearisome journey, and that Henry Cromwell had also come to Dublin. Brewster seems to have held the pulpit of Aldeby in absentia, as on 15 April, 1656 a recommendation was made to the Trustees for Maintenance of Ministers to augment the living of Nathaniel Brewster, minister of Alby (sic)by 60 pounds, "his living being too small to afford him subsistence." He was ordered to catechise the children at Christ church in Dublin, 18 July, 1656, and was termed at the time the minister of that church. However he was probably acting only in his missionary capacity, and it is very doubtful if the pulpit of this church was occupied regularly by him. He was also allowed two hundred pounds for his services in this year.

He wrote Thurloe again from Dublin 22 October, 1656, but had returned to Aldeby in 1658. On 22 April, 1658 an order of the Council of State referred to the Committee for Foreign Plantations a petition by Nathaniel Brewster, William Washbourn and George Baxter, on behalf of several inhabitants of Fairfield & Long Island in New England. The subject of the petition is not stated, but it is probable that Brewster had received a call from Fairfield. On 6 May, 1658 this petition was recommitted to the same Committee, to "speak with Major Bourne and Captain Willoughby therein." There it seems to have been pigeon-holed, for nothing further is heard from it. During this time Brewster was in straitened circumstances, and on 26 July, 1658 he wrote to Henry Scobell again asking for support, referring on this occasion to Charles Fleetwood or Edmund Ludlow as his security.

The last definite record of him at Aldeby occurs when his son Daniel was baptised 31 December, 1662, in St. Ethelbert's parish church.

About September, 1663, after the restoration of Charles II, and the passage of the Act of Uniformity, Nathaniel Brewster arrived at Boston in the Massachusetts Bay Colony "in Master Prout's ship, from London. Mrs. Norton (widow of the Reverend John Norton) entertained him and his family in her house, and after a while when our church had tasted of his gifts; they desired his frequent labor among us, who together with Mr. James Allen, that came hither about August, 1660, carried on the public ministry in our church." (Hull, Diary). Nevertheless Brewster did not stay to preach in the First church at Boston. He had made a favorable impression, however, and the town of New London was anxious to secure him as their minister; to the extent that the record of the Town Meeting of 10 July, 1665 says that "If it be your myndes yt Mr. James Rogers shall goe in the behalfe of the town to Mr. Brewster to give him a call and to know whether he will come to us to be minister, and yt he shall intercead to Mr. Pell first to be helpful to us herein, manifest it by lifting up your hands. Voted."

It seems to be true that Brewster turned these offers down. As a minister who had been associated with the Lord Protector, and whose family associations by marriage at least, were proscribed in England, he sought obscurity. He was also probably a missionary in spirit, and preferred to advance the Gospel in the smaller settlements, on the frontiers and in those places where a different viewpoint prevailed. In 1664 he was preaching every other week at Eastchester, New York; and in 1665 finally removed to the small village of Setauket in the town of Brookhaven, on the north shore of Long Island. As he landed it is said that he climbed the present Mount Misery and gave utterance to his troubled past by exclaiming "What a mountain of misery!"

On 24 October, 1665 Matthew Prior of Brookhaven and Oyster Bay, New York, sold his home lot and house, etc., to the Constable and the rest of the Overseers of the town for the minister's accomodation, they to pay Prior twelve pounds (Town Records, Book A, p. 24). Thus Brewster became the first minister of the First Church of Brookhaven, later the First Presbyterian church, and found in this town a quiet and secure haven for the rest of his days. His home was added to 29 May 1666, when the townsmen agrred at a meeting to take down "scotts haele" (one of the houses built by the notorious Captain John Scott) and to erect it again in the town, "the . T exsepted", for Mr. Brewster.

William Frost of Oyster Bay bought land in Brookhaven, 26 of September, 1672 adjacent to Thomas Thorpe and Nathaniel Brewster, and on 15 January, 1674 Brewster bound himself in the sum of twenty-eight pounds to pay for this land, with housing and fencing; although apparently this transaction .. was not carried out, as the signature was struck out in the original. The sale was finally consummated in January, 1676. On 10 December, 1678 Nathaniel Brewster's land was on the east side of Fresh Pond.

He died at Setauket, Brookhaven township, New York, 18 September, 1690, aged about 68. He was buried in the churchyard at Setauket, very probably. His will, dated 16 March, 1684/5, was proved 3 May, 1695 and a copy of it will be found in the so-called Lester Will Book, in the office of the surrogate at Riverhead, New York.

Nathaniel Brewster married 1, after 1642 and probably before 1648, to a daughter of John Reymes of Edgefield, Norfolk, England. She had died a few years before her father made his will, 26 September, 1662, and in our opinion before 1655, at which time Brewster was in Ireland with Henry Cromwell. He married 2, by 1662 certainly, to Sarah Ludlow, who survived him.

Issue, by first wife:

1. Abigail, not unlikely the first child. Her two children are termed grandchildren in her father's will, thus proving her identity. In the first volume of Stamford Town Records, at top of page 113, the marriage of "Danill Bur" to "Abigall bruster" is entered as occurring Feb. 166( ), the final figure being missing from the worn margin of the page. It is probable that the entry stands for 1668/9. She died before 11 December, 1678, when her husband remarried. Issue. See The American Genealogist, XIII, p. 157; Donald L. Jacobus, Families of Old Fairfield, Connecticut, under Burr; and The Burr Genealogy, by Charles Burr Todd.
2. John, probably named after his maternal grandfather, or for his father's uncle. He was called the eldest son in his father's will. No record of him appears in Brookhaven, and he may have returned to England; in 1685 his father apparently did not know where he was or what had become of him. When Timothy Brewster gave his confirmation deed to the New Haven property of his grandfather Francis Brewster after 1700, he evidently acted as the surviving eldest son of the eldest son of Francis. John had either died without known issue, or nothing more was known of him. There is nothing to indicate that he can be identified with any John Brewster in the Colonies, although settlers of this name appear in the records of New Hampshire and New Jersey.
3. (perhaps) Sarah. The late William S. Pelletreau held that the wife of Jonathan Smith of Smithtown, son of Richard "Bull" Smith, was Sarah, daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Ludlow) Brewster. From a thorough investigation of the connections of Sarah Ludlow (see LUDLOW) we are positive that if Sarah Brewster existed, and further was the wife of Jonathan Smith, she was no daughter of Sarah Ludlow. She was born presumably about 1654, and was married about 1673, as her daughter Deborah was born in 1674. This daughter is not mentioned in Nathaniel Brewster's will, not in itself significant, as the latter does not mention his daughters by name; but Sarah may have been deceased before her father made his will. We do not consider this connection authoritative. For descendants, see Records of The Town of Smithtown, by William S. Pelletreau, p. 464.

Issue, by second wife:

4. Timothy, born probably at Aldeby or Alby, Norfolk, about February or March, perhaps slightly later, in 1660/1. He was brought to the North American Colonies as an infant in arms, and resi-died at Brookhaven all of his life. He died there between 1741 and 1749. He was town clerk from 1688 to 1711; married Mary Hawkins, daughter of Zachariah and Mary (Biggs) Hawkins who survived him and who was assessed in 1749. Issue:

i. Nathaniel, born at Brookhaven in 1689, died 6 November 1732, and buried in the churchyard of the First church at Setauket, where the almost obliterated grave stones are still standing. A tall pine tree now stands between headstone and footstone. He was a justice of the peace, and appears on a church list in 1719. He was probably also a miller, as he was given permission in May, 1724 to build a grist mill on the Beaver Dam River. He married Phoebe, daughter of Samuel "Bull" Smith of Smithtown. Issue:

A. Nathaniel, born at Brookhaven, New York in 1713, murdered by his negro servant 21 June, 1772. He married Glorianna Smith, born 26 February, 1714/5, died 17 July, 1750, daughter of Colonel Henry Tangier Smith of the Manor of St. George. Issue:

6. Dinah, married Joseph Tooker. See page 357.

7. Daniel, born probably at Brookhaven, New York, about 1668, died there 15 June, 1748 in the "61st year of his age" (sic). In The American Genealogist vol. XIII, p. 162 appears a note as follows: "Mr. Leroy Smith calls attention to the inscription on a stone at Middle Island: 'In Memory of Mr. Daniel Brewster who died June 15th 1748 in the 61st year of his Age.' This does not fit any Daniel that we know of, and a Daniel born 1687-8 seems almost impossible to place in this family unless he was eldest son of Timothy[2]. This problem admits more readily of solution if the inscription is incorrect; Mr. Smith vouches for the accuracy of the reading. John[2] Brewster, son of Daniel[2], stated that his father lived to be 80 years old (Adams' Diary). If Daniel[2] died 15 June 1743 in his 81st year, the record would agree both with the baptismal record and the son's statement, but it necessitates postulating two mistakes on the part of the stone-cutter. If a single mistake was made on the stone, and if Daniel died 15 June 1748 in his 81st year, then Daniel baptised 31 October 1662 died young, and there was a second Daniel born about 1668. Since Daniel's first child was born 1694, he need not of course have been born as early as 1662." We are of the opinion that the last alternative is correct, that there were two Daniels, and that the gravestone should have read that the second Daniel died in the 81st year of his age. Daniel Brewster was Town Clerk of Brookhaven from 1711 to 1738 and at various times also Supervisor. His bible record, still extant, belongs to Mrs. Julia Etta Hicks of Hicks, Chenango county, New York. He married about 1693 to Anna Jayne, daughter of William and Anna (Biggs) Jayne of Brookhaven, New York. Issue:

i. Daniel, born probably at Brookhaven, 1 November, 1694. His will, dated 29 May, 1752, was proved 23 July, 1752, and filed at Liber 18, p. 271 of New York Wills, New York city, N. Y. He was a resident of Middle Island, and his homestead for many years in later times was the post office at that locality. His wife was named Mary, but allegations that she was a daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Brewster) Thompson seem to be incorrect. The will of Samuel Thompson calls the husband of his daughter Hannah, Daniel Smith. Issue:

NOTES

In order to establish the continuity of reference material, it is indispensable to quote the evidence which establishes that Nathaniel was son of Francis Brewster. This evidence was known to the late Col. Charles E. Banks, and was rediscovered and published by Donald L. Jacobus of New Haven in The American Genealogist, vol. XIII, p. 9. Quoting Mr. Jacobus, it is stated that the first volume of deeds in New Haven does not begin until 1670, over thirty years after the death of Francis Brewster. Before that, entry was merely made in the town records that one man

*Instead of Peninah, the Sullivan MS states that there were two other daughters: Elizabeth, born about 1752, died before 1782, married Samuel Dayton of Mount Sinai as his second wife, and had issue; and Ann, born about 1754, died before 1782, married Samuel Phillips of Mount Sinai. But see Coll. of the New York Hist. Soc., Wills, X, pp. 246-7. See also comment, footnote, The American Genealogist, vol. XIII, p. 161.

"passed over" land to another. Dr. Pell, having married Francis Brewster's widow, sold the Brewster lands through his attorney in 1652, 1654 and 1555 (New Haven Town Records, vol. I, pp. 118,225, 254). No adult son of Francis Brewster was then living in this country, and Pell with the widow and a couple of Brewster girls had moved to Fairfield. Pell doubtless sold in right of his wife, the widow Brewster, and as representing the children, such lax methods being not uncommon at that period. The confirmation deed which follows was not given by the grandson of Francis until 1707, some sixty years after the death of Francis.

Since Timothy Brewster of Brookhaven, who called himself grandson of Francis Brewster of New Haven, can be identified with no other than the son of Nathaniel Brewster of Brookhaven, who made him his chief heir in his will, the parentage of Nathaniel is at last removed forever from the realm of conjecture.

As Francis Brewster did not complete an apprenticeship as mentioned further herein, until 1622, it is reasonable to suppose that his son Nathaniel was not born until about this time, and hence our estimate of the date of his birth. An apparently conflicting testimony was given by John Brewster, grandson of the Reverend Nathaniel when he entertained John Adams on or about 17 November, 1777. In The Works of John Adams, edited by Charles Francis Adams, (1865), vol. II, p. 441 appears the following:

> (17 November 1777) Dined at Brewster's, in Orange county, State of New York. Brewster's grandfather, as he tells me, was a clergyman, and one of the first adventurers to Plymouth; he died at ninety-five years of age, a minister on Long Island; left a son who lived to be above eighty, and died leaving my landlord, a son who is now, I believe, between sixty and seventy. The manners of this family are exactly like those of the New England people; a decent grace before and after meat; fine pork and beef, and cabbage and turnip.

This account of John Brewster's has been responsible for much argument, special pleading and misinterpretation. It is not difficult to understand that Brewster, hearing perhaps a reference by Adams to the Elder William Brewster, should adapt his family record to what he honestly believed to have been probably true. As Nathaniel Brewster did arrive at Boston, and at a relatively early date, an association with Plymouth is not unreasonable. On the other hand it was John Brewster's maternal grandfather, William Jayne, who died at the age of ninety-five; and this confusion of ancestors in the mind of the good squire, who was certainly no genealogist, can be forgiven.

In the Publications of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, v. 15 (vol. 1 of the Harvard College Records) at page 6 is a reference to the study which had belonged to Nathaniel Brewster. Calling him Sr Brewster, the record states that the study cost £2/12/15; and that on November 1, 1645 it was let to Abraham Wolver. At page 82 of the same publication appears the following:

Nomina Graduatorum

An. Dom. 1642
Nathanael Bruster Th. Bac. Dub. Hib.

Which, properly translated, becomes:

Names of the Graduates

In the Year of Our Lord, 1642
Nathaniel Brewster, Bachelor of Theology; of Dublin in Ireland.

Because of the abbreviation of the location, the Latin ablative which we have translated freely by of, this meaning has not been apparent. A mistake in interpretation was not long in coming, as the late John Farmer was informed in 1829 by Silas Wood of Huntington, New York:

A Genealogical Register of the First Settlers of New England, by John Farmer, 1829.

BREWSTER, Nathaniel, grad. in the first class of H. C. 1642, and of good report (Hutchinson, Hist. Mass., i. 107). Received from Dublin the degree of Bachelor of Divinity; returned to America, and settled in 1656 (sic) at Brookhaven, L. I.; and died in 1690, leaving three sons, John, Timothy and Daniel, whose descendants are still respectable on Long Island. Hon. Silas Wood, letter.

There is no record that Nathaniel Brewster ever had any degree other than the one received from Harvard.

An excellent biography of Nathaniel Brewster was written by the scholarly John Langdon Sibley, M. A., in vol. I of his Biographical Sketches of Graduates of Harvard University, at p. 68. We are indebted to this author for an extensive bibliography which has been of great assistance to us. References to Brewster's ministry in Norfolk will be found in the Calendar of State Papers, Domestic Series, 1654, pp. 260, 290; ibidum, 1655, pp. 199, 274; Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, 1574-1660, pp. 146, 418, 465; The Letters and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell, With Elucidations by Thomas Carlyle, edited by S. C. Lomas, 1904, vol. II, p. 448, Letter CXCIX; A Collection of the State Papers of John Thurloe, Esq., edited by Thomas Birch, M. A., F. R. S., 1742. In the last are printed several letters of Nathaniel Brewster's, and which we quote:

Mr. Nathaniel Brewster to Secretary Thurloe

Right Honorable
Your honor's very kind assistance affoorded to me heretofore in my addresses to his highnesse doth encourage me once againe to make recourse to you, humbly requesting your honor to enquire of his highnesse (after tender of my duty and service) whether any such recommendation be yet made on my behalfe to the deputy of Ireland, which his highnesse intended; and that you would please to inform me, when I come, whether I must call for it before I goe, or whether it be sent allready. Let it please you, sir, to parden this boldnesse, for the suddenesse of my voyage and the importance of his highness letter in the present case hath enforced me to usurpe soe much upon your love. I expect to be in London this weeke, and (as I finde things) to hasten after my lord Henry before he set sayle, soe as the readynesse of my advance money and of that recommendation will be an extraordinary furtherance, if I can be resolved about them, by calling at your honor's house.

I have noe intelligence worth communicating to your honor, but that our troopes are in great forwardnesse, and like to be suddenly in a posture. The contributions for the protestants have been cheerfully mannaged in these parts. The lord blesse your honor; so prayeth, sir,

Your most humble faithfull servant,

Alby in Norfolk, June

Nath. Brewster.

Mr. Garbert will be serviceable at your honor's directions with any thing of my businesse, wherein to ease your honor, if need be.

Dear Charles,

Mr. Nathaniel Brewster to Secretary Thurloe
Right Honnourable,
May it please your honour to bear with the rude salutation of your Christian friend and servant, who is emboldened hereto by the experience of your love. Since I saw your honour I had a wearisome journey to West Chester, where I overtooke my lord Henry the evening before his departure to Holyhead, and came with his honour safely and comfortably to Dublin, as I suppose your honour is allready informed (of which allsoe I have presumed to certify his highnesse.) There is one occasion somewhat forceible upon me in this undertakeing of writeing to your honour..

One lieutenant Axtell, formerly mentioned to the counsell, and to your honour, yet delayed (in his distressed condition) entreates your honour's mediation (as occasion shall serve) either to the counsell, or to the lord St. John, in such matters as by his petition shall be explained to them.

Honourable sir, I love not to intrude upon a person of your place and charge, in respect of your many incumbrencyes; but I must needs reporte this Axtell to your honour, as a very confideing usefull man, both for clerkship and armes, and a sad object of pitty in this juncture of his affaires,when he is undone in his good will to the commonwealth. Please your honour to send for him upon the delivery hereof (himself being appointed to be the bearer and to attend at the doore) that he may know your pleasure. The Lord blesse your honour, so resteth

Your honour's humble and faithfull servant,

Dublin, July 18, 1655 Nathaniel Brewster

(Original volume xxviii, p. 524)

Mr. N. Brewster to Secretary Thurloe
Right Honourable,

I thought it my duty to communicate a line or two, partly in obedience to your honour's appointment, which was that I might minde you (with the next) of that distressed friend of mine, some time of Ireland, where he was utterly impoverisht by the warres. He was long since recommended to your honour, and I am the bolder to revive it, since his olde age and growing infirmity hath now disabled him to make longer use of a porter's imployment, by which alone he hath been constrained many yeeres to maintaine himselfe and family in London; and being so willing and capable to plant in Ireland, with some competent succour allowed him towards the voyage,I doubt not but your honour's Christian pitty will be ready to his furtherance, in this behalfe.

Our affaires hereabout are quiet, so farre as yet I have learnt, onely about North Walsham the Black-Fryars-way seems to gaine upon some (ministers and others) so farre, as grieves many sollid Christians, and perhaps may tend to worse effects. I cannot but beare witnesse to the godlynesse of those that carry it on, yet so as I must acknowledge, that the more knowing ancient Christians about us are generally amazed to behold such undertakings among them, that professe the humble way of Christ. I shall pray your honour to keep this in your breast till I write next, for I am intended to draw out (from the chiefe of them) what they meane in plaine tearmes, and what they would have, and thereupon give your honour a full account of this distemper, (whether better or worse) whereby I may with more boldness stand for an evidence whensoever your honour shall see meet to improve the report, for prevention of those inconveniencies, which I feare doe inevitably attend this way; a way, I am sure, that never was in fashion till now among men that pretend to piety and learning. The good Lord blesse, guide, and comfort your honour amidst your greate and weighty incumbrancyes, for the good of his poore distracted inheritance: amen. Sir:

Alby in Norfolk,
Jan. 28, 1655 (1655/6)

Your honour's exceedingly obliged

Nathaniel Brewster

(Original Volume xxxiv, p. 907).

Mr. Nathaniel Brewster to secretary Thurloe

Right Honorable,

Being lately returned with my lord from a long progresse, where I had occasion to take some notice of the townes in Ireland (which are of note) it seemed not inconvenient to signifie thus much to your honour, that the principal sea ports and inland townes of this country are sadly decayed and unpeopled, being likely to continue so till better encouragement be offered to planters, especially merchants; the want of which renders many beautifull stronge townes to be but sad spectacles, and (if many be not mistaken) exceedingly hinders the publike treasury. I need not instance particulars, which all intelligent men (concerned) can explain, if called hereto. Another thing I saw meet to suggest to your honour, that our dissenting (but I hope) godly friends in this countrey doe seeme to carry such a jealousy and distance with the present magistracy and ministry (I meane in matters spirituall) as I am now at last somewhat weary of hopeing for an accomodation, which I have hoped and endeavoured with so much complyance as offended my best friends, for twelve months space, but doe finde by experience in six weeks travailing, that they are every where unanimous and fixt in separateing from us, even to the ordinance of hearing the word, a thing that greatly afflicts my lord and many hundreds fearing God that wish them well. I with the world get noe advantage thereby. I hope your honour's Christian wisedome can improve it well. Please you sir, to tender me what you may in the communicating hereof; and vouchsafe to account me among them, that are yours in all faithfull services.

Nat. Brewster.

Dublyn, Oct. 22, 1656.

Another letter dated two years later is recorded in Desiderata Curiosa, by Francis Peck, M. A., under the section entitled Lib. XIII, at p. 504:

Nathanael Brewster of Alby to (Henry Scobell, Esq.) requesting an augmentation to his living. Dated 26, July 1658.

An original (once Mr. Dudart's) now in the hands of the editor)

After my humble service and thankfulnesse for all your christian respect & favours, I am occasioned, by an extraordinary exigent, to move you, a litle beyond my bounds, that(as this bearer Mr. Clerke, my agent & faithfull friend, shall explaine my affaires to you) you may vouchsafe to lighten my present cares so farre as (with securitie from my Lord Charles Fleetwood or lieutenant general (Edmund) Ludlow) you shall find safe & convenient. Wherein you would greatly refresh my bowells, & (with your pardon of this strange boldness) more oblige me to be

Your very humble faithfull servant

These to the worthily honored Henry Scobell, esq., present, in Westminster.

From the History of Congregationalism in Norfolk and Suffolk, by John Browne, published in 1877 at London, there is stated at page 298:

The church at Alby was formed after 4 Feb. 1650/1, when Mr.

Brewster, who was with them from the first, wrote on their behalf a letter to Yarmouth church, for fellowship. Mr. Bridge and Mr. Tillinghast went on the mission from Yarmouth about October, 1651. Brewster was with them from the first; he wrote the letter and was no doubt invested with them in the foundation but was not then chosen to the pastorate, for on Jan. 21st, 1651/2, the church at Alby desired advice concerning their call of Mr. Brewster unto office amongst them.

This Mr. Brewster must have been a man of some mark even in those days, for on October 31st, 1650, he was proposed in the Yarmouth church as 'a meet help for Mr. Bridge', though 'the voice went for Mr. Habergham'.

Mr. Brewster did not settle at Alby till about July, 1653, for on the 28th of June that year the Yarmouth church received a letter from them desiring 'that some of the elders and Mr. Bridge might be present at the setting apart of Mr. Brewster for their officer; which.....could not be assented to.....'

In 1655, August 16, Mr. Bridge reported that Mr. Nat Brewster was then the pastor of the Congregational Church at Alby and Thwait, and that the living was about £50. He did not long continue in this charge. In June, 1655 we find from a letter to Secretary Thurloe, that Mr. Brewster was then shortly going to Ireland on some business of State. He accompanied Lord Henry Cromwell thither and (July 18th) reported his arrival at Dublin, where he continued for some time.

He must have resigned his office at Alby about this time, and was succeeded, though perhaps not immediately, by Mr. John Lougher, who was ejected (in 1662) from Alby and Baconsthorpe.

A. G. Matthews, in Calamy Revised (Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1934) says on page 27, in connection with John Banister, said to have been ejected from Aldeby, Norfolk, in 1662:

Nathaniel Brewster was rector of Aldeby with Thwaite (Norfolk) by Sequestration, and pastor of Congregational church there in 1654, June. Calamy (1702) gives him as ejected (in 1662: sic) but without place of ejection. The sequestered rector, Richard Ransome, was restored and signed Parish Register, 1662.....

In Brookhaven the Reverend Nathaniel Brewster is recorded in the published Records of the Town of Brookhaven, as edited by Osborn Shaw, Archibald Weeks and others; a complete review of the so-called Brewster problem will be found in Genealogy as Pastime and Profession, by Donald L. Jacobus, pp. 93+; and in The American Genealogist, vol. XII, p. 199; vol. XIII, p. 8, 113, 154, 221; vol. xiv, p. 105. We have no desire to revive a dead issue, but the interested reader who wishes to review the arguments that the Reverend Nathaniel Brewster was son of Jonathan and grandson of the Elder William Brewster will find them in Rev. Nathaniel Brewster and his Wife Sarah Ludlow and Some of their Descendants, a typescript book by Mrs. May L. Sullivan of San Francisco, California, on file in the New York city Public Library; Sketch of Rev. Nathaniel Brewster, B. A., (sic) Harvard, 1642, "by one of his descendants" who refused to assume public responsibility for authorship; and of course the 1839, 1843 and later editions of The History of Long Island, by Benjamin Franklin Thompson.

The proofs against statements appearing in Thompson's History as given above, were given in part in The Brewster Genealogy, by Ella (Brewster) Jones; in an article entitled "Thompson and Brewster" appearing in The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 46, p. 4, under the subscript of John Denison Champlin; in the Ancestors of James Wilson Yates and his wife Nancy Davis Terry, by Mrs. Josephine C. Frost; and as submitted in the present work.

In the Pedes Finium, or Fines Respecting the County of Norfolk, published by the Norfolk and Norwich Archaeological Society, by the Rev. George Henry Dashwood, M. A., F. S. A., (1863) at p. 290 is given the pedigree of the Reymes family of Overstrand, Norfolk. This cites that John Reymes, of Edgefield, Norfolk, Esq., Justice of the Peace for Norfolk, presented to the Rectory in 1639, 1641, and 1662. His will dated 26 September, 1662, was probated in the Archdeaconry of Norwich, 30 May, 1663. The quoted abstract is as follows:

> I, John Reymes of Edgefield, Esq., (Norfolk)----to be buried in the church of Overstrand (Oxenstrand); ---to my wife (her Christian name is not mentioned); to my grandchild William Reymes, under 21; to my son-in-law, Nathaniel Brewster, who married my daughter; my late son-in-law, ... Dewing, of London, Beavermaker, and my daughter his wife; to my daughter Tillinghurst; to my two daughters Frances Dewing and .. Jeane Tillinghurst; to my son Robert Reymes his eldest son, when 20 years of age; to my daughter ..... Rowland; to my son-in-law, Mr. John Manning of Pesnall; to my grandchildren, Sidley Reymes and John Reymes; my son Robert Reymes, executor; Anne Dethick, a witness.

In The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 57, p. 97, under NOTES, unsigned, there is a commentary on places in Suffolk, and Nathaniel Brewster's English ministry is mentioned. This statement also appears:

> His first wife was probably Abigail, daughter of John Reynes (sic) of Edgefield, Norfolk, and his second wife Sarah, daughter of Roger Ludlow.

We are not aware of any record reciting the Christian name of the first wife of Nathaniel Brewster. It will be noted that her sister was the wife of a Tillinghurst, perhaps related to the minister who was influential in bringing Nathaniel Brewster to the notice of the Protector.

The associations of the second wife, Sarah Ludlow, are highly controversial; that she was named Sarah Ludlow there seems no valid reason to doubt. However, in view of allegations made concerning the connections of her supposed daughters Sarah (Brewster) Smith and Hannah (Brewster) (Muncy) Thompson, we desire to repeat parts of a communication to Osborn Shaw dated 4 February, 1935, and by the present writer.

As it happens, the projected first History of Long Island was about 1824, and the manuscript of Silas Wood is in the Library of Congress. This MS. (printed as the first edition in 1826)states that the ancestry of Nathaniel Brewster and his connections were obscure. In 1829 the second edition of Wood's History at p. 47 states that Brewster traditionally married Sarah Ludlow, and that the family reported to him that the Rev. Nathaniel was the nephew of the Elder William Brewster.

Now this account is from a man who was not related to Benjamin F. Thompson, the well-known historian, and who was dry and matter of fact (to the point of abruptness) in the presentation of his catalog of facts. It represents obviously what Silas Wood learned of the family between 1824 and 1829. Benjamin F. Thomp- had not then come into the limelight, and it may be doubted that he had started his history, inasmuch as in his preface to the 1839 edition of his own, ten years later, he gently chides Wood for valuing his case. Wood's account, therefore, is that of a wholly disinterested recorder, and undoubtedly is an honest account of what was stated to him.

It is now necessary to draw attention to the Thompson family itself. Dr. Samuel Thompson is stated to have been born 2 October, 1738 and died 17 September, 1811. He married first, Phoebe Satterly, 7 January, 1781, daughter of Jacob Satterly, a lady apparently unrelated to her husband; and their son was the Historian, Benjamin F. Thompson. Now presently she dies, and on 1[illegible] March, 1795 Samuel Thompson married Ruth, daughter of Timothy Smith of Smithtown, likewise supposed to have been descended on a Brewster connection. A son of this marriage was Samuel Ludlow Thompson, born 5 March, 1799.

If this Samuel Ludlow Thompson was really given the name Ludlow at the time of his birth it would seem to argue that the mother of this child, at least, was aware of the Ludlow ancestor. She seems to have been ancestor conscious, as the other child was named Mary Woodhull Thompson, after a paternal grandmother. This does not seem to be so true of Dr. Samuel Thompson's first wife, because Benjamin Franklin as a given name is sufficiently obvious in its derivation. Therefore one can suspect that most of the information Benjamin F. Thompson obtained, if this is true, was from his step-mother. With the father of the child sixty-one years of age at the time Samuel L. Thompson was born, one would suppose that his father, at least, would have heard in his younger days from his own ancestors who knew Sarah (Ludlow) Brewster, probably, what her name was.

Now we come to Thompson's History of Long Island. In 1839 the first edition is quite oblique in its statements. It is traditionally so that Nathaniel Brewster married Sarah Ludlow; it is "asserted" that Nathaniel Brewster was a nephew of the Elder William. In the 1843 edition there are two stories, one on page 423 in volume one, where it states that "His wife Sarah, it is asserted, was a daughter of the Hon. Roger Ludlow.....They had, it is supposed, no other than the three sons named, and one daughter, Hannah (sic), who first married John Muncy, and for her second husband, Samuel Thompson, son of John, one of the first settlers of Setauket." Further, it states that Hannah Brewster, alleged sister of Nathaniel Brewster, married John Thompson in 1656, and died at Setauket 4 October, 1687. In another reference in the second volume these have become categorically positive statements.

Now, let us resort to the latest edition: The History of Long Island, From Its Discovery and Settlement to the Present Time, by Benjamin F. Thompson, "revised and greatly enlarged" by Charles J. Werner, glorified in four volumes on fine paper. In volume 4, at p. 103 appears the following:

> Samuel Thompson, youngest son of John, was born March 4, 1668, became a farmer, and died in Setauket, July 14,1749, aged eighty one. He married November 6, 1709, Hannah widow of Mr. John Muncy, and daughter of the Rev. Nathaniel Brewster, who was,of course,* his cousin german. Her mother was a daughter of one of the founders of Dorchester, Mass., 1630, deputy governor of that colony, 1634.....
>
> The wife of Mr. Thompson was born May 19, 1679 (sic), married John Muncy, January 16, 1703, who died 12 June, 1707. She died November 7, 1755. His grave and that of his wife are at the southeast corner of the present Presbyterian Church in Setauket, and a portion of his tombstone is still to be seen there. His will, dated April 3,1745,makes his son Jonathan and two of his sons-in-law executors.....

Werner rehashes the foregoing in his Historical Miscellanies Relating to Long Island, p. 47. New gravestones have been erected at Setauket to mark the burial sites of Samuel and Hannah (Brewster) Thompson, and they perpetuate, unfortunately, the birth and death dates quoted.

In Early Long Island Wills of Suffolk County, 1691-1703, William Smith Pelletreau gives at p. 14 the administration of the effects of John Muncy, late of Brookhaven who had died 19 February, 1690/1. He left no executor and the widow Hannah was made administratrix 18 July, 1691. On 14 February, 1690/1, John Muncy told Timothy Brewster that he gave his son John one half and his brother Samuel the other half of his estate.

John Muncy's birth is recorded in the vital records of Ipswich, Massachusetts, 24 October, 1660, as the son of Francis and Hannah (Adams) Muncy, them of Ipswich.

It is evident that the dates quoted by Werner and his predecessors cannot be reconciled to these facts, and someone is convicted of error in stating that John Muncy died 12 June, 1707. Moreover, John Muncy had died before the alleged date of marriage to his wife, given as 16 January, 1703. Likewise, the date prescribed for the birth of Hannah Brewster, as wife of Samuel Thompson, would permit her to be not more than twelve at the death of her first husband, with one son already born. This may be considered barely possible, but it is more probable to us that Hannah was born in 1669, which fits in much more justifiably with the known facts.

Nathaniel Brewster was the son of

11. FRANCIS BREWSTER 1,396
m. LUCY

He was born about 1600 and presumably at or near the Castle of Bristol, in Bristol, England. No baptismal record is to be found.

On 13 March, 1614/5 he was apprenticed to Edward Harris of Bristol, Barber Surgeon,for a period of seven years from that date. This apprenticeship was completed and he was admitted to the Guild; he was a resident of Bristol and practicing there in 1628. On 28 July, 1628 he took an apprentice named John Anthonie, [illegible] of Thomas Anthonie of Bridgewater.

BREWSTER

Francis Brewster sailed from London, England for the American colonies in 1638, with Eaton, Davenport and others, and was a very early settler in New Haven, Connecticut. Here he was recorded with a family of nine in 1641; and was one of the few who were credited with an estate of one thousand pounds. The only wealthier settler was the Governor. Brewster was listed as having been allotted thirty five acres in the first division and owned seven acres "in the neck", and 54½ acres of meadow. He received 263 acres in the second division. In 1644 he took the oath of fidelity.

About this time Brewster invested fifty pounds in a vessel to be built by Captain Lamberton, and which was to be used in marine trading. Contemporary accounts criticise the construction of the boat as having been incompetent; despite this, in 1646 the completed vessel set sail for England. Francis Brewster is supposed to have been on board, and was never heard from again. In the same year his wife (or widow) Lucy had a seat in the church at New Haven, but he is not listed.

Before 1 February, 1647/8 the widow Lucy had married Thomas Pell of Fairfield, Connecticut, as on that date "Mr. Pell brought in and deliuered to the courte an inventorie of his wives estate, left by her late husband, Mr. Francis Brewster, w^ch was read and deliuered to the secretarie to be recorded." The inventory of the estate had been made 30 December, 1647, and amounted to 555 pounds, 6s 2d. Lucy had died before 21 September, 1669, when Thomas Pell made his will. She may have been buried in Fairfield. Her maiden name is not known; she was Francis Brewster's wife in 1628, and from the associations as evidenced by the records examined, we are of the opinion that she was mother of the children.

Issue:

1. Nathaniel, married 1, Reymes; 2, Sarah Ludlow. See p. 359.
2. Joseph, baptised at the parish church of St. Philip and St. Jacob, Bristol, England, 12 October, 1628. He was of New Haven, when he confessed on 6 October, 1645 to drinking sack in his father's cellar; and on 4 August, 1646 was a member of the train band. He may be the Captain Joseph Brewster who sent a muster book to the Navy Commissioners for his ship, The Dolphin, 1 June, 1653 (Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1652-3, p. 594). He has had a sickly ship, but has not lost a man since going on board. No further record.
3. Elizabeth. In Records of the Colony or Jurisdiction of New Haven by Charles J. Hoadley, M. A., 1858, Betty Brewster testified in an examination of Elizabeth Go(o)dman, 21 May, 1653, on trial for suspicion of witchcraft. It seems that Mrs. Goodman could tell what was going on in the adjacent environment without being actually there to witness it. Either Betty was hysterical or the victim of a hoax, for the Colony records quaintly recite that "Betty Brewster called the maide to tell her & said she was aboute her workes of darkness, and was suspitious of M^ris Godman, and spake to her of it, and that night Betty Brewster was in a most misserable case, heareing a most dreadfull noise w^ch put her in great feare and trembling, w^ch put her into such a sweate as she was all on a water when Mary Miles came to goe to bed, who had fallen into a sleepe by the fire w^ch she vsed not to do, and in y^e morning she looked as one yt had bine allmost dead". Elizabeth probably married and had issue.

4. Mary; probably married and had issue.

Probably other children.

NOTES

We have already referred to the American Genealogist, vol. XIII, pp. 8 and those following, wherein Francis Brewster and his connections are discussed. See also New Haven Colony Records, vol. 1, p. 93 (wherein Francis Brewster of New Haven had in 1641 a family of 9); p. 362 (when the inventory of the estate was returned to the Court); and also pp. 303, 343.

The will of Thomas Pell, dated 21 September, 1669, was proved 30 September, 1669; states that he had been denied natural issue of his body; that his wife "Luzy" was deceased at the time the will was made; and that his heirs were his nephew in old England, only son of his brother John Pell, "Doctor of devinety", which he had by his first wife; brother John Pell's daughters; to Abigail Bur, wife of Daniell Bur the best bed, silver spoons, etc.; to Daniel Bur all his horses and colts in New England and New York, excepting mares and mare colts; to his son ffrench; to Nathaniel ffrench; to Elizabeth White; to Mary White; to Nathaniel White. He remembers servants and forgives four poor men their debts. The executors were Daniel Bur and John Banks.

Since Dr. Pell had no children, the son French mentioned could not have been his own son-in-law, but must have been one of the sons-in-law of Mrs. Lucy ( ) (Brewster) Pell. In other words, one of the daughters who were living with the Pells in Fairfield at the time of the Staples trial had married a French; Nathaniel French was presumably her son. Following the analogy, Elizabeth, Mary and Nathaniel White were probably children of the other Brewster girl. It seems highly probable that these smaller legatees, who certainly were not relatives of Dr. Pell, were relatives of his wife.

In The Records of the Colony and Plantation of New Haven from 1638 to 1649, by Charles J. Hoadly, M. A., 1857, at p. 173 is the following:

> A Court held the 4th of November 1645.
>
> Bamfeild Bell being reproued by Wm Paine for singinge profane songs, answered & said, you are one of the holy brethren that will lye for advantadge. It was testified by the said W^m^ Payne & Joseph Brewster. Mr. Evance testified that it was his constant frame to reproach those that walke in the wayes of God. The premisses considered the centence of the court was that he should be seveerly whipped.
>
> Mrs. Brewster intreated the Court that the execution of the sentence may be respited till her husband come home, because he is her husband's kinsman.

To this writing, this relationship has not been explained.

Lucy Brewster herself had her difficulties with the theocracy of the day; the Court Records show her in a somewhat equivocal and unsubtle light. Her tongue was as sharp as her husband's influence was strong, and her social position probably saved her from a punishment which would have been visited upon one less well established. The results of her ardent gossip and the consequent tergiversations are spread on the Court Records:

> (At a Court held 2 June, 1646).
> Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. Moore & Mrs. Leach being warned about severall miscarriadges of a publique nature, appeared and were chardged severally as followeth:
>
> Elizabeth Smith late servant to Mrs. Leach, saith that hearinge Mrs. Brewster loud in conference w^th^ Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Moore & her Mrs. as she sate at worke in the next roome, shee called Job Hall, her fellow servant to heare also, who could better remember the particulars of such a conference than herselfe.
> Imp^r^mis, Job & Elizabeth both affirme that Mrs. Brewster repeating something of Mr. Davenports prayer to this purpose, Lord add to the church such as shalbe saved & build vpp to perfection those whom thou hast added; and speaking of his sermon said, Mr. Davenport makes the people beleive that to come into the church is as much as the receiving of Christ. Job saith she added, Mr. Davenport carryeth it as if they could not have salvation w^th^out comming into the church. What concerneth Job in this part of his testimony he gave in wrighteing, & affirmed before the magistrates, yet now in court was somewhat doubtfull whether he heard the words from Mrs. Brewster herselfe, or only heard Elizabeth repeate them from Mrs. Brewster. His best light, (he said,) serveth for the former, yet he was loath to give oath therein. The court blamed him that he had not better considered this before, yet wished him to deliver nothing vppon oath but what he was cleare in.

Mrs. Brewster as before the Governo^{r} & Mr. Goodyeare for-m^{r}ly, so now in court denyed the chardge.

2^{dly} Job & Elizabeth affirme that Mrs. Brewster speaking of somthing Mr. Davenport had deliuered vppon Ephes. 4, 12. concerning personall faith, that if a man lived where he might joyne to the church & did not, it would prove a deluzion to him. Job affirmeth that Mrs. Brewster said, when she heard it her stomacke wombled as when she bredd child, & spake it twise or thrice if not oftener in ref-ference to the sermon. Elizabeth saith, that twise or thrice she spake to that purpose, that she was sermon sicke, & that proceeding in conference she presently said that when she came home she hadd her son mak wast pap of it, w^{ch} she the said Elizabeth conceiveth was spoken in refference to the noats of Mr. Davenports sermon.

Mrs. Brewster denyed these words, sermon sick, or that it was in refference to the sermon, & those words of mak-ing wast paper &c, but confesseth she said her stomack wrought, smelling an ill savo^{r} in the seate, wherein she gave noe satisfaction to the court.

3^{dly} Job & Elizabeth affirme that Mrs. Brewster (in con-ference speaking of scandelous persons,) asked Mrs. Moore whether she had not heard for what Mrs. Eaton was cast out of the church. Mrs. Moore asked Mrs. Eaton why she did not confesse her sinne, Mrs. Eaton answered she had don it, but not to the churches satisfaction. Mrs. Brews-ter said if Mrs. Eaton had seen her light before she came into the church she had not come in.

4^{thly} Job & Elizabeth affirme that Mrs. Brewster speake-ing of the contributions said, it was as going to masse or going vp to the high altar, & being asked by Mrs. Moore why she then went to them, she answered, because her husband had comandéd her.

Mrs. Brewster denyeth that ever she spake of masse, or high alter in refference to the contributions the first time she heard of the word alter, applyed that way, was in the scate, Mrs. Lamberton speaking of that text, when thou bringest thy gift to the alter, but she saith Mrs. Moore asked what rule there was for going to the high alter in the contributions, but Mrs. Eaton defended the practise of the church.

5thly Job saith he heard Mrs. Brewster say that Mr. Fugill being at her howse proffessed vnto her that Mr. Eaton laid one thing to him wch if God should take him away that night, he did not know it to be soe, Mrs. Brewster added they goe two and two together, & writt down what scandalous persons say & soe hurrey them & compare their writeings, & if they find any contradictions they are chardged for lyes. She concluded, I pray God keepe mee from them.

Elizabeth remmembreth that Mrs. Brewster said, Mr.Fugill was charged by Mr. Eaton wth that he could not remmember nor owne if he should dye, & that shee concluded, God keepe mee out of their hands.

Mrs. Brewster denyeth that euer Mr. Fugill told her, or she to any spake of any thing chardged vppon him by Mr. Eaton wch he could not owne, but in generall, that something was chardged wch he could not owne, & she denyeth all the latter part, going 2 & 2 together, wrighting, comparing, chardging lyes, & her conclussion from thence.

6thly Job affirmeth that Mrs. Brewster asked Mrs. Leach whether she had any mynd to joyne wth the church, Mrs.Leach answered, noe, Mrs. Brewster asked whether she had not formerly had a mynd, Mrs. Leach answered, yes. Mrs. Brewster replyed, yor mother is a weoman of wisdom, this she doubled, yor mother is a weoman of wisdome, adding, she can teach you well enough at home. Elizabeth remembreth the question put to Mrs. Leach wth her answere as before, & that Mrs. Brewster replyed, her mother could teach her, or tutor her well enough at home, or words to that purpose.

Mrs. Brewster saith she told Mrs. Leach she had heard she was about to joyne wth the church but now declyned it. Mrs. Leach answered, (as formerly to Mrs. Wackman or some other of the church;) it was because she fownd soe manny vntruthes among them, but Mrs. Brewster denyeth that shee said her mother was a weoman of wisdom & could teach her at home.

7thly Elizabeth saith that Mrs. Brewster being asked by Mrs. Moore whether she saw the persons whipped.....about a month since, she answered noe, but they were cruelly whipped & that her son said he had rather fall into the hands of Turks, & hath rather be hanged than fall into their hands.

Mrs. Brewster denyeth that ever she spake of cruelty in their punishment, she rather thought they deserved more, & that the censure was mercyfull, nor euer did she heare her son speake of falling into the hands of Turks, though he spake somthinge pytying them that were first corrected that if he were fit for death, he would rather be hanged than soe whipped.

8thly Elizabeth saith that onn the fowerth day of the weeke, before Wm Preston was cast out of the church, Mrs. Brewster mett wth some sisters of the church betwixt her owne howse & Mr. Leaches, & seing her look sadd, Mrs. Brewster asked her what was the cause. The sister told her some passadges of Wm Prestons miscariadges for which the church was like to proceede against him, Elizabeth sath Mrs. Brewster related this to Mrs. Moore in a scoffing manner, adding in her speech to Mrs. Moore, I looked pittyfully when I spake wth the sister, as if I had been one of them; which Elizabeth conceiveth she did, to draw from the sister what shee could.

Mrs. Brewster confessed she mett wth Goodie Charles & spake with her, to the purport of the chardge, (in the first part,) imparteth, but denyeth the latter part, concerninge scoffinge & lookeing pittyfully, as if she had been one of them.

Job & Elizª both say, that Mrs. Brewster vsed to laugh & scoffe at all the former passadges they have respectively testified.

9thly Elizabeth Smith saith, that haveing bin forth & com into her Mrs. howse, she heard Mrs. Brewster, speaking lowd to Mrs. Eaton concerning banishment, say, they could not banish her but by a Gennerall Court, & if it came to that shee wished Mrs. Eaton to come to her & acquaynt her wth her judgment & grownds about baptizing, & she would by them seduce some other weoman, & then she, the said Mrs. Brewster would complayne to the court of Mrs. Eaton the other weomen should complayne of her as being thus seduced, and soe they would be banished together & she spake of going to Rod Island.

Mrs. Brewster confesseth the chardge, but saith she spake it in just & laughing, she was told, foolish & vncomely jesti are sinfull, but to harden one agaynst the truth who already lyeth vnder guilt, may not passe vnder a prtence of jesting.

10thly Job saith, that the last day of the weeke, being May the 9th, he was called vpp before Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. Moore & Mrs. Leach, at Mr. Leaches howse. Mrs. Brewster told him shee had bin where she had justified herselfe agaynst a great manny of his lyes & added, she would have him & his slutt, you & yo^{r} harlott, to the whipping post. Elizabeth saith that she being below in the howse at this time, heard the former words. Mrs. Brewster spake them soe lowd that, (as she conceiveth,) they might be heard into the midst of the streete.

Mrs. Brewster denyed those words, you & yo^{r} slutt, you & yo^{r} harlott, to the whipping post, in refference to Job Hall. Mrs. Moore & Mrs. Leach being questioned about them, acknowledged such words were spoken, but conceive, yo^{r} slutt, yo^{r} harlott, were not reffered to Job Hall, but to them the said Mrs. Moore & Mrs. Leach, Elizabeth standing in relation to Mrs. L each as her servant.

The court thought it scarce probable, the whole speech being continued to Job Hall, that yo^{r} slutt, yo^{r} harlott should be reffered to others, nor is it likly that Mrs. Brewster should cast any appearance of blame vppon Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Leach for Elizabeths miscarriadges, as yo^{r} slutt, yo^{r} harlott seeme to import.

11^{thly} Elizabeth saith that onn the same day, May the ninth, Mrs. Brewster told her that she went about carrying lies, to currey fauer to keepe her whores back from whipping, adding, she would call her nothing but whore and harlott till she had bin whipped and was marryed, then she must call her so noe more, & if the fellow did not come home he must take his money if he can get it, or els he must take it out in whippinge. Mrs. Brewster further said that Elizabeth told halfe truthes and halfe lies. Eliz^{a} answered, her halfe truthes will prove whole truthes. Mrs. Brewster replyed, will they so, you brasen faed whore. Elizabeth answered she was greived for her sinne, & desired to be soe all her days. Mrs. Brewster said, she had gotten a few of the fine words.

Mrs. Brewster denyed the word whore, she said she called her only harlott, she was told such rayling landguage was vncomely & sinful, Micaell the Archangell durst not carry it so wth the Divell, though he had matter enough against him.

12^{thly} Job affirmeth that Mrs. Brewster, speaking at Mr. Leaches howse of a conference she had with widdow Potter said, she asked her why she was not received into the church agayne, widdow Potter answered, because she could not leave Ed Parker, yet if they could shew her a rule for it, she would. Mrs. Brewster added, Parker is not vnder scandall, yet because he gave not satisfaction to the elder, they will not lett y^{m} marry.

Mrs. Brewster acknowledging the substance of this charge, saith that widdow Potter thought the rule they would hold forth would be against the marrying of him, & she conceiveth she heard either widdow Potter or Edw. Parker say he had bin with the elder, but had not given satisfaction in his account, & therfore thought they would not let him marry her.

Edward Parker & widow Potter being herevppon demanded, before the Governor, magistrates and eld^{rs}, how they vnderstood the churches proceedings, whether the widdow were kept out because she would not part wth Edward Parker, what reports they had made & to whom.

They both acknowledged severall conferences betwixt Mrs. Brewster and them. Edw. Parker saith he told Mrs. Brewster he did not know whether the church were against the marryadge or not, they did not make the match, nor did they goe about to break it off, but advized them to walke according to rule. Mrs. Brewster wished him to take 2 or 3 witnesses & goe to the magistrates & desire them to marry them, and if they reffussed it, then before witnesses to take one another & goe together. Edw. Parker saith he told her he would not doe soe, yet she pressed the former advize vppon hom 2 or 3 tymes. That she also said the widdow should doe well to confesse in a publik meeting that she had done him the said Edward Parker wronge in what she said of him, when to hold forth repentance she confessed her sinne intreating marryadge with him. He further saith that Mrs. Brewster shewed her dislike of the churches proceedings, & 2 or 3 times wished him to bid widdow Potter come to her before she came.

Widdow Potter saith that Edw. Parker told her that Mrs. Brewster disliked the churches proceedings & desired to speake with her, after w^{ch} widdow Potter going for some anyseeds, & Mrs. Brewster vnderstanding who she was, she had her sit downe, gave her a cupp of sacke & dranke with her, and as she remembreth, the first question Mrs. Brewster asked was whj (sic) she was not received into the church, her answer, (being sometime in a hurrey of sperit & apt to lay blame on on the church,) might probably bee, she was kept out of the church because she could not leave Edward Parker, though now she se cause to judge herselfe for it.

The elders severally and severall times haveing clearly expressed themselues in such manner as might wholly have freed her from such apprehensions, pressing they concluded nothinge in the case, but advized her to attend and submitt to rule when it should be held forth, she saith further that Mrs. Brewster hath often advized her to make an end of the buisinesse with Edw. Parker in the way she had propownded to him, & told her of 2 partyes in the Bay who had don soe, Widdow Potter also acknowledged her fault in telling Mrs. Brewster the latter part of a speech of Mr. Malbons, that if Edw: Parker should hange himselfe at her dore she might have peace in it, but not telling the former speech wh^r^in Mr. Malbon put the weight, the whole speech running thus, that she should keepe close to the rule, and in soe doing she might have peace though he should hang himselfe at her dore: she saith she concealed Mr. Malbons name, but Mrs. Brewster wondrd at her speech as she reported it.

Mrs. Brewster said, Edw. Parker & widdow Potter were hipocrits & she would prove them soe, what they spake was to curry favo^r^ that she might get into the church againe. She chardged Edward Parker that commings from the foresaid meetinge, he told her the govern^r^, (when he was examjned,)looked wissly vppon him, as if by Mrs. Brewsters confession he had knowne all before, and so drew things out of him and her mayde being called, spake to the same purpose. Edw. Parker denyed the chardge as it was layd,& the magistrats and ruling elder then p^r^sent cleared the govern^r^. Mrs. Brewster proceeding to perticulars concerning her famylyarity w^th^ widdow Potter an excommunicate person, she at first seemed to justifie it, saying her pastour in England admired that none of the sisters went to one Mrs. Bennett, cast out of a neighbour church for obstynacy in erro^r^, to reclayme her in a way of love. The Govern^r^ answered her pastour was absent, the court knew not what hee had spoken in the case, nor on what grounds, but for her to eate, drinke,& to shew such respect to excomunjcate persons did expressly crosse ye rule. Herevpon she denyed she had dranke w^th^ widdow Potter. Widdow Potter in court affirmed it,& added Mrs. Brewster drank to her. Mrs. Brewster said she dranke not though she putt the cuppe to her mouth, she asked whether any of the sacke went downe, widdow Potter said from her carryadge & outward appearance she apprhended she drunke, but could not say what quantity went downe. Mrs. Brewster herein gave much offense to the court, but she proceeding said, she disliked not the churches proceedings, but had wished Parker & widdow Potter to attend rule, and for the councell she gave them that they should goe to the magistrates, & before witnesse desire to be marryed, & if the magistrats refused, then before witnesses to take one another & goe together, she said she spake it in jest & laughed when she spake. Edward Parker confessed she laughed, but said she pressed it vppon him two or three times. Widdow Potter affirmed the same & that she gave instance in a couple in the Bay who had don soe. The court could not allow her answer in poynt of truth, the evidence was stronge agaynst her that notwithstanding any laughing or smyling contenanc, the advize was seriouslie given & pressed vppon the partyes severally upon each of them severall times, & sett onn from an instance in the Bay.

Mrs. Brewster was also chardged that contrary to an expresse & knowne order made by Newhaven Gennerall Court, she had retayled wyne both out of dores by forbidden small parcells, & had suffred workmen & others to set drinking wyne pyntes and quarts within her howse. She answered it was when there was noe other wyne in towne, & divers were either sicke or hadd neede of it. She was answered, she might have sold a butt or lesse quantity to Goodman Andrews who was intrusted to retayle& must be accomptable had there bin any disorder, she replyed he could not make pay to her content. She added that Mr. Goodyeare, Mr. Malbon & Mr. Evance, who are of the court, sent to her for small parcells, she hoped they would not lay snares for her. Mr. Goodyeare denyed that he had sent for small parcells. Mrs. Brewster said his wife had don it. Mr. Malbon & Mr. Evance answered, they had broken noe order in sending & were not willing to send for more then they must needs, on her terms. It was charged that she had vsed her howse as a taverne, suffringe company to come in & spend their money in drinking wine by quarts & pints, she said she had suffred none so but her workmen, she was answered, she might not suffer workmen so to drincke, but her answere was not true, as would be proued if there were cause, but she seemed to fall vnder it.

Mr. Malbon informed the court that Mrs. Brewster had said she would prove him a lyar, which he hoped she could not doe.

Mrs. Brewster said what she spake was because Mr. Malbon came to her howse and chardged her with things he could not prove, Mr. Malbon affirmed the matter was true, if there were any mistake in circumstances, it was not cleare whether the mistake were in him or Jonathan Rudd.

Edwd Parker said he could take oath Mrs. Brewster said she would prove Mr. Malbon a lyar, w^ch being spoken against magistrate, without a call, in a whisping way, besides refference to the ninth commandement, is an offensive, sinful miscariadge against the fift commandment, but Parker oath was not required.

Mrs. Brewster being asked what further she had to say either for herself or against the witnesses, shee was full of speeche [illegible] the mouth of the witnesses & to draw them to her, as if she would have over-ruled their testimony; she was told meeknesse & modesty would better become her in such a place. In anythinge she doubted or denyed, the court would tak noe evidence but vppon oath, she seemed to chardge the court as if she could not be heard, but being reprooved for such boldnesse contrary to truth, she fell to justifie herselfe that she approved Mr. Davenports ministry. If some one tyme he had not expressed himselfe so clearly and fully as at others she propownded questions for his information, and at last, going to Mr. Davenports, she was fully satisfied. She denyed that euer she vsed the words sermon sicke, or masse, or high alter, in refference to the contributions. She confessed she had rather have given twice as much in a private way to pastour or teacher, she went because her husband commanded her, yet afterwards she expresly denyed that her husband had commanded her.

Dyvers witnessing against her therein, she would have wound herselfe out of the contradiction by saying her husband allowed her to goe, then that her husband wished her to goe, but she gave noe satisfaction.

Then she laded the witnesses with reproach that she might disable their testimony, all of them were lyars, Job by his lying had bin the death of Mrs. Leach her child, w^{ch} (she not being able to prove,) was accounted a rash or false chardge. She saith he was taken in two lyes about her beinge sermon sicke, w^{ch} he had after denyed, and that Mrs. Malbon had bin the occassion of his sinne in telling lyes out of dores. Job denyed the chardge of lying. Mr. Godfrey being called to it, vppon oath testified, that Job had said he had sinned in reporting things out of the famyly, but Mrs. Malbon had sinned more in drawing them from him.

Which being duely considered, the magistrats deputyes severally expressed themselves that Mrs. Brewster had proved nothing to disable any of the witnesses.....

Nothing came of this, apparently, except work for the recording clerk.

The daughters Elizabeth and Mary testified 13 May, 1654 in the Staples slander suit in behalf of Roger Ludlow, the absent defendant (see LUDLOW). The record of the apprenticeship of John Anthonie to Francis Brewster appears in the Apprentices 1626-1636 of the City of Bristol; and in vol. VI of the Publications of the Bristol Record Society, The Deposition Books of Bristol, there appear certifications by the Mayor of Bristol, pp. 188-9, 209, relating to transactions in which Francis Brewster was concerned. These also appear in The American Genealogist, XIII, pp. 11, 12. Complementary assignments appear in The Aspinwall Notarial Records, published by the City of Boston, Massachusetts, pp. 46, 241, 246 and 248.

Francis Brewster was the son of 12. FRANCIS BREWSTER 2,792

m.

He was born probably in England, although the exact locality is unknown; and about 1570-5.

The first record of him that is reported occurs 6 April, 1602, when his daughter Gillian was baptised in the parish church of St. Philip and St. Jacob at Bristol, England. He was then a resident of the vicinity, and probably in the service of Sir John Stafford, who had received a grant of the Castle of Bristol from Queen Elizabeth in 1600. Francis Brewster certainly was of the Castle in 1615, when his son of the same name was apprenticed; during some of these years he was a buttermaker, and he called himself a yeoman.

Sir John Stafford died 28 September, 1624, and immediately thereafer an inquiry was made as to the condition of the Castle. In this inquiry reference was made to Francis Brewster as late collector of the rents; he evidently lived in mansion house of the Castle. King Charles I granted Brewster a lease of the Castle, its tenements and other property, on 23 August, 1626 "for 80 years from Michaelmas next if John Brewster, Gillian Brewster and Nathaniel Brewster so long live", at an annual rental of one hundred pounds.

However, conditions of the environment about the Castle were disliked by the City of Bristol, which presented a petition to the King 25 November, 1628, stating among other things that 200 persons dwelled within the precincts of the Castle; most of thom lived by begging. Also a great number of outlawed, excommunicated and other lewd offenders were tenanted there. The petition was considered and King Charles sold the Castle and Brewster's lease 26 October, 1630, to the city, the latter to have reversion of the lease at its expiration.

Thereafter Brewster paid the City of Bristol for his lease. He assigned the lease, evidently in trust, to Henry Willoughby and Willoughby later assigned it to John Brewster.

This was clearly a private arrangement by which the lease came directly to John Brewster at the death of Francis without probate or other legal proceedings. From April, 1630 to 27 September, 1632 leases of tenements in the Castle were made in the joint names of Francis and John. From a study of these leases, it appears that Francis Brewster must have died between 27 September and 16 October, 1632.

No will of Francis Brewster is found. He was probably buried in the graveyard of one of the parish churches of Bristol.

The name of his wife is not found.

Issue:

1. John, born about 1600, perhaps slightly before that date, and at Bristol, England. He was a resident of the Castle of Bristol in 1626 and as late as 1634. Further connections not reported.
2. Gillian, baptised in the parish church of St. Philip and St. Jacob, Bristol, 6 April, 1602, deceased before 1 October, 1634.
3. Francis, married Lucy . See page 389.

NOTES

References have been given under the succeeding generations. It is useful, however, to quote from The American Genealogist, XIII, pp. 12+:

> At the south-east of Bristol, where the rivers did not encompass the city, Robert, illegitimate son of King Henry I, built a large and strong castle for its defence. During the reign of Stephen, while the Earl of Gloucester was absent fighting for the Empress Maud, a lawless body of his partisans who occupied the Castle committed terrible outrages against the peaceable inhabitants of Bristol. A writer of that period gave this description: "On one part of the city where it is more exposed, a large castle rises with high ramparts, a wall, bullwarks and towers, and other contrivances to prevent the approach of besiegers. In the fortress a multitude of vassals, both horse and foot, are collected..... These freebooters, protected by a rich lord, and a very strong castle, ravage the fertile country with impunity."
> Robert is said to have built the Castle with stone from Caen in Normandy. An independent fortress just outside the walls of Bristol, in the neck of an isthmus between two rivers, it was included in the County of Gloucester, and was attached to the King's or Royal Barton. Few relics of its buildings now remain. The surviving appellation of Castle green, Castleditch, and Castle Street designate certain portions of its locality, and a few underground cellars, arched doorways and dark dungeons aid in tracing its principal buildings.

Attached to the Royal Barton, the Castle, for upward of five hundred years, was a dower for the queen, with but few intermissions. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Sir John Stafford, knt., was, as a reward for his valor, granted the constableship of Bristol Castle. This enabled him to draw its revenues during his life; and he seems to have been an absentee landlord, neglecting the property and permitting it to fall into disrepair. His rents were collected by an agent, who of course had no authority to improve the property. We do not know when the elder Francis Brewster became resident steward for Sir John, but we do know that he held that office at the time of Sir John's death, 28 Sept. 1624. Long before that, the Castle had become a thorn in the side of the City of Bristol, because the authorities of the City had no jurisdiction there. In times of "impressment" for war service, "draft-dodgers" could slip out from the City to the Castle, where they were in another county; and petty criminals could do the same. Some of the tenants in the Castle may, for a price, have opened their doors and given refuge to such characters. The City of Bristol could not apprehend them except by appealing to the authorities at Gloucester, thirty miles away.

The following abstracts of the original documentation detail the circumstances after the death of Sir John Stafford:

Exchequer Special Commission 3871
(Part 1)

Commission 29 Nov. 22 Jas. I (1624) to inquire as to condition of Bristol Castle of which the Constable, Sir John Stafford knight (appointed for life 17 March 42 Eliz. (1600)) is dead.

Inquisition at Bristol Castle, before the Mayor and others, 18 Jan. 22 Jas. I (1625).

The jurors say that Sir John Stafford died 28 Sept. last. The Castle and the buildings belonging to it are ruinous and in decay and not habitable for any person of worth, but will shortly fall to the ground unless repaired. They have deteriorated much under Stafford; the lead roofing is rotten and lets the rain through. Forty cottages or very small tenements are built within the castle precinct, at the very least; in these many poor families live, diverse of them getting a living by begging. The rents received by Stafford amounted during his term to at least £1000. If well kept and inhabited by honest persons, the castle with its houses would be worth £50 a year for letting.

Exchequer Special Commissions 3871
(Part 2)

Commission 19 Apr. 1 Charles I (1625) for further inquiry as to the condition of the Castle of Bristol; with articles as to the cost of repair, etc.

Inquisition at Bristol Castle, 29 Apr. 1 Chas. I (1 625) before the Mayor of Bristol and others.

The property is in bad condition; with time it would be possible to get out a good deal; the capital mansion house if repaired with the close belonging and the Inner Green would be worth to a tenant £20 a year.

"Frauncis Brewster late Collector of the Rents of the tenants in the Castle," present, lists on oath the tenements besides the mansion house, giving names of tenants and their rents. The jurors say many of the tenements are not fit for habitation; "the several rents have bin for many years past, vntil the death of Sir John Stafford paid from time to time unto Francis B(rewster) unto the vse of the said John Stafford." Some part of the rent due at Michaelmas remains in the hands of Francis Bruster.

26 Oct. 6 Chas. I (1630)

Deed 00861, Bristol Corporation

Indenture made 1 Oct. 10 Chas. I (1634) between John Brewster of the Castle of Bristoll, gent, one of the sons of Frauncis Brewster yeoman, dec^{d}, of the one part, and Andrew Charlton now Mayor of same city, John Barker and John Goning two of the aldermen of same city, and Henry Hobson late Mayor of same city, witnessing that whereas Chas I by letters patent dated 23 Aug. 2 Chas. I (1626) granted and to farm let to said Francis Brewster all the Castle of Bristol then in co. Glouc. that is to say all that mansion house etc. (as in Letters Patent) and tenements in tenure of John Brewer, smith, etc. (as in Letters Patent) to be held by Frauncis for 4 years (if the said John Brewster and Gillian Brewster and Nathaniell Brewster so long live) under yearly rent of £100: by force whereof said Frauncis entered into the premises and afterwards by an indenture of assignment dated 16 Apr. 5 Chas. I (1629) granted and sold to Henry Willoughby of Castle of Bristol, gent, all the promises granted in the letters patent, together with the letters patent.

Said Henry Willoughby by deed poll or deed of assignment dated 16 Feb. 8 Chas. I (1633) sold to said John Brewster all said Castle and premises mentioned in the letters patent, together with the letters patent and deed of assignment to be held by John Brewster for the remainder of the term (if said John Brewster and Nathaniell Brewster so long live) the said Gillian Brewster being before that time deceased. By force of which assignment said John Brewster entered into the Castle and is thereof possessed: Witnesseth now further this present indenture that said John Brewster for consideration of £ 520 hath granted bargained and sold to said Andrew Charlton and the others all the said Castle and premises granted by the letters patent together with the letters patent, deeds of assignment and all counterparts of leases and other writing touching the same, for the remainder of the term.

(A Schedule of Leases reserved from above, the rents to be paid to Charlton, is attached).

John Latimer in his Annals of Bristol in the Seventeenth Century, recounts not only the tenure of Francis Brewster in the Castle of Bristol, but also gives the economic background of the butter-making industry in which Francis Brewster was interested:

1621. About three years before this date, the King granted a patent to two Welshmen, giving them an exclusive right for 21 years to export from South Wales 6000 kilderkins of butter on payment of 1/ per kilderkin to the Crown. The patent was forthwith sold to a London merchant named Henley, who put a stop to the large and profitable business previously carried on in the same district by certain Bristolians. The latter then found it necessary to negotiate with Henley and for a ready money payment of £400, and an undertaking to pay the Crown rent with 2s per kilderkin to the patentee, they obtained a concession of 2/3 of the monopoly. The landed interest in Wales, deprived of an open market for their produce and seeing great profits made by the engrossers, naturally felt aggrieved and instructed their representatives (in the House of 1621) to complain to the House of Commons, whilst the Bristol merchants in great alarm, sent pressing requests to the City members to support their cause. The price of butter, it was alleged, had not been unduly enhanced in England, for through the care taken in supplying the Bristol market---a statement throwing a flood of light on the curious butter transactions of the Corporation---the price had not exceeded 4d a pound, even in times of scarcity. Fortunately for the monopolists, the House of Commons was not allowed time to remedy the Welsh grievances and the patent remained in force.

1630.....Concurrently.....the Corporation were carrying on a negotiation with the government for the purchase of Bristol Castle. On July 1st the Council petitioned the King on the subject, stated that they had expended £759 for billeting soldiers and transporting them to Ireland. His Majesty having lately granted a lease of the Castle to one Brewster, for three lives, at a rent of £100, the petitioners prayed that in consideration of the above outlay, they might be granted the fortress in fee farm at a rent of £40. The memorial was referred to Sir Thomas Fanshawe, who reported that on an inspection made in 1625 he found the ruins of the Castle exceedingly great, and the precincts covered with little cottages piled on the head of one another, and used as a sanctuary from arrests. As the only profit derived by the Crown was the rent of £100, which was not likely to be maintained, he thought a grant to the Corporation would not be prejudicial. The Lord Treasurer thereupon directed the grant to be prepared, but an additional sum of £200 was first wrung from the Corporation. .....

Brewster's rent of £100 was thenceforth received by the Corporation, but he profited largely from the rentals paid by the occupiers of the precincts, besides enjoying the occupation of the great mansion known as the Military House, with its extensive gardens. As was perhaps natural, the two parties concerned in the property were soon on bad terms. In April, 1632, Brewster, in a petition to the Privy Council, complained that though he had been at great charge in repairing the place---which probably means that he had been striving to increase his tenants and his rentals---he had been much wronged and hindered by the magistrates. Their Lordships thereupon instructed the Bishop, the Mayor, and the Sheriff of Gloucestershire and Sir Ferdinando Gorges to meet and hold an inquiry into the facts, and to report the result. No report is now to be found, but the Corporation doubtless found it desirable to get rid of an inconvenient tenant, and in 1634 Brewster's outstanding interest was acquired.....

An article on Bristol Castle with a plan of the Castle on a plate appears in Transactions of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society for 1878/9, vol. III, pp. 185-192.

The name Brewster arises from a very common trade, and is fairly well distributed about England. However, research has not given us to this date the ancestry of this Francis Brewster. In the research directed by Donald L. Jacobus, an examination of wills of the Brewster family of Wrentham, Suffolk was made. Neither in these nor in parish registers of the localities in which the latter family was located, was any record of a conclusive nature discovered. Among the sources consulted were The Index Library, Gloucestershire Wills, 1541-1650; The Index Library, Bristol Wills (i. e. Consistory Court, City and Deanery of Bristol Division); The Visitation of Gloucestershire, 1623 (Publications of the Harleian Society, vol. 21); Boyd's Suffolk Marriage Indexes (a manuscript in the Ipswich, England Public Library); numerous parish registers of Norfolk and Suffolk; Probate Records of the Archdeaconry of Suffolk; and other records as cited previously and hereafter.

In The Herts Genealogist and Antiquary, vol. 2, p. 228, is given the abstract of the will of William Bruster of Essendon, dated in 1583. It mentions his wife Joan; daughter Annis; sons John, Francis, Ralfe, Thomas and William; "Dards my sister"; son John to be executor; John Bunchleye overseer. The witnesses were John Bunchleye, Thomas Gyles, Edw. Bruster and Richard Butler. It was proved 19 March, 1583.

We have not been able to find anything further relating to the foregoing. This William Bruster may have been related to the Brewster family of Castle Hedingham, Essex, and whose first ancestor was one John Brewster, born about 1475. This branch of the family is published in Burke's Landed Gentry for 1863; it claims a connection with the Brewster family of Wrentham, Suffolk. We have not verified the accuracy of the following pedigree (abridged):

John Brewster, claimed from Suffolk, married and had a son Robert Brewster.

The children of this Robert Brewster are given as:

+ 1. William, married 1, Anne Clopton and 2, Mirabel Poley.
2. Richard, born about 1537, died in 1593, buried in St. Dunstans-in-the-West, London, with Alice his wife. Not traced further.
3. Robert. No further record.
4. John. No further record.

I. William Brewster, son of Robert Brewster, was born about 1535 and died in 1583. He married 1, Anne Clopton, dau. of Sir William Clopton of Liston Hall, Essex; married 2, Mirabel, daughter of Sir John Poley of Bedley, county Suffolk. Issue, by first wife:

5. William, born in 1562, married a daughter [illegible] of

John Wells of London, and had Anthony, John and William
6. Cordell. See below.
7. Catharine, married 1, Thomas Hardwick and 2, William Neville of York.
8. Bridget, recorded in the first edition of Burke, omitted in the second.

By second wife:
9. John, born in 1575, died in Ireland.
10. Edmund, died in 1633, buried in Badley Church, Essex.
11. William, of Great Bealings, Suffolk; died in 1624.
12. Thomas, of Wickham Market, Suffolk, died in 1645.
13. Anne, married 1, Thomas Kirby; 2, Sir Thomas Seckford; 3, Sir Richard Quarles.

In the New England Historic-Genealogical Register, vol. 54, p. 348, appears the abstract of the will of John Brewster of London, perhaps connected with the above line. It is dated 14 March 1605/6, probated 6 December, 1610. The children were Lawrence, John; Katharine, Johane; to Bridget, daughter of John Brewster; to Sarah, Bridget and Stephen, children of Stephen Cooke and Joan his wife; wife Katharine.

Cordell Brewster, son of William Brewster (see above) is found in Gloucestershire as quoriant in fines. In Pedes Finium, or Excerpts from the Feet of Fines in the County of Gloucester, from the 30th Elizabeth to the 20th James I., by Sir John Maclean, F. S. A., F. R. S. A., etc., at p. 129 the following appears:

34 Elizabeth, Hilary
At Westmr in 8 days of St. Hilary, 34 Elizabeth.
Between Humphrey Webbe and Cordell Brewster, q., and John Throckmorton, esq., and Juliana his wife, and John Wye, esq., def., of the Manor of Overlippiatt, Frampton Maunsell, Corse and Rodmarton, Tidburye, Saperton, Strowde, Bisley, Wynstone, Syde, Tredyngton, Walton Cardiffe, Torleton, Hollyrode, Ampney, Michelhampton, Camden, and Cheltname, Charlton Kynges, Tewxburye, Moreton Henmarshe and Southwick, and of the Advowson of the Church of Rodmarton, co. Glouc. And of the Manors of Bentham and Pynchyncombe alias Pichcombe with appees and 12 mess. etc. and 10 shillings rent in Bentham and Pichincombe alias Pichcombe in the County of the City of Gloucester and of 5 mess. etc. in county Wilts. Whereupon, etc.

Warranty to Humfrey and Cordell and the heirs of Humfrey against John and Juliana and their heirs and against John Wye and his heirs. And for this, etc., they have given to the said John and Juliana and John and Juliana and [illegible] John, £841.

In The Genealogical Quarterly Magazine for October, 1903, edited by Eben Putnam, at p. 189 is given the abstract of the will of > Richard Allen, citizen and haberdasher of London..... 8 February, 1558, probated 3 ( ) 1559, mentions wife Sybil, etc. brothers George and William James; "Cosen Agnes Mellowes towards her preferment in marriage with William Brewster, £3; and if she doe not marrye him onlie 40s and a silver spoone. To William, if he marrye Agnes, a spoone." Chayney, 32

The foregoing entries are given as having possibly some bearing upon the connections of this Francis Brewster. See also The Publications of the Harleian Society, 1934, vol. 86, p. 252(The Visitation of Norfolk); The Visitation of Suffolk, 1561, edited by Walter C. Metcalfe, F. S. The kind permission of Donald L. Jacobus and of Miss Sarah Diodati Gardiner is acknowledged, wherein we have used material gathered in their Brewster research.

The ancestry of Francis Brewster is unknown.

FIRST AND SECOND LINES

8. & 9. EVA BRILL 233; 497
m. JOHANNES JUNG (YOUNG) son of Johann Eberhard Jung and Anna Gertrud Schmidt

She was born probably in the Rhine Palatinate, and about 1708. The record of baptism has not been found.

She was very probably a member of the family of Johannes Brill who emigrated in June 1709 through Holland to England. Shortly after that date and by the latter part of 1710 she had emigrated to New York; and about the same time removed to Fishkill in the latter province. Eva Brill married probably at Fishkill and about 1730 to Johannes Jung. They resided there; 16 January, 1732 she was recorded as a member of the Dutch church of Fishkill.

She was sponsor at the baptisms of her grandchildren, children of Abraham Young, at Hopewell, New York, as late as 21 February, 1773. There is some reason to believe that she was a resident of Hopewell in her later years.

No further record of her has been discovered.

For descendants see YOUNG - JUNG, #232, 496.

NOTES

Apart from the references listed under YOUNG - JUNG, we find very few records of the Brill family. While there is no positive proof, the rareness of the name, its German associations, point clearly to Johannes Brill and a wife Anna Margaretha as the parents of Eva Brill. She evidently had a brother David who appears as a sponsor to the baptisms of her children, and the Jung family reciprocated in like fashion. Were this true, these two children fit perfectly as the only daughter and only son of Anna Margaretha Brillin (the surname is feminized in the German nomenclature) who was on the subsistence list on Governor's Island in New York harbor from 1710 to 1712. No other Brills are found on the list, which with other lists of a most comprehensive scope have been published in Early Eighteenth Century Palatine Emigration by Walter Allan Knittle, Ph. D.

In the General History of Dutchess County, published by Philip H. Smith in 1877, a genealogy of a Brill family appears at p.499. This states that > John Brill came from Germany, soon after marriage and purchased a large tract of fertile land south and west of Poughquag (in Beekman). It is worthy of note that much of the land is still in possession of his ancestors (sic!), the farms of the Brill family lying contiguous to each other from Poughquag to Green Haven, a distance of two miles.

We are of the opinion that Mr. Smith undoubtedly obtained his records from members of the family living about 1870-1875. This John Brill referred to did not come from Germany, and in fact was baptised in the Dutch church at Poughkeepsie 6 May, 1724, as the son of David Brill and Catharina Peeh (later, Peek). However, if David Brill is considered the son of the Johannes Brill who went from Holland to England and whose widow Anna Margaretha emigrated to New York, the family tradition is partly satisfied. It is undoubtedly true here that the Johannes Brills in question havebbeen merged into one, whereas they were grandfather and grandson.

With these circumstances in mind, we say therefore that

Eva Brill was the daughter of

9. & 10. JOHANNES BRILL 466; 994
m. ANNA MARGARETHA

He was probably born in the Rhine Palatinate, and about 1680.

Johannes Brill and his wife were in the Third Party of the Embarkation Lists from Holland, June 5 to 10, 1709, which describes the third emigration of that year from Germany to England via Holland. At this time he is listed with three children.

He probably died either in England or on the high seas sailing to New York, for in the New York Subsistence lists the widow is given with two children, a boy and a girl. One of the children had likewise died young. Anna Margaretha was deceased before 16 January, 1732, at which time her son was a member of the Dutch church in Fishkill, New York. Her maiden name is not found, and it is not known where she was buried.

Issue (as we believe):

1. David, born in Germany in 1702, a resident of Fishkill, New York from 1723 until 1738, and a member of the Dutch church of that place as recorded 16 January, 1732. He married Catharina

Peck, evidently daughter of Andreas Friedrich Peck and his wife Veronica, whose descendants are represented in the Peck family of Dutchess county, New York. Their children were, the first one certainly, the remainder most probably:

i. Johannes or John, baptised in the Dutch church at Poughkeepsie, New York, 6 May, 1725, sponsors Ary Kool, Marytjen Pik. He was a resident of Poughquag in Beekman, Dutchess county, and the genealogy of certain of the descendants will be found in The History of Dutchess County, New York (1877), by Philip H. Smith; and also in The History and Genealogy of the Pearsall Family in England and America, by Clarence E. Pearsall et al., III, p. 1,222. This John Brill married Elizabeth Peck, probably a cousin. Issue, according to various authorities:

A. John, born 30 July, 1756, died at Beekman, New York, 6 September, 1832. He married Hannah Cornell, born 19 September, 1756, died at Beekman, New York, 3 May, 1829. This record is amplified by the bible record in possession of Mrs. Fred E. Wood of West Winfield, New York, copied by Edith Leckey, General Winfield Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and filed in the library of the latter at Washington, D. C. According to Mr. Clarence E. Pearsall, Hannah Cornell was daughter of Thomas Cornell, junior. Issue:

Issue by first wife were Jemima, died 1 May, 1845, aged 28 years, 2 months; Rowland, died 6 October, 1888, aged 67 (his wife Ann R. died 2 January, 1868, aged 41). By second wife: Mary Elizabeth.

Perhaps others.

2. A child who died before the emigration to North America.

3. Eva, married Johannes Jung or Young. See page 411.

NOTES

We have referred to certain sources of information in the text; these have constituted most of those used.

In a list of Germans from the Palatinate who came to England in 1709, published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 41, p. 10, appears the name of Michael Brill, who was a linen and cloth weaver, aged 21, single and Roman Catholic. He was undoubtedly returned to Germany with the other Catholics, as Queen Anne did not contemplate securing an emigration for any but Protestants. As the Brills in Dutchess county were Lutherans invariably when of record, this excludes Michael Brill from further consideration. Another entry of a different name is given by Dr. Knittle in the Fourth Party which embarked from Holland to England, sailing 21 June, 1709; therein appears a Joost Brüll and his wife only. No further record of them is found.

The interested reader is further referred to Old Gravestones of Dutchess County, New York, under the Town of Beekman, compiled by J. Wilson Poucher, M. D., and Helen Wilkinson Reynolds; to the D. A. R. Lineage Books, indexed against John Brill. In the Library of the National Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the catalog gives the following references to members of the Brill Family: History of Hendricks County, Indiana, by John V. Hadley, p. 598; History of Sac County, Iowa, by W. H. Hart, p. 536; History of St. Paul, Minnesota, by H. A. Castle, v. 3, pp. 1,034 - 1,036; Compendium of Western Nebraska, the Alden Publishing co., p. 398; History of Warren County, New Jersey, by Cummins, p. 295; History of Herkimer County, New York, by G. A. Hardin, pp. 485-7; History of Saratoga County, New York, by N. B. Sylvester, p. 470; Shenandoah Valley Pioneers, by T. K. Cartmell, p. 500; History of Whatcom County, by the Pioneer Hist. Publishing Co., vol. 2, p. 828; History of Hampshire County, West Virginia, by Maxwell and Swisher, p. 701; History of Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, p. 1,019; History of Outagamie County, by T. H. Ryan, b. 898. We regret that want of time has prevented us from examining most of the foregoing.

In The History and Genealogy of the Pearsall Family in England and America, by Clarence E. Pearsall, it is stated that Toussaint Briel (to give him his proper name) was the ancestor of the Brill family as given herein. Toussaint Briel was a French Huguenot who appears early in New Amsterdam, and whose issue, if any, is utterly unknown. The statement that he was ancestor of the present family is absolutely without foundation; he probably died without issue.

The ancestry of Johannes Brill is unknown.

8. DEBORAH BRUSH 245
m. RICHARD WEEKS

She was born at Huntington, New York in or about 1744, and baptised in the First church at that place 1 April, 1744.

She was called of Oyster Bay, New York when she married in St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead, New York on 15 April, 1764 to Richard Weeks of Oyster Bay. They probably resided at or near Lloyd's Neck until after the death of her husband. As his widow in 1790 she is listed as a resident of Oyster Bay in the census; in later years, however she was a resident of West Islip, New York with her son Jonas Weeks.

She died either at West Islip or at Huntington, New York, and recorded at Huntington, 2 August 1810. The cause of death was apoplexy. No will or administration is found.

For descendants see WEEKES - WEEKS, Sixth Line, #244.

NOTES

The baptismal record appears in Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723 - 1779, edited by Moses L. Scudder, p. 38; the marriage record in Adventures For God, by John Sylvanus Haight, p. 175, correcting Conklin Mann's article in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record on the Brush family, v. 66 (1935), pp. 201, 283, wherein the year of marriage is incorrectly given as 1769. The date of death was taken from the original records of the First church at Huntington.

Deborah Brush was the daughter of

9. JONAS BRUSH 490
m. AMY (PERSEN or PEARSALL) believed daughter of John Persen or Pearsall and Margaret

He was born probably at Huntington, New York in 1702.

He received land from his father by deed of gift, 28 September, 1724; he was old enough to shear sheep 19 May, 1716 for Rebecca Wood, wife of Joseph Wood and his presumed aunt by marriage. Rebecca Wood again bought materials charged to his account in the Account Books of Henry Lloyd, 4 August, 1732.

He owed Henry Lloyd a balance on 1 January, 1731 and on 24 February, 1732 he paid the account of his sister Mary Brush.

During these years he was a resident at West Hills, Huntington, New York, and signed in 1731 a disclaimer to Henry Lloyd with other townsmen of Huntington. Jonas Brush with his wife Amy, deeded a home lot and farm at West Hills to Samuel Brush on 1 May, 1743. On 30 March, 1748 Jonathan Pratt, cordwainer of Jericho in the town of Oyster Bay, deeded land to Jonas Brush of Huntington; and Huntington laid out land to his name 15 April, 1754. Probably he was living west of West Hills and across the Oyster Bay-Huntington town line in the section designated Eastwoods, 18 April, 1758, when as of Oyster Bay he mortgaged his land to the County loan officers for twenty-five pounds. The mortgage was discharged 17 April, 1759.

He appears last in Huntington records in 1761, when he was assessed on a forty-pound evaluation. He probably had died before the assessment lists of 1764 were made out, as his name is absent therefrom. No will or administration of his estate is found.

His wife was Amy, who is believed to have been a daughter of John Persen of Jamaica. For a discussion of her ancestry, see the NOTES following; she is considered to have been the mother of the children.

Issue (very certainly):

1. Pierson, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, New York, 25 January, 1735/6; died young.
2. Jonas, baptised 5 December, 1743; apparently of Woodstock, Ulster county, New York.
3. Richard, baptised 1 April, 1744.
4. Deborah, married Richard Weeks. See page 417.
5. Pearsall (as he signed his will in 1829), baptised in the 1st Church at Huntington, New York, 20 July, 1746; a refugee from Huntington, New York to Norwalk, Connecticut, where he was in 1780. He was of Bethpage in 1790 and subsequently a cartman in New York city. He married 22 March, 1770 to Elizabeth Brush. Issue:
   - i. Hannah, born 19 June, 1770, married 2 February, 1793 to Wait Pearsall.
   - ii. Abigail, born about 1772, married William Powell.
   - iii. Jonas, born about 1774, married at Huntington, New York 18 January, 1797 to Rachel Weeks, daughter of George and Mary (Kellum) Weeks of Huntington South. Issue.
   - iv. Elizabeth, born about 1776, married 1 March, 1799, Peter van Cott.

v. Catharine, born in 1781, married Jeremiah Woolsey.

6. Anne, baptised at Huntington, New York 16 October, 1748, married Tunis van Cott of Bethpage 5 February, 1775.
7. Amy, baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, 14 April, 1751; married 12 September 1775 to Isaiah Whitman, son of Zebulun and Phoebe (Jarvis) Whitman. They removed to Hamilton county, New York.

Issue (probably):

8. Johanna, baptised at Huntington, New York, 6 February, 1736/7.
9. Margaret, baptised 28 October, 1739, married as his first wife to Simon Losee, 5 March, 1759, son of Simon and Phoebe (Lewis) Losee of Oyster Bay, New York. See LOSEE.

NOTES

The foregoing has been taken very largely from the article entitled Thomas and Richard Brush of Huntington, Long Island, by Conklin Mann, and published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 66 (1935), beginning p. 201.

That Deborah Brush who married Richard Weeks was a daughter of Jonas Brush is not only assured from the conclusions given by Mr. Mann, but also by family record. Jonas Brush, son of Pearsall Brush, was known as a relative of Jonas Weeks of West Islip, New York (see WEEKES - WEEKS, Sixth Line); and as Jonas Weeks was a son of Richard and Deborah (Brush) Weeks, this relationship becomes apparent.

Refer also to Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723 - 1779, edited by Moses L. Scudder, pp. 31, 32, 34, 37, 38, 40, 41 and 44; The Lloyd Account Books, in possession of the Long Island Historical Society, Brooklyn, New York; and to Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederick G. Mather, p. 284.

Conklin Mann writes in the article quoted above, relative to Amy, wife of Jonas Brush:

> His wife evidently was Amy Pearsall of the Hempstead-Oyster Bay family. Two of their children were baptized Pierson. The survivor signed himself both Pierson and Pearsall in the Revolution, but when he made his will in 1829 called himself Pearsall. Moreover the Rev. Mr. Prime in entering baptisms for the Pearsall family frequently spelled the name Pierson. However Henry Pierson and his wife Abigail Ludlum of Southampton had a daughter Amy, born 11 Oct. 1716, who may have married Jonas Brush.

We have made a reasonably exhaustive study of the Pierson, Person and Pearsall families in an endeavor to ascertain the ancestry of the wife of Jonas Brush. It does not seem possible that she was descended of either Henry or Abraham Pierson, and it is equally certain that she was not descended of the Persen or Person family of Kingston and Albany, New York. This last statement is made notwithstanding the fact that she was undoubtedly baptised as Ami Persen in the Dutch church at Jamaica, New York, 12 October 1714, daughter of Jan Persen and his wife Margaret. The sponsors at the baptism were Hendrick and Maria Doesenburgh; we strongly suspect that the latter were the child's grandparents. This baptism is transcribed in vol. II, at p. 26 of the typescript Dutch Church Records of Jamaica, New York, as edited by Mrs. Josephine C. Frost.

No other conclusive reference to this Jan Persen is found. As Amy Brush insisted upon giving the name of Pearsall to two of her sons (one of whom died in infancy), we agree with Mr. Conklin Mann's suggestion that her maiden name was actually Pearsall. In the printed Records of the Towns of North and South Hempstead, New York, edited by Benjamin D. Hicks, vol. II, p. 495, appears a deed wherein Elias Dorlon and his wife Miriam conveyed 8 June, 1716 to John Pearsall for £20 two certain lots lying in Hempstead, bounded by Joseph Smith, Richard Smith deceased and Mary Dosenborowe to the Meeting House. This undoubtedly refers to the John Pearsall whose earmark was entered on p. 167 of the same volume, 14 June, 1711; the latter was son of Daniel and Emma (Bassett) Pearsall. John Pearsall made his will 8 August, 1740, and it was proved 28 August, 1741. It is recorded in Liber 13 of Wills at New York city, New York, p. 450; mentions his wife Martha, four sons John, Daniel, James and Samuel and makes Daniel Searing, Samuel Pearsall and Jacob Smith executors. The fact that no daughters were named does not indicate necessarily that there were none; and the wife Martha cited in the will may have been a second wife. As the surname Pearsall was used on Long Island only by the connections of this family, and as this John Pearsall is the only possible identity that we have found, we are of the opinion that he was the father of Amy (Pearsall)Brush. This assumes, of course, that Amy was originally surnamed Pearsall; the reader will remember nevertheless, that this is not proved.

However, Jan Persen may have descended from the Parsell family of Newtown, New York. If Margaret, wife of Jan Persen, was a daughter of Hendrick Doesenburgh, her sister Maria was the wife of Arthur Alburtis. The latter removed from Newtown to Jamaica and finally settled in Hempstead. Hendrick Doesenburgh and his wife Maria were sponsors to the baptism of John, son of Edward and Marregriet Cornell in the Dutch church at Jamaica, 10 August, 1718; because of this we suggest that John Person may have died shortly after the baptism of his daughter Ani and that the widow was in 1718 the wife of Edward Cornell. The Genealogy of the Cornell Family by John Cornell gives no information concerning the wife or wives of Edward Cornell, and it states further that the son John was born about 1710. This is, as has been noted, eight years too early. Edward Cornell made his will 4 October 1770 (it was proved 20 November, 1782, recorded Liber 35, p.166, New York Wills); however he does not mention the name of his wife nor any possible Pearsall or Doesenburgh connections. Similarly the will of Hendrick Doesenburgh, as that of Henry Dusenberry, and dated 1 December, 1742, mentions no daughter Margaret, no sons-in-law by the name of Pearsall or Cornell. For reference to this last will, proved 9 May, 1743, see Liber 15, p. 52 of New York Wills.

If Jan Person was descended of John Parsell alias Butcher of Newtown, New York, he is perhaps to be identified with the probable son of John and Maria (Pernam) Parsell who married in the Reformed Dutch church in New York city, 16 May, 1715 to Elizabeth Brouwer. Under such circumstances the wife Margaret must have deceased shortly after the baptism of her daughter Amy. Very little is known of this John Parsell, and his will has not been reported.

Lastly it is possible, although we think it improbable, that the father of Amy was an immigrant to Long Island (or elsewhere) and not related in any immediate sense to any of the foregoing. It is regretted that these comments are all that can be contributed towards a solution of the ancestry of Amy Brush at the present time. The research in the published material relating to the Pearsall genealogy has developed one of the most unsatisfactory situations ever experienced by this writer (see PEARSALL), and it became necessary to publish the facts. The reader is referred to an article published by Arthur S. Wardwell and the present writer in The American Genealogist, vol. 18, pp. 78-88 and pp. 153-165, entitled "The Fabulous Pearsalls".

Jonas Brush was the son of

10. RICHARD BRUSH 1952
m. DEBORAH

He was born at Huntington, New York, 28 September, 1673, and presumably named after his father.

As Richard Brush junior he bought a 100 pound right in commonage of Robert Kellum and the latter's wife Hannah, 28 June, 1698, and on 22 December, 1709 he made a land agreement with his father and brother Thomas Brush in which he, as eldest son, agreed not to disturb the holdings of his brothers Robert and John Brush. He received land from Thomas Higbie on 8 August, 1710; and served in Captain Edward Higbie's military company in 1715.

He died probably shortly after September, 1724, and was presumably buried at Huntington, New York.

Richard Brush married Deborah, whose maiden name has not been proved. It is indicated from the Account Books of Henry Lloyd that she may have been a daughter of Samuel Wood of Huntington, son of Jonas Wood called "Halifax". After the decease of Richard Brush Deborah married Thomas Everett of Oyster Bay in 1730. She was without doubt the mother of Richard Brush's children.

Issue:

1. Richard, born at Huntington, New York about 1698, served with Captain Edward Higbie's company in 1715. On 20 August, 1725, Joseph Close of Greenwich, Connecticut deeded lands in Stamford, Connecticut to Richard Brush of Greenwich. These lands lay on Timmons Ridge on the Bedford road and at the Stamford-Greenwich town line, close to the colony border, and are referred to as late as 1742 as lands of Richard Brush deceased, in descriptions of lands owned by other members of the Brush family. On 5 September, 1727 Solomon Close of Greenwich, Connecticut, and Stephen Brush (residence not given) as administrators on the estate of Richard Brush deceased, late of Greenwich, exhibited an inventory for £229/2/8. Richard Brush married Elizabeth Close, born in Greenwich 11 July, 1704, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Tompkins) Close of that place. Issue:
    i. Richard, born at Greenwich, Connecticut, 19 December, 1727.
2. Stephen, born at Huntington, New York about 1700, received land from his father by deed of gift 28 September, 1724. He deeded this land to Robert Brush 11 March, 1725, and to Samuel Brush 15 March and 4 May, 1725. On 6 April, 1725 the town of Huntington granted him land next to his farm at Cold Spring; that part which was to have joined to the land of Edward Brush he allowed the latter to have. He had apparently removed to Greenwich, Connecticut by 1727, for on 5 September of that year he with his brother-in-law Solomon Close of Greenwich were administrators of the estate of his brother Richard. He was of New Fairfield in May of 1740 when the inhabitants of that place petitioned the Connecticut Assembly to establish the town as such. He had removed to Salem, Westchester county, New York, before 27 April, 1751, and resided there until his death, which occurred before 16 April, 1759. The surname of his wife Mary is not known. Their children were:

i. Ruth, born in 1726.
ii. Hannah, born 7 November, 1728.
iii. Stephen, born about 1730.
iv. Mary, born about 1732, married 8 August, 1754, John Todd at Salem, New York.
v. Deborah, born about 1734, married John Morehouse at Ridgefield, in 1753 or 1755.
vi. Rebecca, born about 1736, married 23 December, 1756, Abijah Gilbert.
vii. Sarah, born 9 November, 1738, married 3 February, 1760, Petit Baxter.
viii. Joanna, born about 1740, married 5 October, 1769, Ephraim Gilbert.
ix. Richard.
x. Joseph.

3. Jonas, who married Amy (Persen or Pearsall). See p. 417.
4. Deborah, born at Huntington, New York, about 1706/7; died 26 September, 1765, and buried at Salem Center, New York. She married in the First church at Huntington 27 March, 1728 to Solomon Close of Greenwich, Connecticut.
5. Johanna, born at Huntington, New York, about 1708.
6. Mary, born at Huntington, New York about 1710, had an account with Henry Lloyd 1 January, 1731, which was paid for by her brother Jonas Brush 24 February, 1731/2. She probably is the Mary Brush who married John Satterly in the First church at Huntington, New York, 26 May, 1735.
7. Thomas, born in 1715 in Huntington, New York, died at New Fairfield, Connecticut, 1 November, 1802. His will, dated 15 January, 1796 was proved 10 November, 1802. He was a resident of New Fairfield, Connecticut by 10 March, 1747/8. Thomas Brush was commissioned Ensign of the South New Fairfield militia in May, 1751, Lieutenant in May, 1752, and in 1751 was also appointed Justice of Fairfield County, an honor which he held many years. He with his wife were members of the New Fairfield church, 29 March, 1758. He married Lucy Ball, daughter of Alling and Lucy (Griswold) Ball, who died at New Fairfield, 25 June, 1811, aged 94. Their children were

i. Thomas, born in 1745.
ii. Mabel, married 15 February, 1764, Lewis Hall.
iii. Eliphalet, born in 1749.
iv. Lucy, married at New Fairfield, Conn., 16 September, 1759, Isaac Lacey.
v. Amy, married 20 August, 1770, Adonijah Rice.
vi. Amos, born in 1753.
vii. Jonas, born 20 April, 1755.

viii. Eli, born 6 June, 1757.
ix. Mindwell, born in 1759, married 1, 24 November, 1773, Daniel Smith; married 2, Abijah Starr.

8. Zacheus, born at Huntington, New York about 1717, died shortly before 27 August, 1812, when his will, dated 27 August, 1800, was examined in court. On 31 October, 1815 Cornwall Smith of Harpersfield, Delaware county, New York was named administrator. Zacheus Brush was a resident of New Fairfield, Connecticut, commanding Ensign of the South Society of New Fairfield (4th Connecticut Regiment), in May, 1761. He was commissioned Lieutenant in October, 1765 and Captain in October, 1767. He with his wife were members of the New Fairfield church, 29 March, 1758. Zacheus Brush married Hannah Pardee, born 28 March, 1728, daughter of Ebenezer and Martha (Moulthrop) Pardee, for his first wife; married 2, Abigail Ball, 10 November, 1791. Issue, by first wife:
i. Martha, married 13 February, 1775, Cornwall Smith.
ii. Zacheus.
iii. Hannah, married John Bishop Hall.
iv. Dorcas, born 29 November, 1760, baptised 5 January, 1761, married 24 November, 1791, James Nash.
v. Ebenezer, born 31 May, 1762, baptised 3 June, 1762 at New Fairfield, died in August, 1762.
vi. Son, died an infant, 13 May, 1763.
vii. Mary, baptised 24 May, 1772 at New Fairfield, d. young.
9. Mindwell, born about 1720, married 6 November, 1739, Matthew Bunce.

Richard Brush was the son of

11. RICHARD BRUSH 3,904
m. JOHANNA SAMWAYES daughter of Richard Samwayes and Esther Horsford

He was born probably in England, and about 1640.

It is believed that he was the Richard Brush, aged 18, servant of Mr. Joseph Cooke of Cambridge, Massachusetts, who testified in the Court at Cambridge, 6 April. 1658, when Mr.

Cooke won a verdict from Isaac Hart of Redding relative to the recovery of a stray horse. Richard Brush is not found again in Massachusetts. As Joseph Cooke returned to England immediately after the trial, it is reasonable to indicate that he left Richard Brush behind in the Colonies, and that Richard Brush of Massachusetts and the later Richard Brush of Long Island were one and the same person. It is thought that from August, 1658 until his marriage, about 1668, he followed the sea.

In a deed conveying Five Necks at the south side in Huntington town, 1 June, 1657, and signed by Wyandance, sachem of the Montauk Indians, the confirmation was made in the presence of John Stickland and Samuel Forman "as witness the mark of Ambrose Sutton and Richard Brush". The confirmation is undated, but it was before 17 August, 1658, when Wyandance sold to Henry Whitney as a representative of the town of Huntington the tract known as "Three Necks, Southside on Great South Bay...." This conveyance is not signed by Wyandance, but was witnessed also by Ambrose Sutton and Richard Brush. The inference is that Brush and Sutton witnessed the drawing of the deed at Montauk or Easthampton and understood its terms, so that they might carry out the terms of the deed at Huntington with the Indian Cheacanoe. Immediately following the names of the witnesses is a receipt dated at Huntington 23 May, 1659.

It is evident that in both cases Sutton and Brush were the connecting links between the sachem of the Montauk Indians and the earliest settlers of the town of Huntington. They saw the terms drawn at Montauk, conveyed the deed and the Indian agent to the town of Huntington and to the local sachem, witnessed the delivery of the property and payment therefor. In one instance they virtually served as notaries, as they attested to the validity of the signatures of the witnesses. Ambrose Sutton was at the time a resident of Hempstead, New York, and was in the colonial trade as a mercantile agent; and presumably Richard Brush was his mate. An indication that the latter was not always available in Huntington is found in an entry in the town records dated 2 November, 1667, when Thomas Brush and others were sent with Cheacanoe to obtain the sanction of the local Indian sachem in resurveying the boundaries of the tract of land conveyed 17 August, 1658. Thomas Brush lost his way in the woods. If Richard Brush had been there, he probably would have been the logical guide.

Richard Brush was a home-owner in Huntington 1 January, 1668, and probably before that. On this date the town allowed him "5 or 6 acres by th[illegible] [illegible] meare of his Lot it being not prejudicall toward his second division." About this time he married Johanna Samwayes or Sammis of Windsor, Connecticut.

In April, 1672 Richard Brush became a proprietor in the famous Ten Farms within the disputed area claimed by both the towns of Huntington and Smithfield (Smithtown); he was part owner in Farm #7. On the tax list of 1675 he was credited with a farm and cattle, and on 30 June, 1681 land in the East Neck South was described as belonging to him. He was granted eight acres on West Neck, 1 April, 1682 and named on a committee to establish a grist mill at Cold Spring. The town owed him 2s 10d on 5 October, 1687 for quartering Captain Suydam's soldiers. He was granted a hundred pound right "from the first settlement of the toen" on 2 April, 1689. He was a townsman in 1692 and 1693, collector in 1694 and served as a trustee of Huntington under the new charter of 1694, in the years 1700 through 1702, and in 1705. He was assessed at a twc hundred pound valuation in commonage rights to pay for the charter. As a dealer in real estate he accumulated considerable property; he was an important holder of land in the Nagunteteague Neck (Southeast) purchase from the Indians in September, 1691, delivery for the purchase by "turf and twig" being made to him. He owned a tract in the Baiting Place purchase of October, 1698. He took up a two-hundred pound right in commonage in 1694 and on 13 January, 1699-1700 he with his wife Johanna deeded to Edward Brush, their "son-in-law" a one hundred and eighty pound right at the south side of Long Island, having first assigned that right to Edward Brush 2 April, 1689. Richard Brush and his wife Johanna deeded to their son Richard Brush land, 1 April, 1700, and again he alone deeded land to the same son in 1707, this time retaining a life interest in the property.

He appears last in the land records 22 December, 1709, when he with his "two elder sons Richard jr. and Thomas" all being of Huntington, New York, made agreements concerning certain lands, the senior Richard again retaining a life interest, & Richard Brush junior agreed at the time not to molest his brothers Robert and John Brush concerning lands that the latter then held. He subscribed five pounds to the erection of the new church in May, 1711.

Richard Brush had died before 10 November, 1714, when John Brush deeded to Edward Brush land at Huntington which his father Richard Brush, late deceased, had possessed in his lifetime.

Issue of Richard and Johanna (Samwayes) Brush:

On 9 February, and again on 9 November, 1703, the town of Huntington voted him land as Thomas Brush, son of Richard Brush. He was a member of Captain Edward Higbie's Military Company in 1715. He with his wife were members of the First church at Huntington, 5 June, 1723, when the Rev. Ebenezer Prime was ordained. His will, dated 17 September, 1726, was proved 22 February, 1726-7. He married Rebecca, who was probably the eldest daughter of Thomas Brush, son of the first Thomas Brush. Issue:

The town of Huntington gave land to Nehemiah Brush, 13 February, 1737/8, and on 30 December, 1740 it again granted him land. He was a minute-man in Col. Josiah Smith's regiment in 1775, but his name appears also on the first list of those who took the oath of loyalty to the Crown in 1778. The church records state that he died 28 February, 1786. His will, dated 2 September, 1783, was proved 7 March, 1786. Issue:

ried at Huntington, New York.

K. Alexander, born 28 March, 1761, baptised in the First Church at Huntington, New York, 5 July, 1761.

5. John, born at Huntington, New York about 1679, called junior, deeded with the consent of his wife Elizabeth 18 December, 1700 to Silas Sammis land within Huntington. On 6 February, 1714/5 with the consent of his wife Constant he conveyed land to Jacob Brush junior. Again, 26 March, 1716 he deeded land to Robert Brush which he had inherited from his father Richard Brush. He does not appear of record again in Huntington; and on 28 March, 1715 Benjamin Green of Stamford, Connecticut conveyed land to John Brush of Huntington, New York. These lands lay west of the Mianis River. On 16 May, 1717 Jonathan Jessup of Greenwich deeded John Brush land on Timmons or Tinsmons Ridge, Greenwich, and on 18 September, 1717 John Brush, then of Greenwich, conveyed one quarter of his purchase from Green to Thomas Brush of Huntington. For several years thereafter in many purchases of land or sales to which he was a party, he was recorded as a resident of Greenwich. In 1719 he conveyed land west of Huntington, New York, to Richard Davis of the latter place. Scharff's History of Westchester County, New York states that he was an early settler of Northcastle in the said county (his Connecticut lands lay on the Northcastle line). Early records of Northcastle no longer exist, but John Brush's residence there is proved by an Orange county deed dated 3 April, 1747, which conveyed 400 acres on the Hudson river at Quaipeck Pond (Rockland Lake), Haverstraw, to John Brush of Northcastle, Westchester county. The date of his death has not been found. He married 1, Elizabeth ; 2, Constant

Issue, by first wife:

i. Elizabeth, born about 1705, married at Greenwich, Connecticut 30 December, 1728 to Benjamin Brundage of Rye, New York.

Issue, by second wife:

ii. Joshua, born at Greenwich, Connecticut, 11 June, 1717; probably accompanied his father to Northcastle, Westchester county, about 1742. He evidently removed to Haverstraw several years before the war of the American Revolution. The Papers of Governor Clinton show that Joshua Brush had loyalist leanings; that at an unstated date he, with five men of Ulster county was fined £5 for having a son join the enemy. No trace of him is found after the said war; and the name of his wife is unknown. Issue:

A. John, born about 1754.
B. Peter, born about 1760.
C. Joshua, born 12 May, 1762.
D. Caleb, born about 1764.
E. Margaret, born about 1766, married before 1785 to David van Tassell of Sleepy Hollow.
F. Amy, born say 1768, married by 1796 to Jacob Dutcher.

6. Benjamin, born at Huntington, New York, 20 October, 1682.

7. Robert, born at Huntington, New York, 30 June, 1685, married 1, Isabella Weekes, daughter of Thomas and Isabella (Harcourt) Weekes of Oyster Bay, New York, who probably died before 1733; he married 2,(probably) 6 February, 1733/4, Mary Brush, widow of Jacob. The will of Richard Weekes, dated 13 September, 1717, mentions his sister Isabel Brush and bequeaths a mare to Reuben Brush. The account books of Henry Lloyd show that on 31 December, 1712 Robert Brush paid the account of Thomas Weekes of Oyster Bay. He gave £20 towards the erection of the new meeting house in Huntington in May, 1711. The town granted Robert Brush land on 20 February 1722-1723, elected him constable in 1724 and town trustee from 1744 to 1748. On 15 April, 1754 the town of Huntington laid out lands to Reuben Brush on his father's right. Robert was living 11 January, 1758, when Isaac Brush conveyed lands adjoining those of Robert and Reuben Brush; but he had evidently deceased before 20 June, 1766 when William Nicolls, hatter, took the mark which had been formerly that of Robert Brush. Issue:

i. Reuben, born at Huntington, New York about 1711, died at Amenia, Dutchess county, New York in 1774, aged 63. He married at Huntington, New York, 11 February, 1738/9 to Ruth Wood, daughter of Eliphalet and Hannah (Smith) Wood. On 9 May, 1747 Reuben joined with other heirs of Eliphalet Wood in a deed to Epenetus Bryan. He was town surveyor of Huntington in 1748 and 1749; highway commissioner in 1751, 1753 and 1755, constable and collector in 1759; trustee in 1749, 1750, 1751 and 1753, and president in 1762, 1764 and 1765. His name appears last in Huntington tax lists in 1766, when he was estimated to be worth £900. He appears subsequently on the tax lists of Amenia in 1768, 1770, 1771, 1772, 1773 and 1774. The widow Ruth Brush was on the list for 1778. On 13 January, 1785, Ethan Allen sold land in New Haven (Vergennes), Vermont, to the widow Ruth Brush of Bennington. She died at Vergennes in March, 1810, aged 95. Issue:

A. Eliphalet, born 29 November, 1739, baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, 13 January, 1739/40.

K. Elkanah, born 9 March, 1762, baptised in the First church in Huntington, New York, 18 April, 1762.

iii. Jonathan, born at Huntington, New York about 1715, married at that place 26 August, 1736 by a license issued 4 August, 1736, to Elizabeth, daughter of Josiah Smith of Long Swamp. The name of Jonathan Brush appears among the militia men of Captain Conkling's district (British) on 7 November, 1779, he is marked as "out by age" and consequently was not called into service. He is put down as worth £325 on the assessor's book in 1765 and at £160 in 1790, three years after his death. He died 8 October, 1787. His will, dated 22 September, 1786, was proved 1 January, 1788. Issue:

NOTES

The foregoing has been taken from sources quoted on page 419. See also Huntington Town Records, vol. I, pp. 10, 11, 16, 113, 188, 304, 337, 345; and also the Records of the First Church in Huntington, New York, as edited by Moses L. Scudder.

That the foregoing Richard Brush was not a son of Thomas Brush who appears in Southold, Long Island before 8 October, 1655, is a conclusion reached by Conklin Mann in his research on the records of this family. Concurring with this, the present writer wishes to emphasize that the relationship between Thomas Brush and Richard Brush has not been proved; however there is general agreement that a very close relationship existed between them. It is probable that they were brothers.

Because Thomas Brush of this generation was a resident of Huntington, New York, and many of his descendants in the first several generations intermarried with other Huntington families recorded in this work, we give a brief genealogical notice of his connections.

CERTAIN DESCENDANTS OF THOMAS AND REBECCA (CONKLING) BRUSH OF SOUTHOLD AND HUNTINGTON, NEW YORK

Thomas Brush was in Southold, New York, before 8 October, 1655, and was at that time an intimate in the family of John Concklyne (Conkling, Conklin). The ages of the children of Thomas Brush lead to the conclusion that he married Rebecca Concklyne, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Alsebrook) Concklyne, about 1650/1, probably soon after the Concklynes reached Southold from Salem, Massachusetts. It has been stated that Thomas Brush was in Salem with the members of the Concklyne family, but Conklin Mann in his article entitled Thomas and Richard Brush of Huntington, Long Island (published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 66, beginning p. 201) reports nothing that gives authority to the statement.

John Concklyne with his son Timothy and Thomas Brush removed to Huntington, New York about 1657. In the latter place goodman Brush was named to keep the ordinary 15 October, 1660. Late in 1659 or early in 1660 John Concklyne returned to Southold and Thomas Brush soon followed, for on 24 June 1661 Brush purchased a house and home lot at Southold on a mortgage agreement with John Tooker. He was sworn a freeman of Connecticut at Hartford during the October, 1662 sessions of the Court.

Thomas Brush and John Tucker (sic), Gent., both of Southold, on 11 April, 1663 sold to Thomas Mapes extensive lands at Southold which included a home lot and dwelling house, with such reservations as were expressed in an agreement bearing date 25 June, 1661, between Brush and Tucker (Tooker). Rebecca, wife of Thomas Brush concurred in the sale; this is the only recorded entry of the given name of his wife.

Thomas Brush evidently returned immediately to Huntington, for on 1 June 1663 that town placed Brush on a committee of leading men to review old land layouts and to lay out and apportion certain new lands. Thomas Brush appears frequently thereafter in the town and land records of Huntington, until 1670. On 4 April, 1670 he was elected constable; but died soon after, for under the record of his election appears the entry "Thomas Brush deceasing, in his room was chosen Samuel Wood, constable." Inventory on Thomas Brush's estate was presented to the Court at Southold 1 June, 1675. The evaluation was £306:12:00 and was returned by the son Thomas Brush and the father-in-law, John Concklyne or Conkling. Apparently Thomas Brush, the son, was confirmed administrator 27 September, 1675. At this time no mention of the widow is made.

Brush data in the Nellie Ritch Scudder Collection of the Huntington Historical Society states that she died 9 April, 1670 and was buried on the 11th. There is nothing found to prove the statement at this writing.

The naming of the grandfather John Concklyne as overseer of the minor children raises the question of their number. The administration papers name Thomas, John and Rebecca. The receipts given by John and Rebecca on 11 June, 1677 show that each had a portion of £50: 13:04. Thomas, the administrator was to receive a double portion. In round figures the three portions account for £202, leaving two £50 portions for two other children plus a small sum for debts and administration expense. There is much evidence pointing to Edward and Jacob Brush as having been sons of the first Thomas Brush; however, there is no evidence whatsoever which would lead us to believe that Richard Brush was a son. Richard Brush was some twelve years older than Thomas Brush junior; and as the latter received a double portion as was consistent with the law of primogeniture, it would seem fairly certain that Richard Brush was not a descendant in the family of Thomas and Rebecca (Concklyne) Brush. Moreover, as Edward Brush married a daughter of Richard Brush (he could not have married his niece) this reinforces our observations.

There is no evidence found which allows us to determine the birthdate of the senior Thomas Brush. He married in or about 1650 to a girl who was probably about 20. It is estimated that Thomas Brush was born about 1625. The children of Thomas Brush and his wife Rebecca Conklyne were

+ 1. Thomas, married Sarah, probably Wilkes or Wickes.
+ 2. John, married 1, Sarah Adams; 2, Elizabeth (Platt) Griffin; 3, Jane Ketcham, widow.
+ 3. Rebecca, married Jeremiah Hubbard.

and probably:

+ 4. Edward, married Esther Brush.
+ 5. Jacob, married Mary Rogers.

1. Thomas Brush, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Concklyne) Brush, was born about 1651/2, probably at Southold, New York. He appears first in Huntington, New York records 3 July, 1671, when the town voted him six or eight acres on the hill at the rear of Samuel Titus' lot. He was administrator of the estate of his father in June, 1675; died 16 April, 1698, leaving a widow Sarah and a large family of children, all under age. His will, dated 8 April, 1698, was proved 26 April, 1699. The widow, probably a daughter of Thomas Wilkes or Wickes of Huntington, married second, before 1711, Nathaniel Williams of Huntington. The children of Thomas and Sarah Brush were:

6. Rebecca, born at Huntington, New York 3 April, 1681, considered to have married Thomas, son of Richard Brush.
+ 7. Thomas, mar. 1, Susanna Ketcham; 2, Martha Mathias.
8. Sarah, born say about 1686, perhaps married Jeremiah Chichester of Huntington, New York.
9. Susannah, born about 1686.
+10. Jacob, married Mary
11. Elizabeth, born about 1691. unmarried in 1711.

12. Mary, born about 1692/3, unmarried in 1711. She later married David Cory of Southold, New York, b. there 16 April, 1690, High Sheriff of Suffolk County. She died 24 December, 1721 in her 30th year.
+13. Timothy, married Elizabeth
14. Martha, born about 1696; Nathaniel Williams deeds land to her in the West Neck, 1 January, 1717/8.
15. Eliphalet, born in 1698; no further record.

2. John Brush, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Concklyne) Brush, was born probably at Southold, New York about 1654, as is proved by a memorandum in the Papers of Henry Lloyd dated 1730, at which time Henry Lloyd was collecting data preliminary to the signing of the Queens Village disclaimer, by which the town of Huntington gave up all claim to Lloyd's Neck. John Brush first appears in Huntington, New York records on 2 December, 1670, when he witnessed an Indian receipt for the town's payment for the deed to East Neck, South. He appears also in tax lists for 1673, 1675 and 1683. He sold land to John Mitchell 8 March, 1676, which adjoined that of Richard Brush, and which he had purchased of John Holmes, weaver. He received his portion of his father's estate on 11 August, 1677. In the course of events John Brush acquired other lands which made him and his family important landholders for the two generations following, in Huntington. He was trustee of Huntington much of the time between 1693 and 1714, and served several terms as constable. He joined the First church at Huntington in March, 1729/30. On 18 January, 1739-1740, three arbitrators established the basis on which his sons Samuel and Isaac should support their aged father, John Brush of Cold Spring; the latter died probably shortly afterwards. John Brush probably married three times; 1, Sarah Adams, daughter of John and Abigail (Smith) Adams of Hartford, Connecticut, whom he had probably married by 1682. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Wood) Platt and widow of Samuel Griffin; and he probably married 3, the widow Jane Ketcham. Children, by first wife:

After his marriage Jeremiah Hubbard continued at Jamaica, where he was assessed for £34 in 1683. Deeds show that he was resident in Jamaica for several years subsequently. He had removed to Huntington before 1688, for on 20 August of that year the town voted him three acres "in part of his division land." He was chosen town collector 1 May 1711; and died shortly after 3 March, 1729/30. Issue (HUBBARD):

Thomas and Richard Brush were the founders of two distinct lines of the Brush family. Thomas Brush was in Southold, New York probably as early as 1650 or 1651. Richard Brush was in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in the spring of 1658, and was in Long Island waters by the summer of that year. Soon thereafter they held adjoining properties in Huntington, New York. Though early Huntington town and land records mention both Thomas and Richard Brush many times, and their children and grandchildren were prominent in the town for a hundred years, no hint of the relationship existing between the two has yet been found. The imtimacy between their families is so apparent in the records that it may be assumed that Richard and Thomas Brush were either brothers or cousins. However, there is much evidence to show that a father and son relationship did not exist.

Conklin Mann reports that a study of the indices of the Index Library covering early wills and administrations in England show that there were two English strains bearing the name, and both were apparently good yeoman stock. The earlier family centers in Tewkesbury and Brockworth parishes, Gloucestershire. That family supplied six probates between 1558 and 1692, four of them being prior to 1620. Berkshire and Worcestershire supplied two and one probates respectively. Of the nine probates three are in the name of Richard Brush and two in that of Thomas Brush.

The second and more numerous family was in Cornwall, located in the parish of St. Germain, but appearing also in several other Cornwall parishes. Twenty three probates for members of this Brush family are recorded between 1570 and 1683. Of thesefour are for John, three for Thomas and two for Richard Brush. Unfortunately in many cases parish registers covering baptisms for the Gloucestershire and Cornwall Brush families either do not exist or are not available in American libraries, and the marriage registers already printed, although numerous Brush connections are mentioned therein, do not throw any light upon the possible parentage of the emigrants to the New World. It is indicated, however, that competent research in England may establish readily the progenitors of the two founders of the American family.

The present writer found evidences of another family in Yorkshire, and published the following note in the American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 264:

> BRUSH. The registers of Keighley (Yorkshire) ascribe the following children to Richard Brush, probably the same Richard "Bruch" who married Jenet Akerley on 26 Nov. 1620: Susanna, bapt. 13 Oct. 1622, bur. 30 Nov. 1622; John, bapt. 25 Aug. 1624; Susan, bapt. 27 Dec. 1625; a child, bur. 9 Oct. 1627; a child, bur. 4 Apr. 1629; and Francis (or Frances), bapt. 25 July 1631. Richard Brush was buried 26 May 1635; and Jenet Brush (perhaps his widow) married, 14 May 1640, Robert Slacke.
> The registers of Kildwick in Craven contain references to a Brush family. Johannes Brush and Alicia Thompson were married 22 June 1585. John, son of Johannes and Alice, bapt. 17 Mar. 1587/8. Jacob, son of John and Elizabeth, bapt. 28 Mar. 1591. Isabella, of John and Alice, bapt. 26 Apr. 1592. Nicholas, of John and Alice, bapt. 7 Jan. 1594(/5). Peter, of John, bapt. 5 June, 1597. Richard, of John, bapt. 5 Mar. 1600. Anna, of John and Alice of Kildwick, bapt. in 1618. Nicholas Brush and Jane Bradeley were married 7 Apr. 1621, and had a son Thomas bapt. 10 Feb. 1621(2).

We acknowledge with thanks the permission of Conklin Mann to use information already referred to. The records of the Huntington, New York, Brush family were originally compiled by the late Horace Ruscoe of Huntington; and Miss Elma Wicks of Jamaica, New York, supplied the present writer with much information.

The ancestry of Richard Brush is unknown.

FIRST LINE

7. SYBIL BRYAN
m. TIMOTHY NORTON son probably of Jonathan Norton and

She was born probably at Huntington, New York, about 1715.

She is identified as the Cybilla Bryan who was baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, 5 June, 1734, and was thereafter a professed Presbyterian for the remainder of her life. Some years afterward she attended the Presbyterian church in Smithtown, and in later years was a communicant of the church at Middle Island, New York, in the town of Brookhaven.

She married in the First church at Huntington, 18 March, 1739-1740 to Timothy Norton of Mount Sinai in the town of Brookhaven, and removed to Mount Sinai, where she lived until her death, which occurred after 1761 and before 3 July, 1780. She probably died about 1778.

She may have been buried in an old cemetery at Selden-Middle Island, town of Brookhaven, but no gravestone has been discovered. She left no will or administration of her estate.

For descendants, see NORTON, #94.

NOTES

The baptismal record and marriage entry are taken from the Records of the First Church in Huntington, Long Island, 1723-1779, edited by Moses L. Scudder, pp. 30 and 74. For other references, see under NORTON.

The ancestry of Sybil Bryan is not documentarily proved. However, her name indicates that she was undoubtedly a member of the family of that name which was at this time resident of Huntington, L. I., N. Y., as the name of Sybil occurs frequently therein. There is no other family of Bryan in this locality or within a reasonable distance from which it could be shown that she was descended; and we are convinced that she was not an immigrant. Accepting these premises as correct, there is but one, and only one connection which in our opinion may serve to provide her paternity.

Therefore we say that

Sybil Bryan was the daughter [illegible]

8. JOHN BRYAN 190
m. SYBIL FLEET daughter of Thomas Fleet and Esther Parrott

He was born at the residence of his father presumably, then facing the present green at Milford, Connecticut, 12 July, 1680. He was baptised in the church at Milford 19 September, 1680.

It is claimed that he was a resident of Huntington, New York as early as 1710, and in 1711 he was a resident near Queens Village on Long Island. The Account Books of Henry Lloyd record that John Bryan worked for him from 23 June to 31 August, 1711, and also on 24 September, 1711. He was a witness to the will of his father-in-law Thomas Fleet, 11 April, 1713; however he was also still of record in Milford in 1719. He seems to have been a very quiet resident of Huntington and is seldom of civil record.

He appears as a witness to the will of James Rogers on 21 December, 1743, and his son is mentioned in the will of Samuel Plumbe, 26 March, 1752 as John Bryan junior. The senior John Bryan was a witness to the will of Moses Scudder, 23 May, 1759, and he still appears in 1764 in the tax list for residents of Huntington, then very aged.

John Bryan died shortly afterward, and was definitely deceased in 1775. He left no will, and no administration of his estate was ever recorded. As a consequence, except for the name of his son John, his children as they appear in the Huntington records are assigned by elimination and family associations.

John Bryan married at Huntington, probably about 1711, to Sybil Fleet.

Issue (certainly):

1. John, called junior, born at Huntington, New York about 1717. He is probably to be identified with the one of that name who removed to Northcastle, Westchester county, New York, by 1759. The will of Parrott Fleet mentions his nephew John Bryan, the son of his sister. John Bryan married Elizabeth, maiden name not ascertained. Issue:
   i. Mary, baptised in St. George's Episcopal church at Hempstead, New York, 23 June, 1744.

   Perhaps other children.
2. Esther, who died unmarried, a resident of Huntington, New York. Her will, dated 3 July, 1780, was proved 12 May, 1781 and was filed at Liber 34, p. 403 of New York Wills. She mentions certain of her nephews and nieces: to William and Margaret Nethcrway, 80 shillings each. She refers to all her part of the homestead which she had of her brother John Bryan; when this was sold, the proceeds were to go to Esther, daughter of Joseph Bennett; and to Elizabeth and Esther Bennett she gave a bed.

3. Anne, born at Huntington, New York about 1719; married in the First church at Huntington, New York 3 April 1737 by a marriage license issued 10 March 1737 to Thomas Netherway, a native presumably of Scotland. Thomas Netherway died at Huntington shortly before 22 November 1749 as his widow was granted administration on his estate at that time. She married 2, Jonathan Wickes, widower of Elizabeth Gates and daughter of John and Esther (Ketcham) Wickes of Huntington, 19 April 1753. She died at Huntington, New York 3 September 1772 and was buried there. Issue (NETHERWAY):
   - i. Anne, married in the First church at Huntington, N. Y., 17 July 1764 to John Abbot.
   - ii. Thomas, married in the First church at Huntington, New York 27 May, 1769 to Ruth Wood. This man, incorrectly identified in American Ancestry, vol I, p.57, as the immigrant, is credited with at least one son:
     - A. Ezer, born in 1779, died in 1864, a resident of Schoharie county, New York; married Magdalene Parmentier and had, at least:
       - a. Clinton, of Albany, New York.
   - iii. William, married in the First church at Huntington, New York, 10 July 1770, Hannah Denton of East Woods. Mentioned in the will of his aunt Esther Bryan in 1780. Issue not determined.
   - iv. Margaret; mentioned in the will of her aunt Esther Bryan, in 1780. Not traced further.

   Perhaps other children.
4. Elizabeth, married in the First church at Huntington, N. Y., 6 May 1746 to Joseph Bennett. Children included at least(BENNETT):
   - i. Timothy, baptised 5 February, 1748/9.
   - ii. Elizabeth, mentioned in the will of her aunt Esther Bryan in 1780. Not traced further.
   - iii. Esther, died at Brookhaven, New York 23 May, 1835, aged 76. She married Bryan Norton, widower, undoubtedly her first cousin, and as his second wife. See NORTON.

   Probably other children.

Issue (very probably):

5. Sybil, married Timothy Norton. See page 445.
6. Thankful, who married in the First church at Huntington, N. Y., 8 June, 1748 to Phillip Udall, son of Joseph Udall of Huntington, New York, as his first wife. See UDALL.

Perhaps other children.

NOTES

The late Charles Candee Baldwin published as a reprint from his well-known Baldwin Genealogy a brochure entitled Alexander Bryan, of Milford, Connecticut: His Ancestors and His Descendants, in 1889. At p. 17 of this reprint it is stated that John Bryan was recorded as of Huntington, New York when on 9 May, 1710 he conveyed land to Roger Newton and Ezihiel (sic) Stone (Stow?) which had been his from his father Alexander Bryan. In Goodwin and Morgan Ancestral Lines, published by Frank Farnsworth Starr in 1915, there appears at vol. II, p. 285 and those following, an excellently documented and trustworthy account of the connections of the Bryan family, and upon which we have placed reliance after adequate investigation.

Further study was given to these connections by Lillian L. M.Selleck in the Miner Genealogy, 1928, pp. 81 and those following. Also referred to are notes given under Sybil Bryan (page 445) and others following.

John Bryan was the son of

9. ALEXANDER BRYAN 380
m. SYBIL WHITING daughter of John Whiting and Sybil Collins

He was born at Milford, Connecticut about 1652, and was baptised in the church at that place 21 May, 1654.

He was a well-known resident of Milford, and held extensive properties both in Milford and in Huntington, New York. Land held by his father and bought by the latter and his father in turn situated on Eaton's Neck, Huntington, was created a Manor by Lieut. Governor Thomas Dongan 23 August, 1686, and Alexander Bryan thus became second Lord of the Manor. The title passed to his son Alexander who became third Lord in 1701, holding it until the sale of the Manor to John Sloss of Fairfield. The latter never erected the property as a manor nor exercised manorial rights, and the prerogatives were allowed to lapse.

Alexander Bryan was a merchant and real estate operator; and also held public office. He was appointed Commissioner or judge for Milford in 1691, and was reappointed until 1696. He was nominated for the post of Assistant of Connecticut Colony for 1695 and 1696, but was not elected. He was Auditor of Colonial Accounts in 1696.

He died at Milford, Connecticut, August 19, 1701 and was probably buried at that place. His widow was granted administration for his New York properties, at New York city 27 September 1701. The lands in question were located at Southampton, New York.

He married shortly before 1674 to Sybil Whiting, who survived him.

Issue:

1. Ann, born at Milford, Connecticut 8 September, 1674, baptised at that place 13 September, 1674. Further connections not determined.
2. Alexander, born at Milford, Connecticut 15 June 1677, baptised 17 June, 1677; died young.
3. John, married Sybil Fleet. See page 446.
4. Alexander, married Ruth Platt. See below.
5. Ebenezer, born at Milford, Connecticut, 17 February, 1690/1, bp. 22 February, 1690/1, died at that place 20 September, 1728. He married 15 July, 1713 to Esther Goodyear, daughter of John and Abigail (Gibbard) Goodyear of New Haven, who was born about 1694 and died 24 January, 1740/1, having married 2, 20 August 1729 to Thomas Gibb. In 1714 he was recorded as a sadler and as a brother of John Bryan of Huntington, New York; he was also a tavernkeeper. Issue.
6. Augustine or Augustinatha, born at Milford, Connecticut 25 April, 1694, baptised 5 May, 1695; died young.

DESCENDANTS OF ALEXANDER BRYAN, SON OF ALEXANDER AND SYBIL (WHITING) BRYAN: BY HIS WIFE RUTH PLATT; OF HUNTINGTON, NEW YORK.

4. Alexander Bryan, son of Alexander and Sybil (Whiting) Bryan, was born at Milford, Connecticut 24 November, 1682 and was baptised in the church at that place 24 December, 1682. He died 16 November, 1761 and was buried at Cow Harbor, Huntington, New York. He was assessor and trustee for the town of Huntington beginning 5 May, 1724; was trustee continuously thenceforth until 4 May 1731, supervisor for the year beginning 2 May, 1727; similarly, 6 May, 1729; and trustee again, for the year beginning 4 May, 1736. He sold the Manor of Eaton's Neck to John Sloss of Fairfield, Connecticut, 22 November, 1710, then calling himself of Huntington. On 11 September, 1711 he conveyed again to John Sloss. In a division of lands dated 14 December, 1713, he is listed twice for 1-1/2 hundreds. On 15 June, 1714 he was a member of the committee of inhabitants of the east side of the town who desired the church to be e rected elsewhere. The will of Alexander Bryan, dated 2 March 1758, was proved 1 January, 1781, approximately twenty years after his death; it was filed in Liber 34, p. 91 of New York Wills. He married Ruth Platt, daughter of Epenetus and Phoebe (Wood) Platt of Huntington, who died there 30 July, 1748. Issue:

+ 7. Alexander, married Phoebe Wood.
+ 8. Augustine, married Deborah White.
+ 9. Epenetus, married 1, Elizabeth Stratton; 2, Rhoda Rogers.
10. Ann, born at Huntington, New York 8 April, 1724, baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York 14 June, 1724, married in the First church at that place, 23 August, 1744 to Simon Fleet, born 17 September 1723, died in 1790, son of Thomas Fleet. See FLEET.
11. (probably) Mary, who married 13 December, 1750 to Jacob Platt.
12. Ruth, born in 1714, died 27 February, 1780 at Huntington, New York; married Silas Sammis, son of Silas and Martha (Corey) Sammis. See SAMMIS.
13. Melancthon, baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, 11 February, 1727/8; probably died young.

Perhaps other children.

The only known grandchildren of Alexander and Ruth (Platt) Bryan were children either of his sons Alexander, Augustine or Epenetus. Unfortunately the wills of these three sons do not enumerate their children completely, and the baptisms recorded by the Rev. Ebenezer Prime do not show who were the parents. We have assumed that children bearing the surname of Bryan and baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, were descended of Alexander and Ruth (Platt) Bryan, an assumption that seems to be safe; where members of the family are to be otherwise assigned or are not assignable, they are referred to in the NOTES following.

7. Alexander Bryan, son of Alexander and Ruth (Platt) Bryan, was born at Huntington, New York in 1708, and died there in February, 1758. His will, dated 24 February, 1758, was proved 23 March, 1758. He married in the First church at Huntington, 29 August, 1732 to Phoebe Wood of Huntington, who died 19 October, 1794, aged 84. She was probably a granddaughter of Joseph and Eunice (Jarvis) Wood of Huntington; joined the church at that place 30 July, 1752. From the will of the grandfather it is demonstrated that he had

14. Ebenezer, baptised in the First church at Huntington, 12 April, 1741; died 10 May, 1811, aged 69. He married 28 April, 1773 by a marriage bond issued 7 April 1773, to Esther Ketcham. Issue not traced.

By comparison with baptisms of the various children known to be descended from Augustine and Epenetus Bryan; by allotment according to baptismal dates (assuming that the baptisms were of infants); and from other records (see NOTES, following) we assign the following as children of Alexander and Phoebe (Wood Bryan:

15. Charity, baptised in the First church at Huntington 16 April 1738, married in the same church 4 April 1758 to Azel Lewis, son of Joseph and Abigail (Scudder) Lewis. See LEWIS. It should be noted that the only son of this union was named Alexander Lewis.
16. Elizabeth; probably the one baptised in the First church at Huntington, N. Y. 11 May, 1740.
17. Anna, baptised in the First church at Huntington, N. Y., 24 April, 1743, died in residence at Huntington, 10 May, 1798, married 10 October, 1767, Micah Heartt, son of Cornelius and Elizabeth (Wickes) Heartt.

Probably other children.

8. Augustine Bryan, son of Alexander and Ruth (Platt) Bryan, was born at Huntington, New York in 1710, and died there in January, 1780; his will, dated 11 September, 1753, was proved 16 January, 1781, and filed at Liber 34, p. 87 of New York Wills. It mentions his son Melancthon, and states that he had three sons and six daughters. Augustine Bryan was trustee of Huntington, a signer of the Associations lists in the war of the American Revolution, and a holder of considerable property. He married 1, in the First church at Huntington, 15 June 1735 to Deborah White, baptised 25 June, 1712, died in September, 1767, daughter of James and Sarah ( ) White of Huntington. His will, dated 29 August, 1814, was proved 30 April, 1823, and filed in Liber D, p. 407 of Wills, Riverhead, New York. The will provides considerable information for the determination of the children of Augustine Bryan.
21. Sarah, claimed to have been born at Huntington, New York 19 January, 1738, but identified as the one baptised in the First church at Huntington, 26 February, 1737/8; died 15 December, 1765; married in the same church, 26 May, 1761, Jonah Wood, son of Jonah and Temperance (Whitman) Wood. +25. James, married Hannah Scudder.
26. Deborah, baptised 24 December, 1755, died 19 May 1762. If baptised as an infant, she could not have been of any other connection, provided that it is assumed that she was descended of this family.
27. Rebecca, baptised 18 June, 1758, married 10 February, 1779, John White.

And probably other children.

9. Epenetus Bryan, son of Alexander and Ruth (Platt) Bryan, was born at Huntington, New York about 1713/4, and died at the same place 21 June, 1790. His will, dated 27 March, 1784, was proved 25 June 1789 and confirmed 8 April, 1790; it was filed at Liber A, p. 169 of Wills, Riverhead, New York. He is mentioned in Refugees From Long Island to Connecticut, by Frederic Gregory Mather, p. 285, as having been a refugee from Long Island to Connecticut during the War of the American Revolution. He signed the Associations at Huntington in 1775. Gilbert Bryan in later years called himself Bryant; married in the First church at Huntington, 16 April, 1769 to Mary Chichester. Issue:

NOTES

The late Charles Candee Baldwin obtained relatively little information concerning the descendants on Long Island of Alexander and Sybil (Whiting) Bryan, in publishing his reprint referred to in the NOTES on p. 448. This is somewhat remarkable, as Alexander Bryan was one of the very few Lords of Manors situate on Long Island. The original grant has been published in the first volume of Huntington Town Records, Including Babylon, at p. 451 and those following, and is quoted for its interest:

(1686, August 23.)

Charles R. Street, editor of the Huntington Town Records, comments upon the foregoing in a footnote at the bottom of page 456, vol. I:

> .... Theophilus Eaton had procured an Indian deed of Eaton's Neck in 1646; how the title, by various transfers, had come to George Baldwin and a grant had been made by Gov. Nichols to Baldwin of all the territory of Eaton's Neck, similar in terms with grants made at that period, and how in several litigations, the last in the Court of Assize, Baldwin had maintained his title.Richard and Alexander Bryan now appear as purchasers from Baldwin, and on their application, Gov. Dongan creates Eaton's Neck into the"Lordship or Manor of Eaton", with the important powers and privileges pertaining thereto. Practically, the people of Eaton's Neck had now an independent municipal government of their own. Their grant was also as liberal in its terms as any other of the period, including all rivers, brooks, creeks, harbors, beaches, fishing, hawking, hunting and fowling. It does not appear, however, that the Bryants (sic) and other settlers on Eaton's Neck exercised the powers they possessed as to a manorial government....

To represent the typical rights of Richard and Alexander Bryan as lords of a Manor, reference is had to the following, taken from The Encyclopaedia Britannica, Fourteenth Edition, vol. 14, pp. 821+:

> The typical English Manor, if there be a recognized or definite type, is .... a complex estate, consisting of (a) the lord's demesne, scattered in strips in the open fields, or in consolidated blocks of fields; (b) the land of the free tenants, who owe the lord small rents in money or in kind, and certain fixed labour services; (c) the land of the villeins, lying for the most part in the open fields, and owing more onerous and uncertain services, as well as rents in money and in kind.... The inhabitants of the manor have all their separate rights, asserted and defended by the manorial court.The lord at the head of the society, in his hall or manor-house, enjoys his own demesne,....
> The manor court is a complicated structure....it originally exercised its criminal, civil or manorial jurisdiction as one court; its names may differ, the parties before it may be free or unfree.... Its president was the lord's steward; the bailiff was the lord's representative and the public prosecutor;....for the most part only petty offences were triable.... offenses against the custom of the manor, such as bad ploughing, improper taking of wood from the lord's woods, and the like,.. ...

Descendants of the Huntington, New York, branches of the family have been compiled by the late Horace Ruscoe and Nellie Ritch Scudder; by Mrs. H. Howard Edwards of Port Jefferson, N. Y., and the present writer. In this connection the church records, town records and deeds on file in Huntington, and various records at Riverhead, New York have been examined. The following comments may be of service to the future analyst:

The Sybil Bryan baptised in the First church at Huntington, N. Y., 5 June, 1734 may not be the daughter of John and Sybil (Fleet) Bryan. If not, this may be a baptismal entry of the Sybil Bryan who married 21 July, 1766 to Isaac Bunce; if this is correct, the wife of Isaac Bunce was 32 years of age or better at the time of her marriage. Further, the early baptism would require that she be assigned as a daughter of Alexander and Phoebe (Wood) Bryan, assuming that she was descended of the Huntington family. Otherwise, it is not possible to definitely assign the parentage of Sybil (Bryan) Bunce, except to state that she was undoubtedly a daughter either of Alexander and Phoebe (Wood) Bryan or of Augustine and Deborah (White) Bryan.

Gilbert and James Bryan have been assigned as sons of Augustine Bryan, together with Melancthon Bryan, on the basis that Augustine mentions in his will that he had three sons; and these are the only names available for assignation. Moreover, from an alternative standpoint, it is not reasonably possible to assign them elsewhere. Since Gilbert and Anna Bryan were baptised the same date, we have assumed (perhaps rashly) that they were brother and sister. As the children of Epenetus Bryan are known, the juxtaposition of dates compels us to assign the Anna Bryan baptised 24 April, 1743, and the Eunice Bryan baptised 2 June, 1745, to Alexander Bryan. We have indicated why we have assigned Alexander Bryan as the father of Charity Bryan, wife of Azel Lewis, as well; and for the same reason we place Alexander, baptised 26 January, 1755, under this connection.

It has not been possible to assign Ruth, baptised 5 February, 1748/9, probably the one who married by a marriage license dated 6 August, 1771 to Benjamin Titus; Susanna, baptised 6 June, 1750; Mary, baptised 26 January, 1751/2; and several others baptised at a later date. As there were two Elizabeths baptised early, we have assumed that they were cousins, and have placed them as seems plausible and probable to us.

Alexander Bryan was the son of

10. RICHARD BRYAN 686, 760
m. MARY PANTRY daughter of William Pantry and Margaret Wyborne

He was born in England, probably in Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, shortly after 1626.

When a child he emigrated from England, presumably in the family of his father, and was at Milford, Connecticut as early as 1639. Like his father, Richard Bryan engaged in trade, and he bought and sold lands in Milford, Stratford, Middletown, Long Island and elsewhere.

In June, 1654 the authorities at Milford arranged for a trade between Richard Bryan and Henry Tomlinson. The latter had agreed to keep the ordinary or tavern; and as his house was not suitable therefor, he was to take a deed of the Richard Bryan house at £68, giving therefor his own house valued at £23 and "fourty five pounds to boot". Tomlinson soon tired of his duties and on 26 June, 1655 the Bryan house, which had been deeded to Tomlinson, was sold to William East and Richard Bryan "to maintain it a sufficient Ordinary to the townes acceptance, only the long table and forme Is to be and remaine gratis to the vse of Richard Bryan aforesaid".

At a General Court held at Milford on 13 December, 1655, Richard Bryan moved that the town grant him liberty to build a warehouse near that of his father Alexander Bryan's, "on the other Side of the high-Way of thirty-foot one way and 18 foot another which after that The Court had heard what the Viewers Appoynted Timothy Baldwin John Lane and Thomas Samford had Said that it might Be granted without any prejudice the Court fully and freely gaue him liberty to make vse of the Same".

On 11 July, 1668 Richard Bryan and his father Alexander purchased of George Baldwin of Huntington, New York, for £200 the tract known as Eaton's Neck, and mentioned just previously under Alexander Bryan, #380. In 1669 he was the owner of other lands in that town. In November of 1684 he bought from William Jones and his wife Hannah, of New Haven, Connecticut, lands in Eaton's Neck which had belonged to her father, Theophilus Eaton, also of New Haven.

In December, 1688, Samuel Preston of Stratford, Connecticut, sold to Richard Bryan sixty acres of land at White Hills in the said town of Stratford, "in Consideration of y^{e} freight of four horses in y^{e} pinke [illegible]d & Mary which Amounts to y^{e} full & Just sume of forty pounds". Probably this is a clue to the name of Richard Bryan's vessel, so called for himself and his first wife. The Milford Land Records record other real estate transactions of Richard Bryan.

He was appointed a Commissioner of Milford 9 May, 1689, the only civic office which he seems to have held. His tenure was brief, for he had died before 13 August, 1689, on which date the inventory of his estate was presented to the County Court and sworn to by the widow and third wife, Elizabeth Bryan, who declined to administer the estate. The Court appointed the sons Alexander and Samuel as administrators. The administrator's bond, dated 30 August, 1689, is recorded at p. 263 of the first volume of the New Haven County Court Records. The document shows that Alexander was then living on Long Island, and Samuel Bryan at Milford.

Richard Bryan married 1, Mary Pantry of Hartford, Connecticut; 2, 15 July, 1679, to Mercy Wilmot, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth ( ) Wilmot of New Haven. She was born 16 February, 1646, baptised 21 May, 1648. Mercy (Wilmot) Bryan was one of the witnesses to the will of Alexander Bryan, father of Richard, which was made 24 April, 1679, and to his codicil, 22 July, 1679. As the codicil is dated one week later than the date of the marriage of Richard Bryan and Mercy Wilmot as entered on the Milford Town Records, it is suspected that the marriage took place on the same day, and after the signing of the codicil to Alexander Bryan's will. She became a member of the Milford church on the fifteenth of October following her marriage.

Mercy (Wilmot) Bryan was living 29 November, 1685, in all probability; but how much longer she lived is not known. Before 17 July, 1689 Richard Bryan had married 3, Elizabeth (Powell) Hollingsworth, born 16 June, 1641, died 10 January 1706, daughter of Elder Michael and Abigail (Bedle) Powell of Boston, and widow of Richard Hollingsworth of Milford. She married again afterwards, 24 October, 1705 to Governor Robert Treat of Connecticut.

Richard Bryan was probably buried at Milford, Connecticut.

NOTES

The foregoing has been quoted chiefly from Goodwin and Morgan Ancestral Lines, by Frank Farnsworth Starr, vol. II, and from other authorities as quoted in other NOTES given under other generations.

Mr. Starr records further that in volume 1, p. 247 of the New Haven Land Records there is entered a deed dated 30 August, 1684, whereby Elizabeth Judson, widow, of said town, conveyed to her beloved daughter "Mercy Brian of the town of Milford" four acres of land in Cooper's Quarter in New Haven. On the same day Richard Bryan of Milford conveyed the property to John Mix of New Haven.

John Thompson of Brookhaven, "alias 'Setaket'", being indebted to Richard Bryan, agreed to deliver at John Ward's house in Setauket, Long Island, seventeen barrels of good merchantable whale "oyle" well filled, before 10 April, 1680, and £20 in "oyl", wheat or pork at current price before the last of March, 1681 (Milford Land Records, II, p. 88). On 15 March, 1688, Thomas Bedient of Westchester, New York owed Richard Bryan £16-17-10, which he agreed to pay 1 March next, in good merchantable provision pay at prices current, wheat 5^{s} per bushel, Indian corn 2^{s} 6^{d} per bushel.

At the time the administrators of the estate of Richard Bryan were bonded, his son Alexander is called as of Long Island. Alexander Bryan's residence there seems to have been transient, however; he was chiefly a resident of Milford, Connecticut.

Upon presentation of the inventory of the estate to the County Court, there was shown an agreement dated 6 August, 1689, signed by the widow Elizabeth and all the children of legal age, regarding her interest in the estate, which agreement was approved by the Court. There was also presented another agreement between all of the "first children of Mr. Richard Bryan deceased", regarding the distribution of the estate to themselves and to the two youngest children, Elizabeth and Joseph, who were under age. The Court ordered £50 for the education of the son who was five years of age, and £20 for the education of the daughter ten years of age. They were also to receive their share of the estate with the others when they arrived at legal age, the son at twenty-one, and the daughter at eighteen. If the widow Elizabeth Bryan be with child, said child was to have a share with the others in the estate.

On pages 560 to 568 inclusive, of the copy of volume 2 of the New Haven County Court Records, are entered receipts from Elizabeth Bryan, widow of Richard, and from Mary Howell of Southampton, Long Island, John Harriman of Elizabethtown, New Jersey, for his wife Hannah; Mungo Nisbet for his wife Sarah; Martha Bryan, administratrix on the estate of her husband Samuel Bryan; Richard Bryan; Joseph Treat for his wife Frances; John Durand for his wife Elizabeth, of their full shares of the estate of Richard Bryan, deceased. There are also receipts from Mary Howell as mother of John Maltby and Mary (Maltby) Fordham; John Harriman as guardian of Sarah Fitch, and as father of John, Samuel and Anne Harriman, acknowledging the payment of the legacies made to them by the will of Richard Bryan. The dates of the receipts are from 13 March 1695/6 to December 4, 1700. The County Court Records for February, 1706/7 show that at that time Joseph Bryan, son of Richard, had come of age, and his guardian demanded that the share of the estate due to Joseph should be paid over to the latter.

Richard Bryan was the son of

11. ALEXANDER BRYAN 1,372; 1,520
m. ANNE BALDWIN daughter of Robert Bryan and Jane (Robinson)

He was born probably at Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, England, probably in 1602, and baptised in the parish church at that place 23 September, 1602.

He had come to the American colonies at a very early date, for on 2 February, 1638/9, he with other agents made the primary purchase of land from the Indian proprietors which was to constitute the town of Milford, Connecticut. The deed was taken by Mr. William Fowler, Edmund Tapp, Zachariah Whitman, and Alexander Bryan in trust for the body of planters. The consideration was six coats, ten blankets, one kettle, twelve hatchets, twelve hoes, two dozen knives and a dozen small mirrors.

On 20 November, 1639 Alexander Bryan was denominated a free planter. He was later known as Ensign Bryan.

Milford in its early days was quite a commercial center. The first merchants were Alexander Bryan and his son Richard, and William East. In 1640 Ensign Bryan sent a vessel to the Massachusetts Bay colony, as is recorded, laden with beaver, otter and other precious furs, and in return brought back such goods as were needed by the planters for their own use and for trade with the Indians. Bryan also had large landed interests. In 1646 there were entered on the Milford Records a description of the home lots and other lands of the settlers. At this time Alexander Bryan had a home-lot of thirty-four acres and twenty five poles bounded north on the home-lot of Timothy Baldwin, east and south on the highway and west on other lands. Lambert, in his History of the New Haven Colony shows that this lot was located on the north side of Broad street. The Taylor library now occupies the east end of the lot.

Bryan sent his vessels to England, to the Azores, Virginia & Nova Scotia. For many years his credit stood so high that his notes of hand passed as current in Boston as banknotes do anywhere in our own time.

In May, 1650 the town of Milford granted to Ensign Bryan and William East a piece of land twenty feet wide and [illegible] "three score foot Long" on which to build a warehouse. The Town Records show that Ensign Bryan had sometime prior to October, 1653, expended money on [illegible] the "landing place which he used for unloading his goods. On the seventh of that month he gave to the town any interest he might have in the dock, provided the town would keep it in repair for its perpetual use. The customs and excise for the town of Milford were lent to Bryan, 25 May, 1659, and also in the succeeding year, by the General Court for the New Haven Colony.

Alexander Bryan seems to have had a liberal education. He appeared sometimes as an attorney before the General Court, and among other things defended Deputy Governor Roger Ludlow in a slander case (see LUDLOW).

On 20 April, 1665 was held the first session of the General Assembly (of Connecticut) after the union of the Connecticut & New Haven colonies. At this session several of the prominent men of the old New Haven colony were nominated for the office of Assistant, among whom was "Mr. Alexander Bryant". On 10 May, 1666 and on 9 May of the following year he was appointed a Commissioner or Justice of the Peace for Milford. In 1668 he was elected an Assistant of the Colony, and was reelected ten times thereafter. He was a member of the war council in 1673, for the trouble with the Dutch, and also in 1675 and 1676 for the duration of King Philip's War.

Alexander Bryan made his will 24 April, 1679 and on 22 July following he made a codicil thereto. In the document he referred to himself as being weak of body. To his grandson Alexander Bryan he gave £500 in addition to what he had already received; the house and home lot where the testator then was living were to be considered a part of the £500. He gave him also the old warehouse and one-half of the pasture land owned by him in Milford. He gave likewise £20 to his cousin Thomas Oviatt, and the balance of the estate went to the son Richard.

There is no record of his death; he had deceased by 6 November, 1679, at which time the inventory was exhibited. He was probably buried at Milford, Connecticut.

Alexander Bryan married 1, Anne Baldwin of North Church, Hertfordshire, England; 2, Susanna, widow of William Whiting and of Samuel Fitch (see WHITING).

Issue (by first wife):

1. Richard, married Mary Pantry. See page 463.

NOTES

The parentage of Alexander Bryan was first reported by the late

Charles Candee Baldwin in his reprint Alexander Bryan of Milford, Connecticut. We quote page 10:

> Mr. Lambert, the historian of Milford, said that Alexander Bryan was from Ireland. Before I procured the deed following I had identified him as connected with the Baldwins of Buckinghamshire, England, and had accidentally found in the parish records of Aylesbury, in that shire, the entry of the baptism of Alexander....
> I believe there is no foundation whatever for the statement that he was from Ireland. The Baldwin wills, the Bryan deed, and the records at Aylesbury, identify him beyond all question.

The late Evelyn Briggs Baldwin of Washington, D. C. obtained abstracts of the wills of certain members of the family, and published them in The American Genealogist, vol. IX, page 89. This was followed by an article also published in the American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 90, by Howard J. Banker, Ph. D., which we shall have occasion to refer to frequently. Dr. Banker states:

> The evidence appears conclusive that Alexander Bryan was from this English community; the date of baptism is reasonable and there is no other Alexander of this place and period known with whom he could be confused. We shall find confirmatory evidence as we proceed that he was .. son of Thomas....

At page 249 of the Calendar of State Papers, American and West Indies, 1574 - 1660, appears the following:

> Alexander Bryan, 1637, Marshal for the Providence Island (off the coast of Darien, South America), Joint Stock Trading Co. --- under sentence of death for mutinous words against the late Governor.
> Pardoned.

It will be noted that this is two years before the advent of Alexander Bryan to Milford, and both of these men were engaged in maritime trade (if they were not the same man). No further trace is found of the Bryan who was pardoned, and we are convinced that this is the present Alexander Bryan.

Thomas R. Trowbridge Junior, in a History of the Ancient Maritime Interests of New Haven says:

> From this port Mr. Allerton (see ALLERTON) sent his vessels to various places --- to Massachusetts Bay, Virgin ia, Delaware Bay, and often times to 'the Barbados'. With the latter place, he had a very considerable interest, and as late as 1655, we find him in company with Ensigne (sic) Bryan, of Milford (the owner of the great Brig), complaining to the New Haven Court, that "by reason of bad biskit and flower they had had from James Roggers, at Milford, they have suffered much damage, and likewise the place lyes under reproach at Virgenia and Berbados...."

Document 23a in vol. 1 of Private Controversies, filed in the Connecticut State Library at Hartford, Connecticut, is the original of an award of arbitrators, James Richards and Alexander Bryan, regarding matters in dispute between William Ely and Richard Ely on one side and John Ely on the other. The document is dated 10 October 1666 and bears the signature of Alexander Bryan.

In October, 1663 three delegates from the New Netherlands were sent to treat with the Connecticut authorities at Hartford. One of the parties kept a diary from which the following is excerpted. The delegates came by water, and on 16 October, 1663 anchored off Stratford Point.

> 17th in the morning, before day-break, we again set sail, the wind ahead; however by force of rowing and tacking, we arrived at Milfort between 8 and 9 o'clock. We directly called upon Mr. Bryan, a merchant in that place, requesting him to procure us three horses to ride to Hartford, which he promised to do. He said that he proposed to go thither himself. Meanwhile, we visited the Magistrates, Mr. Treat and Mr. Fenn, but we did not find either of them at home. Mr. Treat visited us afterwards at the Tavern. After salutation, we communicated to him the cause of our arrival there and intended departure for Hartford, and requested him to take charge of our sloop, which we intended leaving in the harbor till we returned, so that some vagabonds, who, we were informed, were there roving about, might not cause us any damage. This he consented to. We recommended the same to young Mr. Bryan....
> 18th Thursday. Started from Newhaven at the rising of the sun, in company of Mr. Bryan, merchant at Milford, and Mr. Pell, arrived, we suppose, about 4 o'clock at Hartford.

In C. C. Baldwin's monograph, previously referred to, there is included an indenture made 20 July, 1663 by Alexander Bryan and his son Richard, conveying property in Wendover, Buckinghamshire to Edward Baldwin of Beaconsfield in the same shire. This deed was bought by the late Judge Baldwin, and was one of the discoveries leading to the determination of the ancestry of Alexander Bryan.

For other references see the NOTES hereinbefore quoted.

Alexander Bryan was the son of 12. THOMAS BRYAN 2,744; 3,040

m. FRANCES BOWLING daughter of Thomas Bowling and Elizabeth

He was born probably in Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, England, before 1564. His baptism no longer is of record.

He was a resident of Aylesbury, and was a draper.

Thomas Bryan died at Aylesbury in October, 1611, and is considered to be of record as having been buried there, 7 October, 1611. Since his will was dated 20 October, 1611, there is reasonably either an error in the entry in the parish register, or a misinterpretation of the ancient script. The will was proved 5 November, 1611.

Thomas Bryan married 1, before 1579 to a woman whose name has not been discovered. She had died before 13 June, 1586, on which date he married Frances Bowling, who was baptised at Aylesbury 13 March, 1569/70, and buried there 24 September, 1624.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Judith, birth date not determined, married a Springall, perhaps John Springall, of the parish of Great Marlow, Bucks, who made his will 7 December, 1624 (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 12 Clarke). He names his son Augustine, who was to receive £50, and daughter Edithe Cornishe, wife of John Cornishe, who received £5. "To her son John Cornishe, £5, which my brother Augustine Springall shall receive and dispose of for the bringing up of him in learning. To the poor of the parish of Great Marlowe, 40s. To son John, all lands and goods. Sole executor, the same. Overseers Mr. Robert Scroope Esq. and Augustine Springall of Henly. Witnesses Thos. Floyde, Oliver Murdocke and Richard Springall. Proved 2 February, 1624/5." This was taken from abstracts compiled by the late Evelyn B. Baldwin.

2. William, baptised at Aylesbury, 13 March, 1579/80; buried 11 August, 1581 at the same place.
3. Thomas, baptised at Aylesbury, 20 June, 1581; living in 1611.
4. Nathaniel, baptised at Aylesbury 21 October, 1584, buried 23 December, 1585.
5. Anne, baptised at Aylesbury, 20 July, 1586.

Issue (by second wife):

6. Robert, baptised at Aylesbury, 12 September, 1587, a resident of Aylesbury, Bucks. His will, dated 18 May, 1626, was proved 16 November, 1626 by the widow Dorothy as relict and executrix. He married at Stone, Bucks., 21 January, 1612, Dorothy Rye. Issue:

     - E. Dorathie, buried 3 October, 1657.
   - vi. Frances, baptised 12 March, 1626, buried 5 November, 1626.
7. Michael, baptised 2 March, 1588, probably died young.
8. Elizabeth, baptised 3 July, 1590, probably died young.
9. William, baptised 3 November, 1591; a resident of Aylesbury. He married 1, Ellen who was buried 8 January, 1623; 2, a wife whose name is not reported. Issue, by first wife:

12. Rebecca, baptised 3 September, 1596.
13. Faith, who probably married 2 November, 1619, Edward Woodbridge.
14. Amy, baptised 8 October, 1601, probably married 17 October, 1623, at Aston Clinton, Bucks., to Samuel Baldwin, son of Thomas and Rebecca Baldwin. See BALDWIN, RICHARD.

NOTES

We refer again to The American Genealogist, vol. X, p. 90, the article on The Bryans of Aylesbury, England, by Howard J. Banker, Ph. D. We quote:

> There would seem to have been more than one Thomas Bryan whose children were baptised during this period and unfortunately the name of the mother is not given at any time in the baptismal records, hence the Thomases cannot be distinguished except by a careful collocation of the dates. Later the writer (Dr. Banker) obtained a copy of the will of Thomas Bryan of Aylesbury who was undoubtedly the father of Alexander Bryan of Milford as he mentions his son Alexander and there is no Alexander son of Thomas mentioned in the Aylesbury registers. This document materially aids us in the interpretation of the church records.

At this point Dr. Banker gives an abstract of the will, which compares with that published by the late Evelyn B. Baldwin in The American Genealogist, vol. IX, p. 89. We have combined both abstracts in the following:

> The will of Thomas Bryan of "Aylesburie," Bucks., was dated 20 October, 1611 and proved 5 November, 1611 by the widow "Frances the relict sole executrix." The testator describes himself as "Thomas Bryan of Ailesburie in the county of Bucks, draper." He makes bequests to the poor of Aylesbury: 20s. To his daughter Judith Springall > he gives "that ffether bedd & boulster w^{ch} was her mother's," implying that she was a daughter by a former marriage. He then mentions "two sonnes" Austen and Alexander, neither of them yet twenty-one and apparently not married, who were to receive £30 each at 21 years. Daughters "Elizabeth, Rebecca, ffaith, Amye, ffrances, Marye, and Anne," not eighteen and single, to receive £10 each as they come to eighteen years of age. To son Thomas Bryan, 10s; son Robert Bryan £10; son William £10; "Mary henshawe my kinswoman", who received £10; lands in Walton field and Griffin Orchard "unto Fraunces my wief" whom he appoints "sole executrix" and makes "my brothers to be overseers of this my last will and testament". These, from the abstract reported by E. B. Baldwin, were Thomas Bowlinge and Henry Bowlinge. The witnesses were Robert Bell, William Clark, John Cockman and Robert Gullock (qu. ?Bullock). (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 100 Wood).

It seems evident from this document that Thomas Bryan married twice and had at least thirteen children, and very certainly more. We continue the abstracts given by E.B.Baldwin:

> Thomas Brian. (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 21 Fenner). Sentence pronounced 5 February, 1611/2 in a suit concerning the Will of Thomas Bryan, senior, of Aylesbury, co. Bucks., draper, between Frances Bryan, the relict and administratrix of the last Will of the deceased, declaring for the sanity of the said deceased and the validity of the said Will.

Dr. Banker then lists in his article the baptisms of all of the children of Thomas Bryan, or of a Thomas Bryan, and the burial entries for some of them. He comments on this large family by saying

> This is a formidable list of children but all the names (except Nathaniel, the Anne baptised in 1586, John baptised in 1595, John baptised in 1609 and Alice also baptised in 1609) are mentioned in the will of Thomas and it is seen that rejecting the others as of a different family does not render the problem easier of solution. The fact that at the baptism of Anne, Jan. 21, 1607.... the father is called "Thomas Bryan, Senr." would imply that there was another Thomas Bryan, presumably the son baptised June 20, 1581, and now old enough to be the father of a family. Only the last two in the above list could be regarded as possibly children of the son unless we assume a duplication of names in the two families, and we find no re> cords confirming a family for the younger Thomas nor are there any children of a Thomas Bryan recorded in the baptismal records after the death of Thomas in 1611 until 1646, whereas before that date they are frequent. The mention of Judith in the will of Thomas, as we have noticed, implies that she was the daughter of a deceased wife. Thomas, Robert and William are mentioned as though they were over twenty-one at the date of the will in 1611. Austen and Alexander are distinctly said to be not of age. The daughters named, other than Judith, are all stated to be less than eighteen and, with the exception of Elizabeth, . are evidently named in the order of birth. Faith does not appear in the parish registers. However, the only gap in the baptisms in which she could be reasonably placed occurs between Rebecca and Amy and puts her in the order as given in the will. Incredible as it seems we feel constrained to leave the list as it is until more conclusive evidence is available. Too great stress should not be laid on apparent inconsistencies or even discrepancies since ancient records are not only subject to intrinsic errors as well as incorrect interpretation,but the social conventions of the period are sometimes unusual.

For some reason Dr. Banker does not see fit to suggest that in the long list of children, there may have been several sets of twins, despite the lack of identical baptismal dates for them. This is easier for us to believe than the rather oblique suggestion that the "social conventions of the period are sometimes unusual"----which we infer to mean that some of the children were illegitimate. Continuing:

> From his will we know that Thomas Bryan was a dealer in cotton and woolen goods and that he belonged to the merchant class. He evidently had some means although it is difficult to decide whether he could be accounted a man of wealth....

An abstract of the will of Robert Bryan, son of Thomas and Frances (Bowling) Bryan was made for Evelyn B. Baldwin and is as follows:

> Robert Bryan of Aylesbury, Bucks., draper. Will dated 18 May 1626, proved 16 November, 1626, by the sole executrix named. "Whereas I stand seized to me and my heire for ever of and in all that messuage, situate in Ailesbury, near the markett place, now in the tenure of me and my brother Alexander Bryan and also of and in that Candlehouse with the appurtenances situate in Ailsbury in a lane there called Silver Lane and also in the tenure of me and of my brother, bequeath the same to my sonne Thomas Bryan and to his heir, and for want of such issue, then unto my four daughters Dorothy, Amy, Mary and Francis, their heires and assigns for ever. Provided allwaies that Dorothy my wife shall have the custody of my said sonne during his minority and shall enjoy the rents and profits towards the bringing up of my said sonne and daughters, until my said sonne shall have accomplished the age of 23 years. Whereas I also stand seized of and in that messuage, situate in Ailsbury, now in the occupation of William Cave, also of and in 9 acres of arrable land, lying in the comon feilds of Walton in the parish of Ailesbury, I bequeath the same to my four daughters Dorothy Bryan, Amy Bryan, Mary Bryan and Francis Bryan and their heirs forever. Provided nevertheless, the said Dorothy my now wife, have the profits of the same until Francis, my youngest daughter, shall accomplish her age of 15 years."

Residuary legatee and sole executrix, the wife Dorothy. Overseers, friends Mr. Nathaniel Weston, Edward Cockman and John Rye. Witnesses: Lewis Rye, John Keabell, Mary Stevens and Dorothie Bridges.
(Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 126 Hele).

THE BOWLING FAMILY OF AYLESBURY, BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

Thomas Bowling was a resident of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, and born about 1540; was buried at that place 6 January, 1596-1597. His ancestry has not been traced, and his connections have been fragmentarily given. His widow Elizabeth was buried in the same place 6 January, 1606/7, exactly ten years later to the day. Her maiden name is unknown. Issue:

1. Frances, baptised at Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, 13 March, 1569/70, buried at Aylesbury, 24 September, 1624; married Thomas Bryan. See page 471.
2. Thomas. Mentioned in the will of his brother-in-law, Thomas Bryan, in 1611.
3. Henry, mentioned in the will of his brother-in-law, Thomas Bryan, in 1611.

Perhaps others.

Thomas Bryan was undoubtedly the son of 13. ROBERT BRYAN

m. JOAN

5,488; 6,080

He was born about 1535, and probably in the vicinity of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, England. No record of baptism is found.

He was a resident of Aylesbury, Bucks., as early as 1565, and lived there the rest of his life. He died there and was buried 26 December, 1604. No will has been discovered.

He married 1, Joane, whose maiden name is not found, and who was buried at Aylesbury, 21 March, 1581; married 2, on 3 October, 1585 to Agnes Carpenter, who was buried also at Aylesbury, 3 March, 1624.

Issue (by first wife):

1. Thomas, married 1, ; 2, Frances Bowling. See p. 471.
2. Christopher, baptised 22 July, 1565, at Aylesbury, Bucks.
3. Jane, baptised 7 September, 1567.
4. Robert, baptised 13 March, 1569.
5. Susan, baptised 1 January, 1571.
6. Margaret, baptised 3 July, 1574.

By second wife:

7. Roger, baptised 22 May, 1589.

NOTES

Quoting again from Dr. Banker's article (see NOTES also under the succeeding generation):

> The writer (Dr. Banker) in 1910, had an opportunity for a brief visit to the old parish church in Aylesbury and obtained, as he believes, all the references to the Bryan name that are contained in these registers. The records date back to 1564 and are entered in well-bound parchment books which are in an excellent state of preservation. The name Bryan appears almost at the beginning, the first record of that name being that of the baptism of "Christopher Bryan the sonne of Robt. Bryan XXII July, 1565."

That relatively little more may be discovered of the Bryan family in Aylesbury will be deduced from the comment made in A History of Aylesbury, in the County of Buckingham, by Robert Gibbs. We refer to page 1:

> Although the town at one time enjoyed the privileges of a Corporation, could boast of its Chief local Magistrate, its Aldermen, Capital Burgesses, its Mansion House, Officers, and other paraphernalia, all have disappeared. Everything but a copy of the Act of Incorporation and the names of its first "wise men" has passed into oblivion, and it is to be lamented that not a single scrap has survived to tell us of the former sayings and doings relative to Aylesbury. Its archives, with its documents, are all lost to us for ever. There never was a more perfect annihilation....

In a return of the gentry of Bucks., made 12 Henry VI (1433), listed on page 337 of the foregoing work, no Bryans are given. Further:

> From the commencement to the end of the 16th century the entries (in the parish registers) are exceedingly regular and of great neatness, so much so as to lead to the supposition, indeed the certainty, that these pages are a transcript, and not the true and original register....
>
> In 1565, amongst the births registered were those of Bowling...(and others)....
>
> In the years 1566 to 1570 the names most prominent as inhabitants were (includes the name of Bryan among others)....

Charles C. Baldwin in Alexander Bryan of Milford, Connecticut, states at page 10:

> The name was an old one in the vicinity. In Hertfordshire, at the 23d and 25th Parliament (Edward 1st) Roger Bryan was a knight of the shire, and in 1277 lands were held in the parish of Bukhamough (sic) by William Brian and Robert Brian.

In our own investigations we found that a Robert Bryan married at Chalfont St. Giles, Bucks., 11 October, 1551 to Margareta Grove of that place. The name is a frequent one in this shire.

The ancestry of Robert Bryan is unknown.

She was born at Milford, Connecticut 15 February, 1649/50, & was baptised in the First church at that place 21 May, 1654.

9. ANNA BURNHAM 331
m. SAMUEL GAINES son of Henry Gaines and Joan (Partridge)

She was born probably at Hartford, Connecticut, about 1644.

She married at Hartford, 7 April, 1665 to Samuel Gaines, of Lynn, Massachusetts, and later resident of Hartford and Podunk, Connecticut. She was a member of the First Church at Hartford, and resided in that vicinity all of her life.

She is stated to have died there 29 November, 1722, and was presumably buried at Hartford. No will or administration of her estate is of record.

For descendants, see GAINES, #330.

NOTES

See Genealogical Records of Thomas Burnham, The Emigrant, by Roderick H. Burnham, published in 1869, second edition in 1884; and also The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 85, page 30. See also references given in NOTES under her father.

Anna Burnham was the daughter of

10. THOMAS BURNHAM 662
m. ANNA

He is supposed to have been born in the southern part of England, about 1617.

It seems that in emigrating to the North American colonies Thomas Burnham was motivated by a desire to improve his fortunes rather than by any religious scruples; from the evidence available this is certainly true. In the earliest records in which his name appears, he signs as Thomas Burnam. He first is of record as a bondsman for his servant Rushmore, "that he should carry good behavior." In his successful defense of Abigail Betts, accused of blasphemy, for saving her neck he was prohibited from further practice before the colonial Courts of the vicinity (see NOTES).

He then erected his garrison [illegible] at Potunke (Podunk), on lands he had purchased from the Indians. His first purchase of property in Hartford was on the corner of Main and State streets. He was constable in 1656 ~~he was constable~~, and appeared as a lawyer in many actions before the Colony Court. It is of interest to note that he was attorney for Jeremy Adams of Hartford (see ADAMS, JEREMY).

In 1659 he purchased of Tantonimo, the one-eyed Indian sachem of the Potunke tribe, a tract of land now covered by the towns of South Windsor and East Hartford, on which he resided, and a part of which was still in possession of his descendants in 1884. On 1 April, 1660, the Court, having heard the report of a Committee appointed for the purpose, "Came to a conclusion respecting Thomas Burnam, his contract with Tantonimo, it appears that part of the s^{d} Lands laid out to the s^{d} Burnam doth belong to Foxens' successors, by a gift from Foxens to his Allies," therefore ordered "that s^{d} Burnam shall enjoy only that land which Tantonimor (sic) can prove to be his property..." etc.The activities of the Court were designed to be prejudicial to Burnham wherever possible, because of his defense of Abigail Betts and subsequent attitude toward the Court (see NOTES following). By a deed dated in August, 1661, Arrament, Taquis and four other Indians, Foxens' successors or allies (claiming through Foxens the right and title to all the lands at Potunke, with their claim endorsed by the Court as above) made over to Thomas Burnham and his heirs all right and title to the lands in question, for themselves and their heirs.

These deeds are supplemented, and the title confirmed to Thomas Burnham senior (one of fifteen heirs), by the will of Joshua Uncas, Sachem, son of Uncas, Sachem of Monheag, claiming authority over all the River Tribes, 29 April, 1684.This will gave them all the land lying from the mountains within sight of Hartford, northward, to a pond called Shemipipic(Coventry), east to the Willimantucke river, south by the said river and west by Hartford bounds, etc. In 1666 Bartholomew Barnard and William Pitkin sued Thomas Burnham senior, claiming a part of the lands at Podunk as belonging to Jacob Mygatt, whose claim they had purchased. The Court ordered the land divided, but Burnham refused to surrender possession; & Burnham's wife with a company of men and women, drove the workmen of Barnard and Pitkin off from the land.

Thomas Burnham's house at Podunk was one of five on the east side of the Connecticut river to be fortified and garrisoned during the Indian war of 1675.

He died at Podunk, Connecticut 24 June, 1688, aged 71 years.

The inventory of his estate was taken 11 October, 1688, and was evaluated at £ 69, 6s 6d.

The Christian name of his wife was Anna, and in Genealogical Records of Thomas Burnham, by Roderick H. Burnham, it is reported that her maiden name was "?Wright". She is said to have been born about 1620, and died 5 August, 1703. We have seen no authority for this queried surname.

NOTES

The foregoing was taken chiefly from Genealogical Records of Thomas Burnham the Emigrant, by Roderick H. Burnham, first edition published in 1869 and the second in 1884. It may need further examination and possible revision.

Ernest Flagg in his excellent Genealogical Notes on the Founding of New England, 1926, has the following to say at page 69:

> There seem not to have been many practicing lawyers among the Puritans of New England during the seventeenth century.
>
> Only one, Thomas Burnham, appears among the members of this ancestry (that is, Mr. Flagg's) and the law was probably not his chief occupation. As has generally been the custom in new and partly civilized countries, judgment was rendered in most cases without the aid of lawyers....
> Thomas Burnham's name appears on the court record in a number of cases from 1649. At the court of March 5th, 1662-3, Jonathan Gilbert complained of him for "abusive carriage towards him in reference to Abigail Betts" and Burnham was required to give bond for £10, "that he will carry good behavior towards all persons in this Colony until Quarter Court in June next ensuing."

> Abigail Betts, wife of John Betts, who was a school teacher in Hartford, was accused of blasphemy for having said that "Christ was a bastard and that she could prove it by scripture." Thomas Burnham undertook her defense and saved her life.
>
> Although the colonies were nominally and legally under English law, they were in fact under Congregational Church Government. The author of the Burnham Family History says of this case: "The tacit introduction into the statutes of the State, of the Congregational form of government was undoubtedly the germ of our republican institutions. Against this change Thomas Burnham in this instance squarely set himself by demanding a return to the legal practice."

If so, then so much the worse for republican institutions! Thomas Burnham won the case, but he incurred the wrath of the theocracy, and the court passed the following sentence on him:

> At a Quarter Court held at Hartford, March 10, 1662, Thomas Burnham's Accusation in the Case of Jo: Betts; That y^e^ said Burnham's carriage therein hath been very Scandalous & Lascivious and pernitious; thereby interrupting the peace and tending to corrupt the manners of his Maties Subjects, the members of this Corporation. In reference to Thomas Burnham's Accusation, the Court Judge him guilty thereof, And doe Adiudge him to be committed to ye Custody of y^e^ Prisonkeeper, there to be secured during the pleasure of y^e^ Court. And further this Court doth disfranchise the said Burnham of y^e^ privilidge of his freedom in this Corporation. And likewise do prohibit him for future pleading any causes or cases in this Civil Court except his owne. And that when he shall be remitted out of Prison he shall give in Security to y^e^ Court or Secretary for his good behavior til the Quarter Court in June next
>
> Extracted out of ye Records > pr Dan^ll^ Clark, Sec^y^

From this sentence, two days later Burnham appealed to the General Court on the following grounds:

> 1. We humbly conceive y^t^ we had not exact Justice in that we were put to Ans: before we had an accuser y^t^ was legally stated.
>
> 2. We doe alsoe conceave there was noe presentment or accusation legally entered before we were called to answer.

3. We know of noe man that was bound to prosecute against us upon whom we might recov^{r} damadges in case of y^{e} plea was not made good.

4. There was nothing which by law established was matt^{r} of fact y^{t} was legally made good against us.

5. The penalty imposed doth not naturally arise from any established Law: which we are bound to observe. That which I propound hath reference only to y^{e} matt^{r} of Betts

The record of the General Court says, in answer:

The Accusation or complaint against Thomas Burnham in Bets his business

He proceeding herin was pernitious to y^{e} welfare of this Colony and obstruction in its owne nature to the current of Justice; the Evil effect thereof is obvious to y^{e} un-d^{r}standing of all men herein pursuing the wages and rewards of Iniquity. 2ly. His carriage herein was illegal, contrary to y^{e} foundations of Government in this Colony usurping and arrogating unto himself the Civil power established in the Civil Courts. (This refers to the fact that he interdicted the Court from Hanging Abigail Betts). 3ly. His carriage was Lascivious, Vile and abominable below and beyond all moderation of manhood; utterly unsuteable for his Sect and one in his condition to undertake, promote or effect. To y^{e} first: The test: of Ryler together with Burnham's test; Clearly Evince his und^{r}taking to save her neck, and his progress and indeavor therein Sam^{ll} Boreman's test: doth likewise clear it.

2ly. Out of y^{e} covetious frame of his heart forsaking his Call: and lawfull occasions sole (sold) himself for a reward to do wickedly. To yc 2d. His own Testimony sufficeth wherein it appears he actually seperated Husband and wife contrary to y^{e} Law of nature and rules of God's word, making himself the highest Judge in this o^{r} Israell. (The court evidently did not consider that hanging her would perform such an operation with more thoroughness).

To yc 3d. His carriage was Lascivious etc his whole progress for the Evidenceing the ground of this inhuman seperation clothed with garments spotted with the filthy pollution of a loose, wanton and unclean spirit.

On the back is endorsed:

The Court have considered the nature of Thomas Burnham's offence from what hath been psented to their consideration, and have come to this conclusion as is p^esented in y^e Accusation, And therefore Grant Burnham for liberty to make any further plea for his clear: if not the Court will proceed to a Judgment.

To this incompetent theocratic chicanery Thomas Burnham made answer. It was an answer which cowed the Court, as they dared not have any appeal taken to England. It was most of all, one of the few declarations made in those days by a courageous mind, by a little known man of whom we are truly proud:

Hon. Gentlemen, Finding in my trial conserning the Business about Betts many difficulties (Especially from some uncertainty of some things), I am now resolved to depend upon something sertain which if anything bee, I think it must bee the Honnorable word of the Court, concluding that your Worships will by noe means Resede therefrom. For if this Ancor fail me I shall cast out noe other of Human help whethersoever my Distressed Bark bee driven.

Gentlemen you know that after many of my importunate desires for an Indictment or Presentment -- call it either-- I producing the Law which allowed me that Libbertie your Worshipps Graunted me that, that I indeed must have an Indictment, it could not be denied mee.

Your Worshipps allsoe said: That The Paper which I had given in toe the Court (which myselfe and Jonathan Deming owned, I say: That that Paper was my Indictment and thereto I was to answer. That this was your honnorable Word (on which I now depend), all that heard itt are Witnesses, and your Worshipps I know will not deny. I was also told that I was my owne Accusor. Now Gentlemen, to this my Indictment. This is my Plea. That this Indictment is true in every part thereof, and the punishment due to the crime comprised therein, I confess is due to mee, and when it is inflicted on mee, I shall Justifie the proceedings of the Court.

Gentlemen: As to all the Evidence this I say: yo^r worshipps and all men know that the end of evidence is t. prove the Indictment true: I graunt the Indictment true, which is as much as all the evidences in this case can prove.

Gentlemen: Workes of Supererogation in Law are Grand Errors; the truth of the Indictment is all can be had, W[illegible] I graunt, nor can I be punished beyond the Guilt of the Crime specified in my Indictment.

Sirs, I conclude you will not Recede from your Word; if your Worshipps will draw Back yet here I remaine That That Paper is my Indictment, and to that here you have my answer.

To other Indictment about this, I will not answer. I crave Justice according to Law.

I shall say no more but that I desire a coppie of my indictment, and I Remane a Subject and Denason of England and

Hartford March the 10the 1662/3

Ernest Flagg's comment on this is

This strong and dignified document produced the desired effect. Its words are of a man who knows his rights and means to maintain them. Beneath the polite phraseology breathes firm defiance. Its tone contrasts strikingly with the violently abusive language of the Court. Of all things, the Court objected most to an appeal to England, and here was a man who would not only appeal, but surely make good his appeal. It was, therefore, necessary to back down. They were afraid to do otherwise, but did it as ungracefully as possible. Thomas Burnham was not sent to the prison-keep nor was Abigail Betts hanged. He was, however, deprived for a time of his citizenship; prevented from pleading in court except in his own cases and some land purchases he had made from an Indian sachem were declared void on the ground that the sachem did not own the land and it was not his to sell. Abigail Betts was made to walk to the scaffold and stand there for a while with a rope around her neck and here the matter ended.

Upon Thomas Burnham's decease there was difficulty in settling the estate, as is reported from Manwaring's Hartford, Connecticut Probate Records, vol. I, pp. 418-419:

To the Honourd Court of Assistants now sitting in Hartford: Whereas the Last will & Testament of Mr. Thomas Burnham deceased Is by som (as is supposed suriptissous .... or means Taken or removed out of ye Custody of ye Relict & Executrix of said Will, by which Removal or Concealment of said Will ye Just & Legall Settlement of ye Estate of ye Deceased According to his said Will hath been obstructed, therefore that Justice & Right may be Done And ye said Will proved according to Law, I Humbly crave yt ye several psons be sumoned to Appear att This Court to

to be Examined Concerning said Will uppon there Oath.

To the Marshall, to serve upon Mrs. Burnam.

Testimony given in court was as follows:

At a Special Court held at Hartford, June 26, 1690.

Upon the complaint of Wm Man, that his wives father, Thomas Burnam's will and Testament was neglected to be exhibited in court, and the inventory of his Estate, that thereby the said Man was like to be Disepposeced of what his father gave his wife, the Governor & Assistants appoynted the court this day to meet and to setle this matter, the persons being warned & appearing before the court, the court demanded the will; the sons being present sayd they knew not where the will was nor could not say anything about it & the Marshall informed the court that Ann Burnam says she had the will but now it is removed & she doth not know where it is, she informed Mr Wm pitkin this day. Wm Man Requesting that something might be done that he might not lóose what was given him by his wives father: therefore the court put it upon those who were the witnesses of the sayd Tho: Burnam's will to give in their Testimony in the case which they accordingly did, which the court approves of, and orders it to be recorded as the last will & Testament of Thomas Burnam, & so to be acted upon unless the originall will be produced in court, to the Court Septr next: the inventory of his Estate which was formerly taken, An Burnam, the relict, refusing to take her oath to it & there being no other nor better that can be come at now then what was formerly taken that is now accepted & ordered to be recorded.

The Testimony of Caleb Stanley, aged about forty-seven years, is as followeth: That some short time before the death of Thomas Burnam, Senior, of Hartford, sayd Burnam sent for Coll. John Allyn & myself to speak with us at his dwelling house at podunck, & upon our visiting him there he desired Coll. Allyn to write his Last will & Testament, which he did write according to his desire, also the sayd Burnam did signe, seale & declare the sayd writing to be his last will & Testament, in Coll. Allyn's & my presence, unto which we were witnesses, & sayd Thomas Burnam, senr, did give his will unto his wife, Ann burnam, to keep untill his death, that soe it might be fulfilled. In which forementioned will I doe remember he gave his daughter, Rebeckah Burnam, his dwelling house & Barn & all other his outhouseing Scituate upon his Home Lott, & allso his Home Lott as it was then fenced in, & allso his pasture lott & ortyard (orchard) as they were ffenced in, & under his improvement at the making of the sayd will. Furder, he gave her all his grass land in the Meadow as it lay in severall parcells at podunck, all which parcells of Land with the houseing his daughter Rebeckah was to possess at the decease of her mother, Ann Burnam, to be to her & her heirs forever, provided sayd Rebeckah had either a child or children to Inherit the say^{d} lands. Allso the say^{d} Tho: Burnam did order in his will that some of his sons at Poduncк should cover the Barn given to his daughter, Rebeckah, with shingles, upon their own cost, or otherwise he gave to his executrix, Ann Burnam, Liberty to sell some land in podunck meadow, to cover the say^{d} Barn. I doe allso remember the say^{d} Thomas Burnam did give the lands given unto his daughter, to some of her brethren, after her decease, if she dyed not having a child born of her to inherit the same, furder sayd Thomas Burnam gave in his will the improvement of all his housеing & land & all his other Estate to his wife during her life, & the free dispose of all his moveable Estate not otherwise given to his children at her decease: Allso he gave his plowing land in podunck Meadow & divided it between his Three sons, Thomas, John and Samuel Burnam, & gave a parcell of land eastward of Edward King's land, near poduncke brooke or River, unto W^{m} Morten his wife; allso he gave all that parcel of Land in the possession of Samuel gaines, that he bought of Richard Rizley, unto the wife of the say^{d} Samuel Gaynes, during her life, & afterwards unto one of her sons, & gave unto Thomas Gaynes, his Grandson, all his right in that land he had in partnership with Mr. Lord, at the saw-mill; he did allso give unto his daughter Morten, Ten pounds in moveable estate, & unto his daughter, Moorecocke, Ten pounds in moveable estate, & as for his sons W^{m} & Richard Burnam, he gave them some small legacies in his will, but doe not perticularly remember what they were. ferder, I doe perfectly remember that say^{d} Thomas Burnham did verbally declare unto Coll. Allyn & myself that all his children should have equall Liberty & Improvement of all the Highways belonging to any part of his Lands, as they should afterwards have occasion for the same, without any disturbance, as he hath layd them out before making of his last will & Testament, but cannot Testify whither this last perticular about say^{d} Highways was written in his will, all which is as far as I can at present remember.

Capt. Caleb Stanly sayth the sum of what is above written, & perticularly what is written concerning that which respects Rebeckah, now the wife of W^{m} Man, is to his certain knowledge the truth.

She was born about 1615, probably in England, although the location has not been determined.

She was with her father at Providence, Rhode Island, as early as 1640, and resided there after her marriage to Henry Ruddock, for a considerable number of years. She was living there in 1663.

In her later years she was a resident of Oyster Bay, New York, where she died between 26 August, 1672 and 25 January, 1673. She was probably buried at Oyster Bay. No will or administration of her effects is of record.

13. WILLIAM BURROWES 7,810
m.

He was born probably in England, about 1590.

William Burrowes may be identified with one of that name who with Hugh Burrowes was listed in 1638 as a resident of the Barbados, and who shortly afterwards disappears from that colony. He is recorded as a resident of Providence, R I., in 1640, when on 27 July of that year he was one of the purchasers of land within that settlement. He was therefore one of the earliest settlers. He was one of the thirty nine subscribers to the agreement containing provisions for a form of town government. He signed the oath of allegiance 19 January, 1645/6, and was a member of the Grand Jury 25 December, 1648; and was rated at an evaluation of 13s 4d, 2 September, 1650.

During the next decade he is mentioned infrequently in the records. He seems to have met with financial reverses, for on 27 December, 1660 the town takes "his condition" into consideration, and on 4 February, 1660/1 they voted to take care of him. The same notation appears on the town records for 20 September, 1662. On 23 December, 1663 the town demanded 15s of Henry Reddocke, (so called), his son-in-law, which was due to William Burrowes.

Destitute and dependant upon the charity of others, his was a sad old age. As no mention of his wife occurs in the records, she had probably died very early, or even before William Burrowes emigrated to Providence. He died after 23 December 1663 and before 27 April, 1664 at Providence. He was buried probably at the latter place.

The name of his wife is unknown.

Issue:

1. Mabel, married Henry Ruddock (Reddough). See page 497.

NOTES

The foregoing has been taken from the MacDonough-Hackstaff Genealogy, by Rodney MacDonough, p. 426; and from Early Inhabitants of the Barbados, by Samuel Briggs, as given in The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. 39, p. 133.

The ancestry of William Burrowes is unknown.

SEVERSMITH-SMITH

Page 29, No. 3, Epenetus Smith who married Temperance Ketcham. Add the: his will, dated 15 March, 1836, was proved 28 November, 1839 at Riverhead, New York, Liber H, p. 158, File 3053; the petition was filed 4 October, 1839. It mentions a son: vii. Giles W., and also the children of son George E. Smith, deceased. Heirs whose definite connections remain to be established were Julia Ann Smith, Warren P. Smith, Edmund R. Smith, Maria L. Smith, Caroline A. Smith, Robert W. Smith, George N. Smith and Elizabeth P. Smith. Some of these were probably children of George E. Smith.

Page 37, No. iii. Elizabeth, stated to have been born 27 September, 1768, should read: born 27 September, 1718. She was therefore the eldest recorded child, not the third.

From his rights as one of the tenants-in-common in all undivided town lands, Robert Akerly drew in both the East and West Divisions (now called "Great Division" and "Little Division") back of Fireplace (the present village of Brookhaven)and Bellport, "between Winthrop's Patent and Connecticut River"--the now so-called Carman's River. Mr. Shaw states that the correct name of the latter is Connecticut River, as given by W. W. Tooker's Indian Place Names on Long Island. He is also of the opinion that the name of Robert Akerly appears in every drawing in every division made by the town, the last being that of 1774 on the Great South Beach (4 July).

Pages 58, 59, 60. The assessment list was actually dated 1701, not 1704 For overseer of fences read fenceviewers. Southold was a part of the Colony of New Haven at this time, and not of Connecticut (Hartford). The charter of 1662 united the two colonies in 1662, after Robert Akerly had left Southold.

BRASS (VAN WESEL and VAN DUISBURG)

In the American Genealogist for January, 1944, vol. XX, No. 3, and in subsequent issues, Mr. William J. Hoffman, F. G. B. S., has published information relating to this family under the title "The Founders of the Bras(s), Brasser, Bresser, Bries and Brazier Families in America." Comparison of this article with the information given in the present volume shows a substantial accord between Mr. Hoffman and the writer, and we are indebted to the former for additional information given herewith. We also acknowledge with appreciation data from Mr. Arthur S. Wardwell.

P. 343. Line 12 from bottom: for Lammetje, read Lummetje.

P. 344. No. 3. Adam should be the eldest son.

No. 5. The children of Pieter and Elizabeth (Cornelius) Brass included

i. Peter, a resident of Oyster Bay, New York in 1790.
ii. Nathaniel, married 3 April, 1769, Sarah Hyde; in 1790 a resident of North Hempstead, New York.
iii. Phoebe, married 13 August, 1770, Gabriel van Cott.
iv. Clarina Lucina, married 11 June, 1772, William Hyde.
v. Rebecca, married 6 October, 1776, Benjamin Southard.
vi. Sarah, married 19 November, 1778, Silas Deuel. Residents of Dutchess County, New York.
vii. Joseph, married 8 September, 1785, Keziah Seaman.

The children of Clarina Lucina and William Hyde are given as (HYDE): John Bennett, Rebecca (married John Furman Tuthill), Henry, Hannah, Richard, William, Elizabeth, Peter, David, Maria, Bennett and Furman.

P. 345. Pieter Hendrickszen Brass, No. 644, appears on the tax list of Amersfoort (Flatlands) of 1675 and 1676, and is given as 1 poll, and 1 horse. In 1683 there is reported under his name 1 man, 3 cows, 1 horse, 1 of 2 years and a small estate. In 1695 he was one of "22 Dutchmen" who guaranteed quarterly contributions to the Presbyterian church at Jamaica, when there was not as yet a Dutch Reformed church (Onderdonck, History of the Dutch Church at Jamaica, p. 5). In 1694 he still contributed to the minister's salary in Kings county. On 13 February, 1714 with Hendrick Hendrickse and others he was a grantee named in a conveyance from Walter Brysen (Recorded 24 March, 1714, Queens County, Liber C, p. 147); and he was a grantor, 9 February, 1719 with his wife, to their son Hendrick of Jamaica.

P. 346. Under No. 2. Hendrick. Add that he was a soldier in Capt. Wolsey's Company in 1715. He was a blacksmith.

No. 3. Adam was baptised at New Utrecht, recorded at Flatbush.

Mr. Hoffman lists an additional child for Pieter Hendrickszen and Catharina (Jans) Bras: No. 6. Grietje, "bapt. not found, but Grietie Bras married Simon Locysie, elder of Jamaica Church. In 1734 this couple have a daughter Sara bapt. in Jam." For a discussion of this connection, see under LOSEE.

P. 347. The following is taken from Mr. Hoffman's article, abridged to avoid duplication of information, and with comments interpolated as found to be necessary:

The only other Hendrick Pietersz (this refers to Hendrick Pietersz en, No. 1288, p. 347) found was called "from Wesel," that is from the city of Wesel in Germany, near the Dutch frontier, the town from which Pieter Minuit came. The records relative to this Hendrick Pietersz from Wesel all prove beyond a doubt that he is the ancestor of the Bras family.

It would seem that Hendrick Pieters van Wesel was also known by the suffix "van Duisburg." Both suffixes were an indication of place-origin and not a surname. Duisburg is the name of a German city not far from Wesel and Hendrick's birthplace may have been in a neighborhood located near both cities. The Dutch word duizend (or duysent in old Dutch) is the equivalent of thousand in English and the Dutch scribes apparently indicated Duisburg at times by the variation "1000 bergen" (pronounced duysentbergen), a play on words.

The reason why Mr. Hoffman concludes that Hendrick Pieters van Wesel was also indicated at times with the suffix "van Duisburg" (and variations) is the fact that the latter had a son Evert, which will be evident from the records quoted. There was a child Evert baptised in the New Amsterdam Dutch Reformed ch. on 16 May, 1644 as a son of Hendrik van Dussenburg; the sponsors were Abraham Pietersz, molenaer, Hendrick Westercamp, backer (baker) and Tryntje Abrahams. The year of the child's baptism just fits the probable age of Evert, the son of Hendrick Pieterszen van Wesel, and furthermore occurs during an interval when no baptisms of children of Hendrick Pietersz have been recorded. Another child named Aeltie was baptised in New Amsterdam 7 April, 1647. In this instance the father's name was given as Hendrick van Duisberg alias 1000 berg; the sponsors were Herman Smeeman, Nicolaes backer and Claesje Cornelis.

As Hendrick Pieters van Wesel's wife was named Geertje Everts, which follows from other baptismal entries, it was natural that a son would be called Evert. The identification is furthermore supported by the fact that Hendrik Pietersen van 1000 bergen was sponsor at the baptism of Neeltje the daughter of Arent Evertsen 26 June, 1645 at New Amsterdam. The father of the child was in all probability a brother of Hendrick Pieterszen's wife Geertje Everts, while the entry establishes the fact that Hendrick van Duisburg's patronymic was really "Pietersz", the same as that of Hendrick Pietersz van Wesel. From the foregoing Mr. Hoffman comes to the opinion that there cannot be any doubt that Hendrick Pietersz van Wesel and Hendrick Pietersz van Duisburg (1000 bergen) are one and the same person, "especially when one considers the small number of inhabitants of New Amsterdam at that early date, which limits the probable number of different individuals each with the same first name and patronymic." With this conclusion the present writer concurs.

In a footnote (p. 143, American Genealogist, vol. XX) Mr. Hoffman disposes of the inevitable misidentification of the foregoing with the ancestor of the Dusenbury family, Hendrick Hendricksen van Doesburg:

> An attempt has been made to identify Hendrick (Pietersz) van Duisburg (1000 bergen) with Hendrick Hendricksz van Doesburg. Here again the supposition is untenable for two different patronymics (Hendricksz and Pietersz) prove that such is not the case, and again a Hollander would never indicate Doesburg by 1000 bergen. An additional convincing argument is that Evert shown as a son of Hendrick Hendricksz van Doesburg (Dusenbury Family, p. 1) was born before the marriage of the latter!

The records contain the following information concerning Hendrick Pieterszen van Wesel. He was in New Amsterdam among the early settlers for 12 August, 1638 Hendrick Pieterszen van Wesel appeared in Court (Colonial MSS. XIV: 63). He was a master mason by trade (ibid., XIV: 9, 28). 3 February, 1640 he conveyed to Adriaen Pieterszen from Alcmaer, a plantation near the reed valley, hard by Sapponican, on the Island of Manhattan (ibid. XIV, 12). A receipt dated 20 July, 1640 shows that he hired two imported milch cows from the West India Company (ibid., XIV, 14). On 19 October, 1645 land belonging to Hendrick Pietersz is mentioned on the East River, opposite Hog's Island (Newtown).

He removed, probably at an early date, to Long Island. He received a grant there 7 April, 1664 of 25 morgen at Midwout, the property later sold by his sons. The following entries are found on the tax list of Amersfoort (Flatlands), in which towns are listed also the entries relative to the sons:

1675: Hendrick Pietersse, 1 poll, 3 horses, 4 cows, 3 ditto of 3 years, 2 ditto of 2 years, 1 hog, 19 morgen of land and valley.

1676: Hendrick Pieterse, 1 poll, 3 horses, 2 oxen, 5 cows, 1 ditto of 1 year, 1 hog, 19 morgen of land and valley.

1683: Hendrick Pieters, 1 man, 1 horse, 1 ox, 4 cows, 1 of 2 yrs, 1 of 1 year, and 12 morgen of land.

It is not certain that this last entry refers to the same person. If so, he had then disposed of some of his holdings. Among those taxed for the minister's salary at Amersfoort on 13 January, 1657, was Hendrick Pietersen (Colonial MSS, XIV: 379).

Reverting to the listing of children on page 347, Mr. Hoffman in line with the foregoing, makes Evert the second child, Aeltje (baptised in the Dutch church in New Amsterdam 7 April, 1647), the third child, Adam the fourth, Harman (or Herman) the fifth, and Gerrit the sixth and last child by the wife Geertje Everts.

At this point it becomes necessary to discuss the circumstances relating to the varying patronymics occurring in this family, and which are mentioned in some detail on pages 353 and those following. The present writer offered a tentative solution, but it is very evident that the explanation offered by Mr. Hoffman has solved the problem. On page 353 a conveyance is quoted wherein Peter Hendrickse of Flatbush and his brothers deed land to Garret Coerte. A correction in the typescript should be made; for Harret Hendrickse Brissa, read Garret Hendrickse Brissa. For convenience, and with Mr. Hoffman's permission, we quote from the American Genealogist, vol. XX (1944), pp. 145+:

"The names of the grantors, as given above, certainly give a rather strange impression. The spelling in the body of the instrument differs somewhat from that at the beginning and the signatures differ again from these. In a slightly different order, the purpose of which will become apparent, I (Mr. Hoffman) here give the names as they appear in the three different instances in the conveyance.

Head of document	Body of document	Signatures
Peter Hendrickse	Peter Hendrickson	Peter Hendrickse
Evert Hendrickson	Evert Hendrickson	Evert Hendrickse
Harmen Hendrickse Brisse	Harmen Hendrickson	Harmen Hendrickse
Garrett Hendrickse Brissa	Garrett Hendrickson Brissa	Garret Brissa
Brinasse Hendrickson Brist	Hendrickson Bristes	Hendrickse Brisses
Rutt Brimasson	Rutt Brimasson	Rutt Brimasen
Walter Brimsey	Walter Brimasse	Walter Brimasen
William Brimasson	William Brimasse	William Brimes

It becomes evident from this arrangement that we have here two groups of persons, five of these having the patronymic Hendrickse, with or without a surname Brisse (and variations), and three brothers with a patronymic Brimassen, yet all are called brothers. I (Mr. Hoffman) consulted only the certified copy of the conveyance and I am not certain that the names in the original document have been copied correctly. I believe that Brimasse should read Brunosse, which is an error easily made....

In my opinion the solution is that the four first named are all children of Hendrick Pietersz by his wife Geertje Everts; three "of the other children designated as "brothers" of the above, in all probability children of a man named Bruno (Bruyn) ----- whose widow (Geertje Rutgers) married Hendrick Pietersz as his second wife, thereby combining the two families. And finally the son Bruyn (Bruno) Hendricksz Brisse was the son of Hendrick Pietersz by his second wife, the widow of Bruno (Bruyn) ------, to which son he gave the Christian name of his wife's first husband. It was a common custom with the Dutch when contracting a second marriage with a widower or widow to name the first child of this union for the deceased wife or husband of the new life-partner, a rather delicate gesture. Bruyn Hendricksz' descendants also assumed the surname Bresser and Bras. Note also that Bruyn Hendricksz only used his first name Bruno (Bruyn, although garbled in spelling) at the beginning of the conveyance, in the other two instances he used Hendrickse, a patronymic therefore, without the first name. Mrs. (Josephine C.) Frost who published this record put a comma in the wrong place and made the meaning of two of the names rather unintelligible. I decided to consult the certified copy of the original. In this copy the comma did not appear."

Mr. Hoffman therefore makes Bruyn or Bruno Hendrickszen a son of Hendrick Pieterszen by a second wife, widow of one Bruyn -------, and he states in a footnote on page 147 of the American Genealogist as referred to, that she was possibly named Geertje Rutgers. The remaining children listed by this writer (Rutt, Wouter and Willem) are considered to have been step-sons of Hendrick Pieterszen, and the children of Bruyn -------- by the presumed Geertje Rutgers.

In a correspondence between Mr. Hoffman and the present writer, the former stated in a letter dated 1 October, 1944:

> Is there any supporting evidence? Walter Brunoos married at N. Y. in 1683 as a y. m. from N. A. which means that he was a native of that town. Do we find a baptism registered which applies to him? We do, for on Jan. 10, 1655 Walter son of Bruin Willems was baptized at N. A. This makes the child of a suitable age to marry in 1683. Walter and certainly Bruin were not very common names and I believe that hardly anyone would dispute the fact that this baptism refers to the bridegroom of 1683. Consequently what better evidence is necessary than this to establish the fact that the father of the three "brothers" was Bruin Willems. An added proof is the fact that there was also a son Willem which we could reasonably expect according to the Dutch custom of naming sons for their paternal and maternal grandfathers respectively.
> We now advance a step further. From the above evidence it must follow that Hendrick Pietersz had sons (brothers of his own children) whose father's name was Bruin Willemsz. This would only be possible by having married their mother. That this is the case is still further substantiated by the fact that he named his son Bruin following a Dutch custom, namely naming a son after the husband whose widow he had married. Even if the surname Brass derived from Bruins, to which supposition I would never subscribe, the fact remains that Henricks family of sons was made up of 5 children with the patronymic Hendrick and three with Brunoosz.

The remaining question is who was the mother of these children, in other words the second wife of Hendrick Pietersz. Her name was not given at the baptism of her son Walter in 1655. It was not until shortly after that date as will become evident by consulting the N. A. church records, that the mother's name was added to the baptismal entries; prior to that time these only appeared sporadically. From the Brkl. (Brooklyn) church membership list we learn that her given name was Geertje (incidentally the same given name as Hendrick's first wife Geertje Everts) for under her name, mentioned as Hendrick Pietersz's wife, has been added that she died in 1683, so this must refer to his second wife. This fact, that that was her given name, is again substantiated by the fact that all her own children have their oldest daughter named Geertje; these children would hardly have been named after the deceased wife of their step-grandfather when their own grandmother was still living. Is there any indication what her patronymic may have been? She would fit in perfectly for we know that Bruin and Geertje had a son Rutger, named apparently for his maternal grandfather. Due to Geertje Rutger's death in 1683 (see ante) the baptism of Hendrick in 1682 was with the exception of Jan (who was named for his maternal grandfather) the only grandchild for whom she could act as sponsor, and naturally enough it was for a child called Hendrick, her husband's name, and together with a child of Hendrick by his first wife. This is again corroborating evidence.

What do we know about Bruin and his children? When Rutger Brunosz married he is indicated as y. m. from Gelderland, a Province of the Netherlands; in other words he was born there. When taking the oath of allegiance in 1687 he stated that he had been in New Netherland 34 years; in other words he had arrived here in abt. (about) 1653. We can now fill in the rest of the picture. In abt. 1653 Bruin Willemsz came to N. A. (New Amsterdam) with his wife and apparently two children (Willem would have preceded Walter being named for his maternal grandfather) Rutger and Willem. Two years after his arrival a son Walter was born to them in N. A. He died and his wife married as her second husband Hendrick Pietersz and had by him a son Bruyn named for her first husband.... These

How Brass came to be the family name? I would not consider a derivative from Bruyn; a change of the vowel would hardly take place. I have seen examples of this name being changed to Bruyns, Braun, de Bruyn, even Bruining; but would not, I repeat, consider a change to Brass.... There was a rather well known Dutch family named Brasser, so it is a Dutch name. .....offhand I do not know the derivation of Brasser.

P. 347 (continued)
Add that Harman was a resident of New Amersfoort (Flatlands) in 1675 but not in 1676 and 1683. He became a member of the Hackensack church 29 July, 1686; was elder 4 May, 1699 and served until 1710. The inventory of his estate was made 16 March, 1713/4, not 1714/5. He married Anna Wynaert, daughter of Cornelis Wynaert and his wife Catharina Pelle.

P. 348. iv. Geertje married Abraham Godmis. Strike out all references to Abraham Barsio. Between Geertje and the Lucas reported there was another Lucas baptised at Hackensack, 14 September, 1701, sponsors being Andries Tiebout and Maritie his wife. This Lucas died young.

P. 349. Strike out vii. Hendrick, born about 1710, as of this connection. This assignment was based on misinformation received. Hendrick Brass, born about 1710, may well have been the son of Lucas Bras and his wife Lena Rycken.
5. Bruyn was a member of the church at New Amersfoort, but removed to Esopus (Kingston) in July of 1681 with a certificate. Of his children, Catharina married at Kingston in 1711 to Jacob Ploeg; Susanna married at Kingston in 1735 to Jan Katoo; Saraatje married in 1722 to Theunis Ploeg. There was another daughter: Ariaantje, baptised at Kingston 3 September, 1704, sponsors Pieter Oosterhout and Heyltje Schut. She married at Kingston, New York in 1734 to Jan Salsberg.

P. 350. Wouter married Neeltje, daughter of Herpert Claes van Elslant.
No. 8. Evert is stated to have been baptised in the Dutch church in Manhattan 16 May, 1644, sponsors Abraham Pietersz, molenaer, Hendrick Westercam, backer, and Tryntje Abrahams. It should be noted that he was 42 years of age at the birth of his first child.

P. 352. Mr. Hoffman considers Gerrit Brass who married Helena Post, to have been son of Gerrit Roos and Catharina Hardenbroeck. At the present time, however, we have allowed our own construction of this line to stand. The reader is referred to Mr. Hoffman's article for further details.

BREWSTER

P. 371. Mr. Donald L. Jacobus has called our attention to the fact that Mr. John Chauncey of Stratford, Connecticut married 1 January, 1721/2 to Miss Eunice Bruster of Brook Haven (Stratford Land Records, 2: 480). The question is raised as to whether this Eunice may not be identified with iii Eunice (see bottom of page), who is given as having married Daniel Dayton. It is considered that the identity is probable. John Chauncy was born 7 November, 1695, son of the Rev. Charles Chauncy.

BRILL

P. 412. Mr. Milton Rubincam of Washington, D. C., has given us a reference to a member of the Brill family, which may well be related to the present connection: Anna Gerdrut Brill was born 31 August, 1692 and died 9 November, 1764. She married 27 May, 1711 to Johann Paul Rübecamm, who was born 7 January, 1679 at Wanfried, Hessen-Rheinfeld (now part of Hessen-Nassau), and died 24 December, 1738 at Eschwege, Hessen-Rheinfeld. He was the elder son of Johann Georg Rübecamm, Bürgermeister of Wanfried by his wife Elizabeth Rexrodt.

P. 414. Under B. Helena, who married Michael Rogers of Fishkill: strike out the word at after a. Phoebe, baptised 20 October, 1774.

BRYAN

P. 452. No. 32 Ruth, daughter of Epenetus and Elizabeth (Stratton)Bry[illegible], is, as Mr. Donald L. Jacobus has indicated, undoubtedly the one of that name who was baptised in the First church at Huntington, New York, 5 February, 1748/9. See also P. 462, last paragraph.
